Copenhagen, Nov. 21.—Reports from several sources in Germany bear out the assumption that, taking advantage of the situation in Russia, the German government is making heavy transfers of troops from the Russian front. Only part of them appear to be going to Italy, where the front is too narrow to permit the use of great masses, and a blow by Von Hindenburg at some other point in the way of diversion, may perhaps be expected.

Craft Goes to Bottom as Result of Collision in War Zone, Admiral Sims Reports—Only Barest Details Are Received.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Sinking of the American destroyer Chauncey in collision in the war zone early Monday morning with a probable loss of 21 lives was announced by the navy department.

No further details were given in a brief report to the department from Vice-Admiral Sims. The Chauncey was a small, old-type boat of only 420 tons.

Daniels Issues Statement.

Secretary Daniels made this statement:

"The Chauncey, a small American destroyer on patrol duty in foreign waters, was sunk in a collision early Monday morning. First dispatches indicate that 21 lives were lost. Further information will be made public when full reports are received.

"The Chauncey was one of the old-type destroyers completed in 1902. Her displacement was 420 tons and her complement was 91 officers and men."

Was Coast Torpedo Vessel.

For several years before the war the Chauncey was used only in coast defense work and was classified as a coast torpedo vessel. She was built at Philadelphia.

GERMAN SPIES INCITE MEXICO

Cause Publication of Falsehood That Countrymen Have Been Impressed for U. S. Army.

Mexico City, Nov. 21.—Despite President Carranza's declaration to a committee from the chamber of deputies that Mexican citizens are not in the American armies, El Democrata asserts that 2,000 Mexicans have been drafted in Texas and California, and they are now in France against their will. El Universal answering the charge, says that the director of El Democrata is a congressman and asks why he did not have the courage to make this statement before the Mexican chamber. It is intimated that German propaganda is behind the statement printed by El Democrata.

American Ambassador Fletcher has issued a statement tending to correct false impressions made public by certain newspapers in Mexico.

ARMY NEEDED TO BAR ALIENS

President Wilson's Order Affects 120,000 Persons in New York District Alone.

New York, Nov. 21.—More than 120,000 persons in the metropolitan district will be affected by President Wilson's proclamation, barring all male Germans from the vicinity of all places of military importance to the government, according to estimates made by Thomas D. McCarthy, United States marshal. The task of guarding New York city's many miles of water front may be taken out of the marshal's control and turned over to the war department. About 2,000 soldiers would be required for this work.

United States troops, fully armed, raided the Hoboken water front at night and seized 200 supposed aliens.

RESTAURANTS AT FOOD CITY WARNED

BATTLE CREEK EATING PLACES MUST CLEAN UP OR LOSE SOLDIER TRADE.

SEVERAL FOUND UNSANITARY

State Food Commissioner Made Survey of Cafes At Request of Camp Custer Officials.

Lansing—Restaurants and other eating establishments in Battle Creek must either clean up or lose the soldier patronage from Camp Custer.

Officials in charge of the camp determined to protect the men from food served under insanitary conditions.

At the request of officials of the camp, the State Dairy and Food Commissioner has been making a sanitary survey of all eating places in Battle Creek, and as a result of the investigation, a number of proprietors will be asked to appear in court unless they give immediate heed to Commissioner Woodworth's warning to clean up at once.

Conditions in some of the places are extremely detrimaltal to health, according to the report prepared by the dairy and food department.

In one place in Battle Creek, according to the inspector's report, the dishes were washed in the same water used by the employes to clean their hands.

Battle Creek is not the only city in Michigan, however, where the cafes, restaurants and hotels will be inspected by officials of the dairy and food department. Commissioner Woodworth plans to start a state wide crusade along this line.

CUSTER "VETS" HELP RECRUITS

New Arrivals Receiving Valuable Aid From First Two Increments.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Michigan's first two increments of selected men, who have been in camp for periods of time varying from two and one-half months to the same number of weeks, are playing an important part in giving the third contingent, its first lessons in the inside workings of military life.

Officially all instructions come from the officers but the latter are freely admitting the value of the knowledge gained by the older men and say they will depend largely on this experience as an aid to them in getting the new arrivals started correctly.

The very mingling of the two classes will have a salutary effect on the rookies, and the seasoned men, proud of their knowledge, will be anxious to aid as much as possible in steering their brothers along the right path.

And, if any of the new arrivals object to military regulations, the lessons they will be given in the barracks removed from the eye of commissioned officers, will perhaps be more efficacious than would any punishment which might be meted out by the officers.

A report received by the division surgeon shows that health conditions in Camp Custer are superior to those in the national guard and national army cantonments of the south and that the percentage of deaths in this camp is the lowest in the country.

TEN PER CENT OF NEW DRAFT UNFIT

PHYSICAL EXAMINATIONS SHOW LARGE NUMBER OF MEN WILL BE REJECTED.

HEART TROUBLE CHIEF CAUSE

Many Also Being Rejected Because of Bad Teeth, But If They Can Be Repaired Men Will Stay.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek.—Medical examinations of the recently arriving selected men indicate that at least 10 per cent will be rejected because of physical disability, heart afflictions being the most prevalent cause. Perhaps the explanation of this rather large percentage is found in the improved system of examining whereby the suspicious cases go before the general medical board within 24 hours after being examined by the regimental phsicians.

When the first selected men were examined five percent were rejected at once and subsequent examinations sent another five per cent home.

The present method combines the two examinations so the totals will remain unchanged and the large rejection list does not indicate that the last men to arrive are physically inferior to the first increments.

Wherever there is a fair amount of doubt existing over a select's physical condition, the probabilities are that he will be rejected. The medical authorities are gradually raising physical standards until they are far above the average point adopted by the great majority of local boards.

Dental surgeons work side by side with their brother medics in the examination rooms and bad teeth are causing the rejection of a large number of men. Those whose teeth can be repaired, no matter what their present condition, are retained in the service if they pass other tests.

GOUGING GROCERS CUT OFF

Wholesalers Will Refuse to Sell to Dealers Who "Hog" Prices.

Lansing.—Retail grocers who insist on "hogging" prices for foodstuffs obtained through Michigan jobbing houses will be deprived of future purchases.

This is the gist of what occurred at Lansing when George A. Prescott, federal food administrator, met with Michigan wholesalers, who came to ascertain what action was necessary to assist the plan of food conservation and price making.

It is also proposed to start throughout Michigan a cash-and-carry system of purchases. Mr. Prescott has statistics compiled by the national food administration showing the increased cost of food commodities when credit and delivery charges are added.

This plan is working out well in other states and has forced the price of groceries to a level that gives a reasonable profit to the wholesaler and retailer and allows the customer to make purchases at a decided saving.

NEW GYM AT CUSTER UNDER WAY

Soldiers Erecting $25,000 Athletic Building at Cantonment.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Troop labor, under supervision of officers who in civil life were architectural and structural engineers, will erect the $25,000 camp gymnasium.

The building will be located on the main esplanade, near division headquarters, known as the civic center of the cantonment. It will be the third of a group of buildings to be centered around the camp flagpole. The camp library and theatre now are nearing completion.

Work on the building will commence immediately. The total sum $25,000, has been raised or pledged by responsible parties.

Every man in camp will be compelled to learn how to swim, box and wrestle under the most competent instructors available.

The gymnasium will be ready for use within 30 days after building operations begin. F. A. Rowe, civilian athletic director, sent to Custer by the war department, will be in charge.

The building will be the largest structure in the cantonment. It will be two and a half stories in hight with ground dimensions of 112x250 feet.

In the basement will be a concrete swimming pool, 33x75 feet, 75 shower baths and a locker room. The first floor will be the gymnasium proper, arranged especially for basketball and indoor baseball games. Circling it will be a 15-foot running track, floored also to allow for roller skating.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

More than $10,000,000 in insurance have now been subscribed by Camp Custer soldiers.

Posting of news bulletins on the board at division headquarters, is the nearest thing the camp has to an actual newspaper.

Rumor that the government plans establishing 40 regiments of cavalry is being received with delight by cavalry officers in camp.

Greenville now has a coal yard where coal is sold at cost, which promises to be a permanent institution.

Isabella county farmers are having their seed corn dried by the Central State Normal college. A shortage is expected in Michigan.

The rattle of machine guns is becoming a familiar sound at Selfridge field, Mt. Clemens. Part of the flying field has been turned into machine gun range and every man will be taught the operation and care of the guns.

[illegible] Herman D. Kirby, 29 years old, a former resident of Detroit, who has been fighting in France for more than a year and a half, was killed in action. His brother, Harry, who is 19 years old, is now fighting in France.

WAR ON AUSTRIA IS SENATE PLAN

Senator Stone of Missouri Says United States Must Fight Kaiser's Allies.

WOULD SIMPLIFY SITUATION

Lewis of Illinois, the Democratic Whip, Also Says Nation Should Take Steps to Widen the Conflict—Curb on Spies.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Declarations of war against Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria, Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee declared seem "exceedingly advisable to simplify a situation now anomalous."

"We are in fact," said he, "now at war with Germany's allies."

Senator Stone's only reservation was that such action by congress should be in harmony with the policy of the executive branch of the government. Although he voted against the declaration of war on Germany, Senator Stone has reiterated that the war, once begun, has his whole support. His statement was taken as indicative of the agitation for war on Germany's allies which will face congress when it convenes next week.

Would Simplify Matters.

"There should be an understanding, of course," said Senator Stone, "between the two branches of the government before any action is taken. But we are, in fact, now at war with Germany's allies. The situation is anomalous. It would, in my opinion, simplify matters greatly if we should formally declare war against Germany's allies. It seems to be exceedingly advisable."

"I have understood that some, if not a large number of Austrian troops have been on the western front. They may now, or soon, be actually fighting against the American forces, the two forces firing at each other. Any way, the Austrians are desperately engaged with Italy, which is one of our allies, just as much as France or England."

Would Aid Curb on Spies.

To have war formally declared against the German allies also, said Senator Stone, would simplify matters of domestic concern, such as measures to prevent espionage.

New or amended war tax legislation, according to Senator Stone, who also is a member of the senate finance committee, should not be undertaken until after a thorough survey of the situation. He said there was no doubt that in many respects the new war tax law can be improved and probably will be to remove inequalities and injustices. The session, he predicted, would be a long one.

Senator Lewis, the Democratic whip, expressed views similar to Senator Stone's. "At the same time," said he, "we should be careful to distinguish between Austrians and Hungarians. We should also distinguish between Austrians and Poles."

BREAD CONTROL AIDS FARMER

Wheat Growers Now Get 40 Per Cent of Price for Loaf, Is Report.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Stabilization of bread production by government supervision extending from the wheat field to the bakery with a consequent elimination of hoarding and speculation, makes it possible for the farmer to receive 40 per cent of the price paid for the loaf of bread, the food administration announced here.

It was pointed out that last year the farmer got less than 20 per cent of the selling price of bread.

According to the food experts, a marked decrease in bread prices has been effected recently in many cities.

FIX PAPER PRICE AT 3 CENTS

New York, Nov. 27.—Newsprint paper manufacturers representing 85 per cent of the print paper output in the country, will sell newsprint to publishers at three cents a pound at mill until April 1, and after that at a price to be fixed by the federal trade commission, under an agreement reached between the government and six of seven paper manufacturers charged with violation of the Sherman law.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The agreement reached between the miners and operators of the Illinois coal fields was submitted to Fuel Administrator Garfield for his approval.

Loyalty to his country proved stronger than blood ties with Jacob Skaug, Grand Forks, N. Following his arrest, it was learned that Skaug has two wives.

To many people yesterday did not seem to be a Thankful Day. War is making inroads into many of our homes and is taking from them many men for the service. The effects of this world war is making itself felt in every home throughout the length and breadth of our country, and on the face of it, it would not seem that we had a great deal to be thankful for yesterday. The burden of a great war is upon us, we must measure up to the test. We must work, suffer, give and deprive ourselves if we hope to be victorious, for victorious we must be! We will be!

We should have been thankful yesterday, first of all, that we are living under the Stars and Stripes, in the greatest land that the sun shines on. We should be thankful that this great country with her great resources and boundless wealth is permitted to carry the standard of Freedom and Democracy to a down-trodden and oppressed people. We should have been thankful that war as it is now raging in Europe has not been carried to our shores and that our property has not been destroyed and our people have not been subjected to the terrible things that the people of Europe have been forced to endure, thankful that we are permitted to go along with our daily pursuits not being hindered or molested, and to those mothers and fathers who are furnishing boys for our army, is it not possible for them to feel thankful that they are permitted to give them to the service of our great country which has always meant so much to us?

These are only a few of the many reasons for returning thanks to Almighty God for the many blessings he has permitted us to enjoy during the past year.

OUR FLAG'S GREETING

The following verses were written by a friend of the editor who lives in Maryland on the eastern shore and were written to commemorate the beautiful act of the children in Paris on last Independence Day when our flag was carried through the streets there.

O, Flag of our country,
  No tribute is paid thee
In all the wide world,
  From mountain to sea,
Tenderer or sweeter
  Than, kneeling before thee,
The children of France
  Greet the flag of the free.
Prayers of the innocent
  Lead thee to victory,
Flag of our pride,
  In thy cause there is surety.
'Ad secours!' be thy cry
  To the helpless, the suffering,
For the heroes that die
  Carry on the great rescuing,
And the lilies of France
  Beside thee will wave
In the peace that wil [illegible]
  From the graves of the brave.

'REDEMPTION' A POWERFUL DRAMA

The Life of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

Probably no girl or woman in the world has received the amount of newspaper publicity given Evelyn Nesbit since the day of her teens, and that sort of publicity which does not always cast the best impressions upon readers, for they form an opinion and are ever ready to condemn or praise and I think in Miss Nesbit's case she has been condemned, for very few seek to analyze two sides of a story.

"Redemption," as produced at the George Cohan Theatre last night, is a redemption for Evelyn Nesbit. I defy any living souls to see this picture and refrain from getting a lump in their throat and keep the eyes from watering, even if they do not cry. It is unbelievable that a vaudeville dancing artist, as Miss Nesbit has been, with her partner, Jack Clifford could throw herself into the hands of Julius Steger, the director of motion pictures, and have him turn her out to be one of the greatest dramatic actresses on the screen today.

"Redemption" is based on the life of Evelyn Nesbit, but is worked in so cleverly and so beautifully that one would hardly realize it is her life. The picture brings in her little son, Russell Thaw, and her husband, Jack Clifford for a moment, and although there is a suggestion of the Stanford White-Harry Thaw affair, there is only a passing glance which works into one of the most powerful dramatic stories that has been told on the screen. People who have read and read the life of Evelyn Nesbit, and have formed their opinion, will change it for the benefit of Miss Nesbit after they see this marvelous, gigantic, stupendous production called "Redemption."

Every detail in photography is there, and not a point has been missed. After witnessing the performance I shook hands with Miss Nesbit and complimented her and she modestly said, "Don't ocmpliment me. All the compliments go to Julius Steger." I have shouted Miss Nesbit's praise as an actress in this picture.

Every exhibitor will not only do a big business because of Miss Nesbit's name, but they will do four times the business, for "Redemption" is a picture, beautifully told, beautifully taken and artistically directed by the master hands of Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden. It is one of those long lingering remembering kind. It is not a picture you see today and forget to-morrow. It is a picture you will remember as long as you live, and Evelyn Nesbit can thank the screen, for she can now tell her true story to the world and the world will love her, after they have seen her in "Redemption." All will reap a golden harvest in the profits of this dramatic story of a woman's life only reversed to happiness rather than the actual story.

"Redemption" will be seen at the Bradley Opera House, for a two night engagement, next Monday and Tuesday Decemeber 3 and 4th. If you can't go on Monday night arrange to go Tuesday, make a special effort to see "Redemption," you will be amply repaid.

CAR STOLEN

While Roscoe Hulett of Saline with a party of friends were in the Opera House Tuesday evening, his Ford car which was parked in front of the Opera House was stolen, with a good supply of robes and blankets and two pair of gloves. John Smith was notified and could not find any clue, except that it went west.

William Smith took the parties home in a car.

Corporal Pete Melonakos of Camp Custer came Thursday night for a short visit with Mike and the others at the Candy Kitchen. He left this morning on his return to camp.

Miss Merle Kenyon and Trevedick Brothers of Grass Lake were here for Thanksgiving dinner with her father L. D. Kenyon, who also entertained his brother Lewis Kenyon and wife and daughter, Genevieve of Toledo.

W. B. Keysor and wife entertained for Thanksgiving, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Keysor, and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Osborn and son, of Palmyra, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wheedon and two children of Clinton.

"More than 200,000 French Soldiers have been sent back from the firing line because they were so ill with tuberculosis that they were no longer able to fight. Our men, Michigan men, too, will fall victims of this disease through the hardship of life in the trenches. They are offering their lives for us, for every man, woman and child in your community. Will we do all that we can do to nurse them back to life and happiness when they come back home to us broken in health? Each community in Michigan surely is too proud, too big hearted, to deeply conscious of its obligation to its own flesh and blood to refuse adequate provision for its returned tuberculous soldiers. Money from Red Cross Seals will open the way for this service.

THE DIVORCED MUTT & JEFF

The latest Mutt and Jeff show was presenaed at the Bradley Opera House Tuesday evening to a crowded house. As a musical bomedy it was certainly great and abounded in many comical stunts.

Of course the big interest in the comedy centered around the two characters, Mutt and Jeff, who after a more or less smooth matrimonial existence, find themselves threatened with diverce proceedings started by their wives, but it was all fixed up in the last act and Mutt and Jeff remained happy (until the next time) John Gorman gave a clever interpretation of Mutt while the little fellow Marty Healy was all there as Jeff

The song were catchy and elicited much applause and the chorus of girls were very attractive in their beautiful gowns Tecumseh fun lovers were surely well pleased with Mutt and Jeff and will welcome their return at any time

"BABY MINE"

Did you see "Baby Mine?" There was a good attendance at the matinee Thursday afternoon and in the evening the opera house was crowded The play was a very interesting one and was well received by the audience

The story hinges on the marriage of a young couple, the bride being a gay young society woman and the groom a sober home loving man whose sole thought is for a happy home and a baby. After a little difference between them, they part and the woman, repenting, begs him to come back As there is a baby in the house who has been borrowed for the occasion the many complications in keeping one, two or three, are very amusing Poor Jimmie, their mutual friend, having to bear all the burdens but does it most cheerfully.

CORRECTION

In our last issue we had the marriage license of James E Martin of Chelsea and Miss Marion M Hoag of Tecumseh The relatives of the young lady take exceptions to this notice claiming they know nothing about it and that it is not so We are sorry if this is incorrect, but when anything comes out in court news we take it to be all right

NO NAME CLUB

Mr. and Mrs Guy Belding very pleasantly entertained the members of the No Name Club at their home Tuesday evening The first interesting feature was a two course dinner at 6:30, after which the evening was spent with progressive pedro, Mrs. O G. Hunt and Edson C. Brown being the lucky prize winners.

Saginaw Silo

Do It Now.

Last week we told you about the Silo lumber situation. If you have not read our ad, we suggest you look it up.

A great many farmers are today regreting their soft corn is not in a silo, are regreting they have not as good feed as their neighbors, and do expect to put up a silo this fall, not realizing that a silo purchased in the fall of 1918 will cost $50.00 more than this fall, perhaps even more.

Today we can sell you a silo as cheap as we could last July, for the simple reason that the company have them on hand and are closing them out at the old price, advising us that the moment the present stock is sold the prices will be much higher because the silo lumber will cost a great deal more.

Phone us right now, we will place your order at once; you can have the regular terms the same as if you bought in the summer, the interest to start from Aug. 1st.

If you wait until to-morrow you may be too late, therefore phone us right now.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. WITH THE "SAMMIES" IN FRANCE

B. F. F. France.
November 12, 1917

Mr. Leon Rosacrans,
Tecumseh Michigan.

My Dear Friend:--

Your most interesting and welcome letter of September 28th arrived a few days ago and I am utilizing this, my first opportunity to answer it. It is mighty fine of you to remember me for we simply live on letters over here.

Yes it is very hard to write an interesting letter, for the things that you want to hear about are of the utmost importance as far as military worth is concerned.

I am very glad to hear that the crops are going to be good in U. S. A. For we will need them ! ! ! I don't think that this war will be over for some time. Now what do I think about it? Let me digress a minute.

Every fruit tree in the section that the Boche occupied has been cut down, merely sawn through and toppled over. I have seen thousands of apple trees leveled. The roads of France are fringed with beautiful popular trees tall and slim. For miles the Huns leveled them. Of course there is some military advantage in feling the latter. But the fruit tree ! ! Ah it makes my blood boil, just wanton destruction ! ! ! Every bridge is blown up whether of military advantage or not.

I am in the heart of the devastated country and I tell you these things from personal observation. There is not a single house for 15 miles back of here, that has not been blown up. When I say blown up, I mean absolutely demolished. Beautiful chateaux, humble cottages all met the same fate. Every well polluted in a way that I can not write. Private fish ponds blown up, rails taken up from the railroads. Talk about barbarians ! ! Talk about Atilla the Hun who swept Asia ! Atilla was a savage but Germany the most scientific nation in the whole world ! She has simply reverted to the lower type of animal on the earth ! But even this is not the worst, listen ! Yesterday I was talking with an old Frenchman, 76 years old who lived eight miles from here. He was in the town of R——— when the Germans occupied it. He said, "They took everything we had, our furniture, etc., an officer took all the men's shirts in our house. My daughter had a lot of clothes made for an expected baby and a German took them and burned them in the barnyard. I had two daughters at home and a boy 16 years old. When the Germans retreated, they took them with them to work them in the fields and factories in Germany. They left us old people who are worn out. We have no home any more, just a pile of bricks." And so on, the poor old man stood there gazing at a pile of bricks that used to be a pretty red tiled cottage, the tears streaming down his cheeks.

In view of the above mentioned things and many, many others, I'm willing to stay here until the last Hun is in Hell, roasting his feet before the Devil's fireplace.

When I came over here, I didn't hate the individual German, but now! I feel this way tonight, especially, because an officer who has been thru a great deal with my crowd, was blown to bits yesterday, all they found was one arm, and his wrist watch was still running.

I tell you, Leon, thousands of our American lads will sleep forever on French soil, if this war last 6 months after we really get into the line. But as Harry Lauden says, "We will build a wall, if necessary to keep out the Hun, of the bodies of the best lads of the nation. The history of this, the greatest war will be written in blood, but all this is even better than beng conquered and ruled by beasts."

Enough of this "sob stuff." But it does one good to get a little "off his chest" once in a while.

By the way, trench slang goes like this:-

"Pip squeak", small Boche shell.

"Whis bang", small Boche shell.

"A dud", A shell that does not explode when it strikes the target. This term is also applied to a soldier who has no "pep," he is a "dud". "The wind up," a soldier has it when he is under shell fire and gets scared, means "showing the white feather."

"Fed up"—tired of the whole business, don't like it. "He is "fed up"' with war and wants to go back to England" etc.

"Hop it"—to run. The shells started coming his way and he "hopped it."

This ink is getting fainter every line, so I must desist from further intrusion on your time.

Now I received more news about Tecumseh in your letter than from all other sources combined, since I left that dear old town. You wrote me the little things that count. I shall anxiously await another.

Now I'm sorry that it is impossible for you to come over here, but for the sake of your family, I am glad. Men are made for such sights these, but God Bless the dear ones at home who wait and hope !

Please give my regards to your father and brother and all my friends

Yours, Doc Hammell.

RED CROSS NEWS

Will the members of the surgical shirt committee please read these directions carefully: The hems on the back and pocket must be 1½ inches wide and turned on the right side; the hem at the bottom of the shirt and sleeve are to be 1 inch wide and turned on the wrong side. Tapes 10 inches apart and be careful not to get the fels on the seams too wide. The second stitching on the pocket is supposed to cover the raw edge inside the pocket. When the sleeves are to be pieced, lap the selvedge and stitch twice. The top of the pocket should be on a line with the bottom of the armhole.

The Tecumseh workers have received a number of compliments on their garments and we want to preserve our reputation. If each member will carefully look over her work it will save the chairman here the work of making the changes as the work must be right before it is sent to Headquarters.

The concert given by the Red Cross Company in Dundee on Wednesday was a most brilliant affair. The High school auditorium in which it took place, is absolutely up to date with a pretty stage scenery and drop curain.

The hall and the gallery were crowded with a representative and enthusiatic audience. Mr. O. E. Mott the very capable chairman of the Dundee Red Cross, introduced the company and asked the spectators to show their appreciation by loud applause, and they certainly did; every number on the program was encored, and in some instances a third number was insisted on.

The company was at its best. This was the sixteenth concert and everything worked splendidly. It is hard to say who was the star of the occasion as all the members were loudly cheered.

The members taking part were Mrs. Fred B. Wood, musical director; pianist and accompanist; Mrs. Robt. Moore, soprano; Mrs. Ella Hodges, pianist; Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy, speaker; Mr. W. S. Dickinson, tenor, Mr. Fred Dickinson, tenor, Mr. Roger Waring, baritone, Mr. Floyd Juckett, bass, and Mr. Duaine Service, violinist.

The audience was asked by Mr. Mott to forget dimes and nickels and to contribute paper and responded with a collection of $84.68. In response to an evident desire of the audience the Temple Quartette, Mrs. Moore and Mr. Duaine Service contributed several more numbers while the money was being counted.

The company gave three cheers for Dundee, to which the audience responded with three cheers for Tecumseh and the Red Concert company.

The company has now raised $776 out of the thousand dollars, the members pledged themselves to collect.

Any town desiring their services is requested to communicate with Mrs. Fred B. Wood, or Mrs. Jenny C. [illegible] Hardy.

New members: Mrs. A. W. McIntosh, Miss Phoebe Wagner.

Mrs. Sena Crane has received a big consignment of pajama material and can supply all comers. She is now asking for more helpers and will be at the Headquarters Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

The snipping machine has worked up a consignment of rags from Macon, and is in receipt of another bundle for the same purpose.

Miss Phelps would like old flour sacks to use for snippings.

Mrs. Dunn will be at the Headquarters on Saturday to make comfort pillows; she needs helpers badly and would begrateful if any ladies who can come will notify her on Friday evening, or Saturday morning.

Mrs. John Schreder has made 25 pairs of pajamas.

Mrs. McIntyre's Methodist Sunday school class will be at the Headquarters on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock and two weeks there after.

Dr Bredow's surgical dressing class will meet as usual on Wednesday and Friday afternoon. All workers are requested to wear some kind of coverall, or apron over their dresses, and to cover their hair, as the dressings must be kept surgically clean. New workers welcome. Please bring your own scissors.

On account of the lecture at the Presbyterian church, the Westminster Guild will not be at Headquarters on Monday evening, watch this column for next meeting.

On Thanksgiving day a collection was taken up at the Baptist church, which amounted to $7.50.

Following are the directions for the knitted helmet:

1½ hanks of yarn (3-8 lb.); 1 pair Red Cross needles No. 2.

The helmet is made in two parts, which afterwards are sewed together.

Front of helmet: Cast on 48 stitches (11 inches), knit plain for 25 ribs ([illegible] inches) and knit 2, purl 2 for 3[illegible] rows. On the next row the opening for the face is made as follows: knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, knit and bind off loosely the next [illegible] stitches and purl and knit2, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2. Run the stitches before opening on a spare needle and on the stitches at other side of opening knit 2, purl 2 for 12 rows. The last row will end at the opening and at that point cast in 28 stitches to offset thise bound off. Begin at the face opening of stitches on spare needle and knit 2 purl 2 for 12 rows. At the end of the 12th row continue all across to the end of other needle, when there should be 48 stitches on needle as at first. Knit 2, purl 2 for 24 rows.

Top of helmei: Knit 2, narrow (knitting 2 stitches together), knit 14 narrow, knit 14, narrow, knit 12. Purl the entire next row. On the third row knit 2, narrow, knit13, narrow, knit 13, narrow, knit 11. Purl fourth row. On fifth row knit 2, narrow, knit 10. Purl sixth row. Continue to narrow in the 3 places every plain knitted row with 1 stitch less between narrowngs until 9 stitches are left.

Back of helmet: Work in same manner as for front, but omit the face opening. Sew the stitches of upper edges together with joining stitch. Sew up the side seams leaving the plain knitting at shoulders open.

For single crochet: Insert hook, draw yarn through, pass yarn around the hook and draw it through both loops on the hook

Start in the center with a chain, of four, join one chain, single crochet into this, ncreasing enough to keep it flat and continue around and around, increasing gradually until you have a perfectly flat top 6¼ inches in diameter. Then continue row after row without increasing for 4 7-8 inches. The cap should then measure 8 inches from center of crown to edge of cap and about 22 inches around. Do not break yarn Chain 1, turn, skip 1 stitch and single crochet 14 inches for neck piece, leaving 8 in. for front of cap. Then 1 chain, turn, skip 1 and crochet back and forth on the 14 inches, decreasing 1 stitch at first end of each row until you have 8 rows or 1¼ inches, which completes the neck piece. Do not break off yarn.

Ear flaps and tie: One chain, turn, single crochet 18 stitches, 1 chain, turn, single crochet 18 stitches, 1 chain, turn, skip 1, single crochet 17 stitches, chain 1, turn, repeat, decreasing each row until only 2 remain. Put needle in center and crochet and chain 8 inches long for tie.

Break off yarn, For second flap start at other end of neck piece and single crochet 18 stitches and continue directions same as first. Do not break off yarn, turn and single crochet all around cap and both sides of chain for tie. Cover flap and tie with slightly damp cloth and press wth moderately warm iron. A circular piece of card board 6¼ inches in diameter is a convenience in measuring for the perfectly flat top.

Do not wind yarn to tight, as it injuries the quality of the wool. Read directions carefully.

In crocheting hold yarn firmly but not too tight, and insert hook under both top threads of stitch.

Always have a tape measure handy and measure often. In measuring for depth of cap, fold and measure eight inches straight from center of crown to edge of cap.

In making neck piece and ear flap be sure to decrease only one stitch at the first end of each row. For the flap be sure to count your stitches, 18 then 17 and so on. Do not crochet the chain of eight inches for tie too loosely. Run all loose ends of yarn back into cap.

GUARDSMAN SHOT BY COMRADE

Vassar Boy Accidentally Killed By Member of His Company.

Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex.—Only a few minutes after he had finished reading a letter from his mother, Corporal Earl R. Kennard, of Vassar Mich., was shot in the temple and fatally wounded while sitting on his cot in his tent in the machine gun company of the One Hundred and Twenty fifth infantry regiment.

Testimony in the inquiry after the shooting was to the effect that Kennard was killed accidentally by Private Wm. Malinoski, of Detroit, a member of the machine gun company.

Witnesses stated that Kennard was lying on his cot and that Malinoski was snapping his service revolver aimed in a playful way, first at one man and then the other.

On the fourth snap, Private Albert Whittemore, of Grand Rapids, testified there was a report and the bullet struck the corporal between the eyes He died five hours later in the base hospital after an X-ray picture was made and the bullet removed.

Kennard was 20 years old. He enlisted 18 months ago and had been considered a first class soldier during his service.

According to Whittemore, Kennard never had a cross word with any of the boys. He said he felt certain it was a case of accidental shooting.

The distinction of being the only girl draft board official in Michigan is claimed by Mildred Clough, who is clerk of the local board for the Second Kalamazoo district. Miss Clough was formerly assistant to the clerk and when that official resigned she was appointed to his stead.

DANCING PARTY

A very pleasant dancing party was given by the young men of the town at Witherell's Hall, Wednesday evening. The music was furnished by a colored orchestra of four pieces from Columbus, Ohio, and was highly appreciated. This orchestra has been playing at the lake dances this past season, winning a good deal of favor.

Thirty couples attended and all report a fine time.

CONSERVE THE PENNIES

One cent pieces are getting very scarce. The banks are unable to supply the demands of their customers and are unable to get one cent pieces from the government. Banks in the larger cities and railroad offices are using postage stamps for change. The situation can be relieved greatly if individuals having small collections of pennies will bring them to the banks and deposit them or exchange them for other money.

"PUNKIN" PIE IS BEST OF ALL

Man's Mouth Still Waters When He Thinks of the Kind That Mother Used to Make.

To a man still young enough to remember sufficently far back into his boyhood years to the time when he had never had enough dessert in his life, there is no word in the English language so suggestive of toothsome, lickerish joy as pie, plain pie—particularly "punkin."

You can't spell punkin pie with an "m" and a "p," declares a writer in the Milwaukee Journal. Pumpkin pie is the kind one gets in restaurants, flavored with cloves and allspice. "Punkin" pie has cinnamon and ginger in it, and sometimes a hint of an unmentionable heady fluid about which one would not dare ask mother. And of all the smacking, ambrosial delicacies catalogued under the genus "pie," the best is "punkin."

There are other kinds, of course—apple, peach, cherry, squash, blueberry, custard, lemon, mince—and every one probably has its value in the world. Some people even may prefer them. One never can account for different persons' tastes. But for boys, young men and elderly men whose stomachs have not yet grown old, there is none that will approach "punkin," the khaki-colored queen of pastries.

One grows hungry at the thought of "punkin" pie—the crisp, crinkly crust; the thick, rich pungent filling, with the dust of cinnamon tarnishing its tawny top; the creamy, dreamy, velvety, faraway taste as one's mouth closes on its prize. Some appetizing joys there are, but none that exceeds capturing a piece of punkin pie, getting it into one's hands, contrary to all social usage, biting into it, until one almost mires up to one's nose, until one can scarce see over the top of the upstanding crust, and beginning the unequaled delight of devouring the first mouthful. To taste it is to love it, love it and love forever.

Louis Mikalewich, of Kalamazoo, not yet called by draft officials, has been permitted to enter Camp Custer because he had no job.

A. H. Caldwell of Belding, lost the index finger of his left hand when a supposedly empty gun which he was taking out of his automobile after a hunting trip was discharged.

A state fish market, retailing fish at 15 cents a pound, has been opened at Detroit. Warden Daniels expects to receive five tons daily of fresh fish from the northern part of the state.

Samuel Gagnon, 86 years old, and or 60 years a merchant of Northport, is dead. Mr. Gagnon figured in many Indian battles in northern Michigan in the early days. He is survived by 18 children.

GENIE MADE REAL IN SCREEN STORY

Character That Has Been Hard to Understand Seems Clear in Fox Kiddies Feature.

There have many attempts on the spoken stage to give an idea of what is known in Eastern wondertales as the Genie, but it remained for William Fox to give him to the world so that he could be truly appreciated.

A genie is neither fairy nor a devil and there is no counterpart of him in Western mythology. He is capable of doing everything that he is asked and he is, under the proper conditions, entirely under the domination of the one who calls him.

In "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" the genie is shown for the first time in any comprehensible sense of the Western mind. The remarkable figure, who has so much to do with the development of this story, has been created by Mr. Fox. He is great and powerful and, while he is awe inspiring he is nothing that is frightening. He is just the doer of marvelous things.

One of the very interesting things about "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" to grown persons will be the way in which the character of the Genie is presented Children will go crazy about him. "Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp" at the New Royal next Wednesday and Thursday.

RED CROSS CONCERT COMPANY AT DUNDEE WEDNESDAY EVENING

The Tecumseh Red Cross Concert Company went to Dundee Wednesday evening where they gave one of their splendid concerts in the auditorium of the High School building The room was full and the Tecumseh company were given a most enthusiastic reception.

Chairman Mott of Dundee made an appeal for a liberal collection after the concert and was rewarded with a total of $65 00. It was announced that the collection a short time ago in Saline netted a little over $70.00. Chairman Mott jumped to his feet and asked his people if they were going to let Saline outclass them and sent the collectors back through the audience His efforts were again rewarded by additional money which brought the total collection up to $81 65.

Tecumseh Red Cross gets one half of this amount. This company of patriotic men and women of Tecumseh have been doing fine work and have give freely of their time and talent. We are proud of them and their success.

NOTICE TO MEN OF MILITARY AGE.

After you have once been called for physical examination by your Draft Board, you cannot enlist in the Navy.

After December 15 it will be even more difficult to get into Sea Service. After that date if your draft number is such that you will be called for the National Army in the near future, you will not be able to join the Navy, After December 15 it will be necessary for you to get a letter from your Local Board showing that there is no chance of you being soon called by the Draft Board.

For this reason it would be advisable for you to enlist in the Navy at once if it is your ambition to help man the guns of our great war fleets.

To enlist in the Navy you must be an American citizen between the ages of 18 to 35.

You must be in good physical condition and free of disease. Men with weak eyes, poor hearing, flat feet or who have defects requiring an operation will not be accepted.

It is absolutely necessary that you have proof of your citizenship when you present yourself for enlistment. For this purpose you may get one of the following:

(a) A birth certificate from proper state, city or church authorities, or

(b) An affidavit as to your age and pace of birth by some reputable person, or

(c) An age certificate filled out by one of your parents or legal guardian. The parent's signature must be witnessed by a public official, pastor of a church, notary public, school superintendent or a Recruiting Officer.

(d) If you were born in a foreign country you must present your final papers of naturalization.

Men of Draft Age must also furnish a letter from their local Draft Board showing that they have not been called by the Draft Board for physical examination.

To join the Navy you may apply at any of the following Recruiting Stations:

161 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.
P. O. Bldg., Saginaw, Mich.
10 Pearl St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

The "What-Shall-It-Be" Question

May seem very perplexing while you think about it at home but all the difficulty vanishes the minute you see our Furniture display.

It fairly bristles with suggestions.

The error you are most likely to make is to conclude that you cannot afford to give Furniture. The truth is that you cannot afford NOT TO.

Give Furniture and you give not only for this Xmas, but for years and years to come.

Give Furniture, and it will stand in some home a constant reminder of you and a lasting tribute to your good judgment.

You don't have to spend a lot of money, either, if you don't want to. Why we have articles of usefullness, artistic in appearance, articles that make ideal gifts, yet that cost only a trifle. Let us show you how easy it is to pick out Xmas presents.

One of our townmen owns a very intelligent cow. Last summer she was in prime condition for the butcher. The day was set, but a day previously she surreptitiously visited a neighbor's swill barrel and ate and drank the contents which contained several pails of mill feed, grain, etc. Of course the butcher's deal was off for the time being and the cow barely escaped with her life. But the fattening process was resumed later and again the day was set, but when the owner visited her in the morning she had presented him with the finest kind of a heifer calf. The cow will not go to the butcher this time.

Earl Allen has laid aside his crutches and walks with both feet on the ground, but his back and shoulder still trouble him.

A RED CROSS CHRISTMAS

The War Council of the American Red Cross has conceived that a great national purpose will be served by having membership in the Red Cross almost as universal as citizenship.

Although pledged as a nation to the national purpose during this great crisis, it will not be granted to a large percentage of us to play a part in the fighting branches of our country's service.

All of us, however, can be identified with the Red Cross, which in these times when whole nations are organized for warfare, is big enough and strong enough to carry some of the burden for our soldiers, our sailors and our Allies.

We want a Red Cross of three-quarters of a million members in Michigan. We want the strength and support that will grow from this army of members.

Christmas time has been set to attain this goal, because the Red Cross and Christmas spring from the same spirit, and these two great symbols of mercy, sacrifice and cheer may well be united. On this, our first Christmas in the war, the Red Cross symbol will add, not a spirit of dejection, but the thought of serious purpose and sacrifice which through accomplishment it represents.

It is hoped that from this Christmas campaign of 1917 will grow a permanent custom, which will increase the significance both of Christmas and the Red Cross.

FIRST "WAR CHRISTMAS"

It is our first Christmas in the War.

Millions of our boys are away from their homes, in camps, on the sea, and in the trenches.

Let your Red Cross banner wave from holly wreath and Christmas green to show that you and yours are enlisted in its service.

Light the Red Cross Christmas candle and let its rays light up the folds of the emblem of mercy; and this:

Bind in inseparable union the Christmas spirit of service and the Red Cross mission of humanity.

The Red Cross has 5,000,000 Members.

It needs 15,000,000 Members.

That means 10,000,000 new Members.

Your dollar will help put our soldiers "over the top."

Make this a Merry Red Cross Christmas.

President Wilson has appointed inspectors for 41 states to enforce the new federal explosives law under the bureau of mines. Albert E. Stevenson, of Port Huron, is the Michigan man selected.

RIFLE RANGES AT CUSTER OPENED

WORK OF TEACHING MEN HOW TO SHOOT IS NOW ON IN EARNEST.

SAID TO BE BEST IN COUNTRY

Most of Practice Being Held On 100-600 Yard Ranges—Experts Shoot On 1000 Yard Range.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Camp Custer has begun work on the rifle range in earnest.

The range on which the men work is said to be one of the best in national army cantonments. A vast amount of labor was necessary to carry out the plans and a simpler system might have been completed much sooner but whatever time was lost in waiting will be more than recovered from this time on.

Underground trenches connect all of the butts, permitting men at work on the targets to proceed from one range to another without exposing themselves and without necessitating an interruption of fire. The targets installed are of the latest model. The majority of them are automatic in operation, depending on a system of counterbalancing which raises a fresh target when a marked one is lowered.

The butts are heavily timbered, and in addition are protected by deep earth parapets. The men work in safety and comfort and can even take refuge from bad weather in wood lined dugouts during lulls in firing.

Almost all the work will be done on the 100, 200, 300, 500 and 600 yard ranges. There are small ranges at 800 and 1,000 yards, but they will accommodate few men and were built only for the expert shorts.

All the hours that can possibly be sandwiched into the training schedule are being devoted to work on the ranges.

The whole city of Grand Rapids has been proclaimed a prohibited zone within whose borders no unnaturalized German or other alien enemy may reside without a permit from the United States marshal.

Labor for Michigan farms next year has suddenly loomed up as one question which must be met more than half way. State officials are working to provide means of securing adequate help for the farmer.

$50 ARMY REWARD RESTRICTED

Desertion Charge Must Be Proved Before Money Will Be Paid.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Amateur detectives who planned to get rich through rewards the government had offered for deserters have been frustrated by a new war department order.

According to the original draft law any man who voluntarily or otherwise failed to report at an army camp after being called was classed automatically as a deserter. His intentions in the matter were not considered. Anyone causing his arrest and delivery at any army post was entitled to a $50 reward.

Now, however, the man's intent to desert, if he had such, must be proved In addition his captor's right to the reward also depends on whether the man was physically fit to be a soldier

Nor will a man, caught as a deserter be accepted in Camp Custer until his own local board sends papers to show he had attempted evasion and he is physically qualified.

Men hold as deserters hereafter must be taken to the nearest local board. There it will be ascertained whether or not he planned to escape service. If he did so that local board will furnish the captor with certificates to that effect. The deserter then can be turned over to the nearest army post and the reward collected.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

A new tack has been adopted by relatives who object to the drafting of members of the family. They are writing to division headquarters that the enlisted man in question is under 21 and in other cases that he is over 31 and therefore not subject to select conscription. All such representations are being ignored on the basis that the man admitted being between the conscription ages when he registered.

The body of Donald McGee, of Saginaw, was found by hunters on the preserves of the Point Huron Hunting and Fishing club at Mt. Clemens. It had been washed ashore and was frozen in the ice. McGee was a civilian instructor in aeronautics at Selfridge aviation field and lost his life when he fell into Lake St. Clair from a high altitude about six weeks ago.

Battle Creek authorities, through the war recreation board, has engaged Miss Mary Hulbert, sister of Probate Judge Hulbert, of Detroit, as policewoman for Battle Creek. Food City authorities have taken the report of the war department as a warning to purge the city of evil women. Public sentiment, which has been thoroughly aroused by the report, will probably play a large part in the clean-up.

Eight hunters lost their lives and many were seriously injured in the state during the 1917 hunting season The record of casualties is less than 50 per cent of the normal of any year since 1905.

A southbound interurban limited on the Michigan Railway company struck an automobile at Willoughby crossing, four miles south of Lansing, killing all three of the occupants of the machine. The car was driven by Lyle Hirwan, 23. The other occupants were Grace Clements, 20, and George Clements, 11. All resided at Lansing.

Kenneth Arne, 12 years old, was drowned in Flint river at Flushing, when he attempted to save Merrill Allen, 12 years old, who broke through while playing on the ice opposite the town. Both bodies wer recovered. The cries of the boys brought men from the pumping station near by, but they arrived too late.

Thomas J. McGovern, 32 years old, a newspaper man of Mt. Clemens, died after a lingering illness. With the call for volunteers, McGovern went to Fort Sheridan, but under the strenuous training developed a heart lesion and was refused a commission. He returned to his home heart-broken and never fully recovered.

Cadillac Citizens are considering taking over the local gas company, which threatens to quit if rates are not raised.

DEFENSE SOCIETY CALLS FOR LOCAL VIGILANCE CORPS

Immediate Action Necessary Says Their Appeal.

Village of Tecumseh, today made public a request received from Richard M. Hurd, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the American Defense Society, urging citizens here to organize a local vigilance corps, for the purpose of aiding the Government in putting an end to German propaganda and enemy activity which has been responsible for fires, ammunition plant explosions, sabotage, food scares and other attempts to damage the morale of the American people.

"Recent events in this country make it plain that the German method of propaganda which has been so effective in Russia and Italy is now being attempted in this country with an alarming degree of success," according to the appeal to Americans now being issued by the American Defense Society. 'German propaganda has long been supplied to our troops in the national encampments. The ship-building program is being interferred with by German-inspired strikes. Germans are directing the hoarding of food supplies to an extent that panics have already been prevalent in the leading cities. Newspapers are giving daily reports of fires in ammunition plants and grain depots and the country is now on the verge of an even greater calamity in the shape of a railroad strike of unprecedented extent which threatens to cripple our national industry."

The far-reaching need of the local Vigilance Corps can readily be seen when it is known that in this country alone there are today several million alien enemies representing Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, Turkey and other countries sympathetic or allied with the Prussian autocracy. Almost without exception these enemies are free to go about as they see fit, and while the Government has done much toward tightening the censorship of mails and cables, nevertheless there are numberless channels by which these enemies are in touch with the directing genius of German propaganda in Berlin.

If Americans wish to stand by the men at the front, whose lives are already being sacrificed, and to stand by their Government, the opportunity is offered in the additional service they can give to this work of the American Defense Society.

The plan of organization undertaken by the Society and recommended to loyal Americans provides for the enrollment of a small American Vigilance Corps in every city and town which shall classify all residents under the following terms:

1. Loyal.
2. Disloyal.
3. Doubtful.
4. Unknown.

Following the general classification of citizens the Committee is urged to make further designation of the following list:

1. Alien enemy.
2. Pro-German.
3. Anti-Government.

In the letter of instructions to branch organizations the Executive Committee of the American Defense Society gives the following directions:

"At the earliest possible moment, when you have made your classification of alien enemies, pro-Germans, and those opposed to the Government in this war, send this list to the Police Department, the local representative of the Department of Justice and to whatever representatives of the army or navy intelligence bureaus there are in your community. Do not let this matter rest, however with this first classification of the enemies. Too much stress cannot be put on the importance of having your own Vigilance Corps take steps to watch alien enemies, pro-Germans and those opposed to the Government. Only by such co-operation will you be able to give effective aid. Take every means you can to let the people of your city know the names of our enemies.

"Unofficial announcement has already been made at Washington that the Government is about to register the alien enemies in America. Your Committee already having acted along such lines, will naturally be in a position greatly to aid the Government Census when such a census is taken. No doubt many attempts will be made to evade the official Government Census and information on the enemies in your community will therefore be of greatest value.

"You are enjoined to watch the speech, associations and activities of every man whom you may suspect of disloyalty and to send in the immediate report. For further information and instructions regarding the work of the Vigilance Corps of the American Defence Society, address National Headquarters, 44 East 23rd Street, New York City."

In a little town of Tecumseh several amateurs united to raise money for the Red Cross. They went out into the neighboring towns, on the four corners and wherever they could go without expense, and gave their concerts. They sold no tickets but took up a free will offering.

The concerts were good, and the demand for them increased, and they pledged themselves to raise one thousand dollars for the Red Cross. Of this they have already raised nearly $700.00 net.

Those who have autos drive those who do not have them.

The organization began by one of the members giving lectures for the Belgiam Relief fund, with collection; then a concert was given for the same purpose, and one for the Armenians, then the company worked exclusively for the Red Cross.

They have given their concerts in churches, halls and on the platforms erected on the corners of a street, the latter being the most profitable concert, netting $151.00.

The musical director, pianist and accompanist, Mrs. Fred B. Wood, is the wife of a lawyer, who is also a war veteran; the soprano, Mrs. Robert Moore, is the wife of a dealer in coal; Mrs. Ella Hodges, pianist, is a professional music teacher; Mr. W. S. Dickinson is a jeweler, the tenor, Mr. Fred Dickinson is a clerk in the post office; Mr. Roger Waring baritone is an architect; Mr. Floyd Tuckett, the bass is a moulder; and Mr. Duaine Service, the violinist, is an undertaker.

The official "barker" as she styles herself, of the company, is Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy who arranges hte dates, does the advertising, and makes a begging speech at the end of the concert. It isn't every company that has its own barker.

The company has been so successful that is methods have been copied by several other companies.

It intends to give concerts for the French soldiers the Italian Red Cross and the allies who need it most.

The company gives its services absolutely free, and is open for engagements, half the collection taken goes to the Red Cross of the town where the concert is given, and half to the Tecumseh Red Cross. Or if desired the proceeds can go to the French or Italian Red Cross, of the Serbian, Armenian, or Belgian fund.

The speech at the end will be made in English, German, Italian or French as desired.

With our country firmly grasped in the embrace of "Old King Winter" and the mercury sliding below the zero mark, we find ourselves as far away from the solution of the coal troubles as ever.

We were informed a few weeks ago that when navigation on the lakes closed we people living in Michigan and adjoining states would have plenty of coal, that the supply formerly going to lake ports would come our way in wholesome amounts. Well, has it?

We see by the daily papers that train loads of coal are on the way and will be delivered in Detroit soon. Well, where is this coal? Nobody seems to know just where it is. It is simply on the way.

We hear that quantities of coal is laying in railroad yards in different sections of the country and again that huge piles of coal are piled up at the mines waiting for cars to move it. This may all be true, but in heaven's name why is'nt it moved then. Must the people suffer, freeze and get along as best they can when there is a plenty at the mines ready for delivery?

It has now been several months since Dr. Garfield was appointed National Fuel Administrator, nearly every state in the Union has its Fuel Administrator and all local communities have their Fuel Commissioner, so it would seem as if we ought to be fully organized. But what good has it all done? It certainly looks as if this Government of ours had made a bad mess of the fuel situation. In the first place, it appears to us, if the Government wanted to appoint fuel commissioners to handle the matter that men who knew something about the business should have been drafted for that purpose. Why take a College Professor and make him the head of the Fuel Commission. How many of our State and local fuel commissioners are there who know anthing about the fuel business or the railroad business? If you were in the Dry Goods business and needed a manager for your store would you go out into the country and employ a farmer to run it? Would you get a dry goods man to run your farm? No, you would employ an experienced dry goods man to run your dry goods store and a man who has made a success of farming to look after your farm.

It would seem that our Government could have secured a successful mine operator and a railroad man to look after the affairs of the fuel question.

The tangle is not too great to be unraveled if the proper men were put on the job. Now, with the wheels of government in full swing in Washington, it would seem that some speedy action could be put through. The coal should be moved if it takes troops to be stationed at the mines, troops to see that the cars were made available and sent to the mines and troops sent out with the shipments from the mines. The situation is most critical.

Governor James Cox of Ohio recently wired Dr. Harry A. Garfield, federal fuel administrator, that unless Ohio people get immediate relief they will have "lost confidence in the Government." The sentiment expressed by Governor Cox is quite true and the American people are getting weary of promises. Cold fingers cannot knit for Red Cross and it is hard for cold fingers to unclasp pocket-books.

We do not wish to be unpatriotic in any statement we make and are ready to serve in these troublous times to the fullest, but this coal proposition is getting to be a tragedy.

In Tecumseh our ornamental street lights have been discontinued until the fuel question becomes more favorable, electric signs are to be cut out, churches, theaters and lodges must go without fuel and the farmer must scurry about for wood to burn until coal gets to moving. This is hard medicine to take, but our people must be kept warm in some way if possible.

PLASTER JERSEY TOWN WITH CIRCUS "POSTERS"

During the making of Goldwyn's splendid photo spectacle starring Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," from Margaret Mayo's well-known play, no detail, no matter how trivial it seemed to be, was overlooked to lend accuracy and color to the production.

In the community of Englewood, N. J., Goldwyns rented circus was put through its paces and a street parade was held, every bit of this parade being filmed for inclusion in the film. Prior to the parade a bill posting squad descended upon Englewood and plastered every avenue of the town with giant posters announcing the coming of the circus.

Therefore, in the picture when you see the huge animal cages rolling through the streets and watch the elephants help push these cages up steep inclines you see a poster bedecked town heralding the very attraction you see passing in review.

A small detail, perhaps, but it gives the rest of the ensuing scene accuracy and color which it would not have had otherwise.

"Polly of the Circus," the magnificent $250,000 production, will be the Christmas day attraction, matinee and night at the Bradley Opera house mainee at 3:00 p. m. doors open at 2:30 evening at 7:00 p. m. doors open at 6:30.

Mae Marsh was seen here first as the Little Sister in "The Birth of a Nation" next in the principal role in "Intolerance" and now as the charming "Polly" in this wonderful play the classic of the big tops.

RED CROSS NEWS

The Red Cross Concert Company will give a concert in the Town Hall, Petersburg, Friday evening. The following members will take part: Mrs. Fred B. Wood, Mrs. Robert Moore, Mrs. Ella Hodges, Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy, Mr. W. S. Dickinson, Mr. Fred Dickinson, Mr. Roger Waring, Mr. Floyd Juckett and Mr. J. D. Service. Mr. Fred B. Wood and Dr. P. B. Hardy will drive the company over.

On Tuesday next the company will perform in Morenci.

If anyone has a cupboard suitable for surgical dressings, that they will loan, please communicate with Dr. Bredow; she needs one at Headquarters.

Dr. Bredow wishes to notify all workers in surgical dressings that Dr. Gertrude Jones, the head of surgical dressings for the county, was in Tecumseh Thursday morning, and gave instruction for the big drive in absorbent pads, and asked for 500 for next Monday. The makers of dressings have been working every day this week, and helpers are urgently needed for Saturday afternoon. It is easy work and no previous experience is necessary, as there will be teachers to show you how to make them. Everyone is requested to bring a coverall apron, a covering for the head and a pair of scissors. With the terrible battles going on at the front, the cry for surgical dressings is getting louder and louder; for lack of a dressing a life may be lost.

Instructions have been received for the making of seven new kinds of dressings; and work will be started on them as soon as the absorbent pads have been disposed of.

HIGH-GRADE BACONS CAN'T BE CHEAP

First because there are so many pigs that have to be rejected, are too large, or too fat or too lean.

Then a high grade Bacon goes through more processes than others.

And the processes are more expensive, too.

But it's all worth while,
And high-grade Bacon, like ours, isn't dearer than the others, if it does cost more per lb.

Since the phonograph is to be in your house and your eyes will see it for many years and your ears will hear the songs and music it plays, doesn't plain common sense tell you that the way to buy a phonograph is to have a Columbia Grafonola sent home for a complete trial, you to decide then whether or not you want to keep it? STUDEBAKER SERVICE

Sixty three years ago a country blacksmith by the name of Studebaker began making wagons for his neighbors at the rate of two a year. He put such perfect material and workmanship into his wagons that the demand grew until his business has become the great Studebaker Corporation, manufacturing wagons, buggies, harness and automobiles.

All these years the principles of QUALITY and HONEST WORKMANSHIP began by the first Studebaker have been carried out by the Corporation. Inside and out their goods are as perfect as the "One-Horse Shay."

To day they have $18,000,000 invested in their various plants, and outside of Ford have the largest automobile factories in Detroit. They are the largest producers of fine cars in the world.

We have taken on the complete Studebaker line of Buggies, Wagons, Harness, Automobiles, and Commercial cars. We have been through their factories and seen the cars given every minute detail of construction. We believe there is no other firm which gives so much for the money in QUALITY SERVICE and SATISFACTION.

For several years the Auto service for this district has been handled by a Sales Company in Toledo. The Home Office has been dissatisfied with the service their customers were getting. Last month the Sales Company was taken over by the Home Office and their own representatives put in charge at Toledo, so today you can get the real STUDEBAKER SERVICE which means the best service in the world. Every user of a Studebaker car regardless how old, will receive the same care and attention.

Are Your Hens on Strike?

If your hens are on strike—if they're not producing eggs like they useter—it's due to one of three things that always cause strikes in labor unions. They're either demanding higher wages, shorter hours, or better working conditions.

Which is it?

It's not likely they're dissatisfied with their pay—you doubtless feed them generously.

Nor can they kick on the hours, when you give them their own time to attend to their duties.

It MUST be working conditions.

Are you providing your hens with a decent place in which to work—a comfortable, weather-proof hen-house, equipped with commodious, clean nests, ample roosts and sanitary surroundings? If not you can't blame them for striking, and what's more, they'll keep it up until they get their rights. You ought to know enough about feminine determination to know that!

LET US ARBITRATE THE STRIKE. Come in and we'll show you how, for ridiculously little money, you buy good, durable Southern Pine or other lumber sufficient to fit your hens out with a modern egg factory in which to work. Then they'll be happy and productive, you'll be happy and prosperous and we'll have the consciousness of a good deed done.

When you realize what a motor truck will do for your business, don't make the mistake of taking on the burden of too big a truck; don't buy a makeshift, and don't wait too long to buy.

To-day you can get a Maxwell One-Ton, Worm-Drive Truck for several hundred dollars less than you can buy any other one-ton truck of equal specifications. How long this low price will last, no one can tell.

We expect to sell Maxwell trucks at a premium in a few months.

Maxwell Truck Costs Less To Operate

Besides this lowest first cost, a Maxwell Truck has the lowest upkeep cost of any real truck, even lower than horses.

—it uses very much less gasoline per mile, with or without load,

—it weighs hundreds of pounds less than any other one-ton truck,

—is therefore easier on tires than any other one-ton truck,

—is just as strong and enduring as the heaviest one-ton truck made.

Maxwell Truck Immediately Lowers Delivery Costs

The Maxwell One-Ton, Worm-Drive Truck has power enough and the chassis strength enough for a bigger, heavier truck.

Its rugged, sturdy chassis, from its reserve-powered motor to its unbreakable rear axle, is built for endurance and dependability.

It has the speed and ability to get there and back, that is not possible in a heavier truck, or with horses.

Its spare parts cost very little.

—and it will increase your delivery efficiency and immediately lower your delivery costs at least fifty per cent.

The MAXWELL ONE-TON, WORM-DRIVE TRUCK is the only truck for you to buy—its efficiency, endurance, low first-cost, and low operating cost break all previous truck records.

Come in quick and see for yourself the figures on Maxwell trucking and operating costs that are the wonder of the transportation world. Cash or easy terms while our allotment lasts.

Statements That May Be Investigated. Testimony of Tecumseh Citizens

When a Tecumseh citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Tecumseh resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

C. H. Bartholomew, shoemaker, E. Pottawatamie St., says: "My kidneys were out of order and troubled me by acting irregularly. I had sharp catches in my back and the pain was so sharp, I could hardly move. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug store and they soon put my back and kidneys in good order. I gladly recommend them."

Detroit (special)—"The biggest drive that Michigan has ever seen."

This is the way state headquarters talks of the campaign in Michigan for members for the American National Red Cross, which begins on Monday, December 17, and ends on Christmas Eve, December 24.

"Nothing less than a Red Cross member from every family in the state will satisfy us, and we are working for much more," said Sidney T. Miller, state chairman, in discussing plans for the campaign. "We are setting our goal high, but, judging from the expressions of enthusiasm received to date, we will come very close to accomplishing our objective."

"Michigan now has about 500,000 members and our effort will be to increase the number by half. There is no reason why each member of the family should not be a member from the youngest up. Our slogan is three quarters of a million for Michigan's

NURSE ANNA FERGUSON HEARD FROM

The following letter has lately been received by Mrs. Joe Kratzer from one of our Red Cross nurses, Miss Anna Ferguson "Somewhere in France" and we think her many friends in Tecumseh will be glad to hear from her.

"Somewhere in France"

My Dear Sister:

By this time, no doubt you have my "boat letter" and know I'm safe and well. We had a very pleasant journey was not sea sick at all and never missed a meal while on ship board, had a few stormy days but did not mind them and was on deck most all the time. Our time was taken up with boat drills, French lessons and reading, saying nothing of eating. How I did enjoy the afternoon tea and little cakes. Had my stateroom all alone, but the girls used to come up and play 500 until late every night. You see the lights in the lounge had to be out by 11:30 but our state room lights could be left burning and as there was an electric fan in each roof wesure werecomfy. The sunsets were beautiful, I never realized the beauty of a sunset before. We were protected on every side and I never felt one bit afraid, in actf hated to say good-bye to our grand old boat.

The latter part of our journey consisted of a long train ride, French trains travel very slow. It was our first experience of eating rations, but we enjoyed them and had lots of fun. Every little ways, the French "sisters" would serve us coffee, not just like our make but it warmed you up. One little place we stopped at for a few minutes, a little mother greeted us with a two year old babe, he had a kiss for every one (made me think of Betsey Ross). His father was in the war.

We are nicely located in a pretty little French town, are now in hotels but expect our hospital will soon be ready.

It is a quaint little place, beautiful trees, lanes and brooks and wonderful homes and hotels. Oxen are used instead of horses and the women do most all the work, few men are left. One little woman told us she had lost husband and son and eleven male relatives in war. She works all day and spends her evenings writing to other mother's boys now at the front. I say as you will say, "God bless our mothers."

Fuel is very scarce and lights and foodstuffs very high. We have good food and very well cooked. The French people are very good to us and have made us feel as if their home was ours.

The weather is not cold but damp Winter does not begin until December here. It is raining today but have been on a long walk and as their roads are so wonderful, not muddy at all, have just enjoyed every minute of it.

We stopped at a little store and had some cocoa. You cannot buy sweets but on certain days and you know one gets to looking forward to these days like Xmas.

Well dear this is a long letter. Our mail is all censored but don't believe much of this will be cut out. U. S. mail coming here is not censored so write often. You may not get this until Xmas time, Mail is sure but slow.

Give my love to all the folks and lots for yourself.

Good bye sister dear write soon ed and so good don't forget to write and often to your Anna Ferguson

KELLY INGRAM

[illegible] was Kelly Ingram, he was Alabama's son
[illegible] whistled "Yankee Doodle," [illegible] he stood beside his gun;
[illegible] was laughter in his make-up there was manhood in his face
And he knew the best traditions and the courage of his race:
Now there's not a heart among us but should swell with loyal pride,
When he thinks of Kelly Ingram and the splendid way he died.
On the swift Destroyer Cassin he was merely gunner's mate,
[illegible] up there today I fancy he is standing with the great.
[illegible] that grim day last October his position on the craft
[illegible] that portion of the vessel which the sailors christen aft;
[illegible] were deep sea bombs beside him to be dropped upon the Hun
[illegible] makes women folks his victims and then gloats in what he's done.
[illegible] the lookout came a warning, came the cry all sailors fear, [illegible] torpedo was approaching, and the vessel's doom was near;
Ingram saw the streak of danger, but he saw a little more,
A greater menace faced them than that missile had in store;
[illegible] those deep sea bombs beside him were not thrown beneath the wave
Every man aboard the Cassin soon would find a watery grave.
It was death for him to linger, but he figured if he ran
And quit his post of duty, 'twould be death for every man;
So he stood at his position, threw those depth bombs overboard,
And when that torpedo struck them he went forth to meet his Lord.
Oh I don't know how to say it, but these whole United States
Should remember Kelly Ingram—he who died to save his mates.

INCOME TAX PAYMENTS

The following has been received by us from the Internal Revenue service Collector's Office 1st District, Mich. Detroit, under date of December 15, 1917.

The Government is going to send out men to instruct taxpayers in preparing income tax returns. It will be up to the taxpayers to hunt up these men, who will be sent into every county seat town and some other towns besides, to meet the people. Postmasters, bankers, and newspapers will be able to tell when the government income tax man will be around and where to find him. He will [illegible] you to [illegible] money, and re[illegible] from your brow. Returns for 1917 must be made between January 1 and March 1, 1918

"The Government recognizes," Collector of Internal Revenue Brad said today, "that many persons experience a good deal of difficulty in filling out income tax returns. It recognizes too, that taxpayers resident at points where collector's offices are not easily accessible find it hard to get proper instruction in the law. Next year, when every married person living with wife or husband and having a net income of $2000 and every unmarried person not the head of a family and having a net income of $1,000 for the year 1917 must make return of income on the prescribed form, there will be hundreds in every community seeking light on the law, and help in executing their returns. This and every other collection district in the nation will be divided into districts, with the county as the unit and a government officer informed in the income tax assigned to each district. He will spend from 1 to 5 days in each county, very likely in the court house at the county seat town. In cities where there are collector branch offices, he will be there, and in other cities possibly at the city hall. My office will in due time advise postmasters and bankers and send out notices to newspapers stating when the officers will be in each county. It will be unnecessary for prospective taxpayers to ask my office for forms on which to make returns. The officer who visits their county will have a supply and will leave some with the postmaster and probably with local bankers.

"It may be stated, that 'net income' is the remainder after subtracting expenses from gross income. Personal, family or living expense is not expense in meaning of the law, the exemption covering such expenses. The new exemptions of $1000 and $2000 will add tens of thousands of taxpayers in this district, as practically every farmer, man and salary worker will be required to make return and pay tax. The law requires the tax payer to seek out the collector. The tax payer has to go to the government and if he doesn't within the prescribed time the government will go to him, with its penalties."

SOCIAL EVENING OF MACCABEES

At the close of their regular meeting Monday night the K. O. T. M. and L. O. T. M. enjoyed a social visit. A short program and a Christmas tree were among the pleasant events of the evening. The program was as follows:

Floyd Freeman as old Santa Claus delivered the presents in a right merry manner.

Later the company enjoyed cards. Taken all together the evening was a most delightful one.

HOUSE VOTES U. S. DRY, 282 TO 128

Resolution to Submit to States Prohibition Amendment Is Adopted.

SENATE APPROVES 47 TO 8

Amendment by Rep. Lea Providing That Light Wines and Beers Be Excepted Is Rejected by Large Majority.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The senate agreed to the house amendments to the Sheppard nation-wide prohibition resolution and sent the measure to the White House to receive the president's signature. The action of the senate was taken by a rising vote. Vice President Marshall announced the count to be 47 to 8. Senator Borah of Idaho, although a "dry," launched a fight against the house amendments. He declared them to be clearly unconstitutional and predicted they might invalidate the whole measure. He insisted that congress had no right to fix a time limit for the ratification of the amendment by the states.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The resolution to submit to the states a national prohibition amendment to the federal constitution was adopted by the house.

With a vote of two-thirds required for its approval the vote of the house announced by Speaker Clark was 282 to 128, or 25 more than required.

A wild demonstration took place in the house. W. J. Bryan appeared on the floor and took a seat with Representative Webb as corecipient of congratulations.

An amendment by Representative Lea of California, providing that prohibition provisions should not apply to light wines and beer was rejected by a rising vote of 232 to 107.

What Dry Amendment Provides.

The resolution for a dry amendment to the federal constitution adopted by the lower house of congress provides that the amendment must be ratified by the necessary number of states within seven years. The senate already has adopted a similar resolution, but specifies that it must be ratified within six years. Only an agreement as to the number of years now is necessary to put the question before the states. 36 states must ratify the amendment. Twenty-seven states already are dry.

Representative Gard of Ohio, leading the opposition, declared the amendment proposed an invasion of the police power of the states and threatened the unanimity of the American people in winning the war.

The debate began, amid a round of applause from the Democratic side, by Chairman Webb of the judiciary committee.

The great body of Americans he contended want to leave the whole matter just as it is now.

No Union Label on Whisky.

Representative Cooper of Ohio, for the amendment, told the house:

"You look into a hat band or a coat to see if it bears a union label, but you can look in vain into the whisky bottle for a union label."

Representative Dyer of Missouri, opposing it, declared the issue nothing more or less than whether congress shall stand by "Dinwiddie and the Anti-Saloon league who think more of this issue of the wet and the dry than they do of the issue of whether America or Germany shall win this great war."

Reds Are Driven From Rostov—Civil War Is on In Southern Russia.

Stockholm, Dec. 19.—A second defeat for the bolsheviki forces in southern Russia and the capture of Rostov by patriotic Cossacks were reported in a dispatch from Haparanda. Rostov is in Ukrainia, and on Saturday the bolsheviki war office in Petrograd announced its capture from the Cossacks with the aid of warships from the Black sea fleet that had gone over to the bolsheviki cause.

ORDERED TO REPORT

A telegram was received by Lieut. Perry Satterthwaite Thursday evening, ordering him to report for duty at once at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Virginia. He left today on the 11:17 train.

DICKINSON—McWILLIAMS

MISS ZORAH DICKINSON AND MELVIN McWILLIAMS MARRIED

It was a very pretty ceremony which was performed last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Poucher, uniting the lives of their daughter Zorah M. Dickinson and Melvin J. McWilliams of Holloway.

At 5:30 to Mendelshon's Wedding March, played by Miss Margaret McWilliams, the couple, unattended, entered the parlor where before a bank of greenery, Rev. W. A. Rex performed the ceremony.

Following a splendid 3-course supper was served by Mrs. Polly Mattis with waiters Misses Genevieve and Muriel Halladay, Lillian Kennedy, Gladys Bowen, Florence Willnow and Doris Wood.

The evening was passed happily, the newly-weds outstaying their guests when they left on a short trip. They will for the present live with his parents at Holloway.

A company of some fifty attended the wedding, many coming from Holloway and Tipton, also Miss Doris Wood of St. Johns.

The home was gay with Christmas decorations, bright red and green and much tinsel being everywhere—as is also the rice this morning—all symbolic of the bright and happy lfe their friends wish Mr. and Mrs. McWiliams.

Only one cloud marred the little bride's happiness and that was the absence of her brother Clare who is now in Waco, Texas, with Co. B.

There were many gifts for the young people, no small item being a check for $100 from the groom's father. The rest was made up of silver, linen, cut glass, china and some furniture.

Mr. McWilliams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McWilliams of Holloway and has a host of friends in town, while Zorah is known and loved by us all. She graduated from the T. H. S. last June and for some time has sung in the Presbyterian choir to which church she is a faithful adherent.

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS" AT THE BRADLEY CHRISTMAS DAY

Goldwyn pictures have developed something distinctly new in motion picture photography in the production of "Polly of the Circus" which will be seen at the Bradley Opera House Christmas day, both matinee and night. Under the direction of Chas. T. Horan the electrical staff devised a method for taking a clear picture of the moon. The success of it is shown in one of the scenes where the moon is seen just over the "big top," standing out in the picture with unusual clearness.

Much of "Polly of the Circus" was filmed at night, owing to the character of the story, and at the same time many of the scenes were exteriors. As a result the lighting effects were a very important item in the making of the production. Among the big night scenes are the departure of the circus from the little town, the circus performance under the big top, and a spectacular fire. The vividness of these scenes is an achievement in photography.

"Polly of the Circus," which was adapted from Margaret Mayo's famous play of circus life, has seven big spectacles, but it does not depend on these for its interest. Thru it runs a very sweet and, at times, pathetic story and romance. Miss Marsh plays "Polly," the little circus waif, who is left an orphan, and raised by Toby, the clown, until she grows up and becomes a bareback rider. Then she is injured in an accident and taken to the home of the minister in a little town, where there begins a romance which has many interruptons before in reaches a happy conclusion.

Miss Marsh will be remembered by patrons of the Bradley as "the little sister" in "The Birth of a Nation" also as the leading star in "Intolerance," the two largest pictures ever produced." Polly of the Circus" is a close third.

"Polly of the Circus" is in eight big acts requiring over two hours to present. In it is a complete circus, so real you can smell the sawdust. Bring the children, it's better than a circus day. Matinee starts promptly at 3 p. m. The first evening show at 7:00. Come early and see it from the start, also assure yourself of a good seat.

RED CROSS NEWS

Important Notice

Sec. 204 of Public Bill No. 90 provides that family allowances, not exceeding $50.00 per month shall be granted to the dependent families of enlisted men, upon application to the War Risk Insurance Bureau by an enlisted man, or by or on behalf of any prospective beneficiary.

Every enlisted man in the service will be asked to file a report concerning his dependents. Upon the information contained in this report will be based the family allowance to be granted to the family of the enlisted man.

The War Risk bureau desires that the filing of application by prospective beneficiaries be done through the Red Cross.

If there are any dependent wives, children, divorced wives having decree of alimony, or other dependent relatives of enlisted men in Tecumseh, who consider that they are entitled to these family allowances, apply to Mr. Chas. Burridge, chairman of the Red Cross, who will take the matter up for you.

Mrs. Thos. McCann is chairman of the drive for members, and owing to her unavoidable absence, Mrs. Richard Mead will be chairman pro tem. Our quota is 150 new members before Christmas. Every household where every member belongs to the Red Cross will be allowed to append a card with 100 per cent. on it to their window flag. How many 100 per cent. cards are we going to have in Tecumseh? At the best, it is little enough we can do to lighten the burden of those at the front. We must have dressings, saw dust has been used for lack of gauze. We must have hospitals, or our defenders will die. Everyone of us, who heard Dr. Perry's lecture last week will not wait to be asked, but will rush with his contribution to do his very little bit. We will also be glad to accept renewas of membership now, instead of next spring.

New members: Robbie Burns Moore, Mr. Lewis John Hook, Rev. W. J. Balmer, Mrs. W. J. Balmer, Miss Dorothy Balmer, Miss Jean Eleanor Hodges, Miss Helene Deborah Hodges, Mrs. Adelbert Westcott, Miss Kathryn Reed, Mrs. G. R. Newsom, Mrs. Martha Nye, Mrs. John Dibble, Miss Rhoba Arner, Miss Louise Arner, Mr. Wylie McCann, Miss Mary Eleanor McCann, Mr. Alphonzo Geng, Mrs. Geo. Kempf, Mrs. W. W. Shurtz, Mrs. A. W. Pocklington, Mr. Fred. Dickinson Jr., Mr. Benj. Lawson.

In future, in order to save fuel, the Headquarters will only be open Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, and in the evenings when there are classes. Apply to Mrs. Richard Mead for use of the Headquarters for evening classes.

Mrs. Sena Crane will not be at the Headquarters during Christmas week. She will resume her work on the first Wednesday after New Years.

All workers are requested to bring in finished goods on Wednesday after New Year's to be shipped the following day. There will be no further delivery of goods in the meantime.

Mr. Will Eccles is making knitting needles. They say he fairly ate up the first consignment he began work on.

Mr. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons has donated 100 copies of the Columbus March with chorus to the Red Cross. Copies at 25c each can be obtained from Mrs. Fred B. Wood. The entire proceeds go to the Tecumseh Red Crss. The music is very catchy and has been sung a number of times by the Red Cross Concert Company.

The Red Cross Concert Company gave a concert on Tuesday evening at the Methodist church, Morenci. Owing to the bad weather, the audience was not as large as we would have wished it. The collection netted nearly $36.00. Mr. Wilson Aldrich and Dr. Hardy drove the company over. The company has raised $862.00 to date.

Mrs. Hardy leaves for Litchfield on Saturday for a Red Cross rally, the proceeds to go to the French soldiers, our brave Allies. During her absence Mrs. R. T. Mead will write the Red Cross news.

Jenny C. Law Hardy,
Publicity Director.

Miss Gladys Mead is clerking at the Novelty Store during the holiday rush.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Thomas Russell and wife were in town Thursday to look at some real estate, calling at the home of H. W. Stevens, who had the business in charge. Mr. Stevens went with them in the car. While driving north on Oneida street, they were run into by a car coming from the east, driven by Mr. Sherman of Milan. One of the rear wheels was taken off the Russell car and the people in the two cars were thoroughly shaken up. The icy condition of the road was in part responsible for the accident. No blame s attached to either party.

Are Your Hens on Strike?

If your hens are on strike—if they're not producing eggs like they useter—it's due to one of three things that always cause strikes in labor unions. They're either demanding higher wages, shorter hours, or better working conditions.

Which is it?

It's not likely they're dissatisfied with their pay—you doubtless feed them generously.

Nor can they kick on the hours, when you give them their own time to attend to their duties.

It MUST be working conditions.

Are you providing your hens with a decent place in which to work—a comfortable, weather-proof hen-house, equipped with commodious, clean nests, ample roosts and sanitary surroundings? If not you can't blame them for striking, and what's more, they'll keep it up until they get their rights. You ought to know enough about feminine determination to know that!

LET US ARBITRATE THE STRIKE. Come in and we'll show you how, for ridiculously little money, you buy good, durable Southern Pine or other lumber sufficient to fit your hens out with a modern egg factory in which to work. Then they'll be happy and productive, you'll be happy and prosperous and we'll have the consciousness of a good deed done.

KAISER SEEKS PEACE

German and Austrian Foreign Ministers Plan Negotiations.

Russ "Reds" Invite All Nations to Join Their Parley With the Huns.

Petrograd, Dec. 19.—The evening papers announce that Leon Trotzky, bolsheviki foreign minister, has notified the allies' embassies that the armistice has reached definite results and that peace negotiations will begin, and has asked them to participate or to say whether they wish peace.

Up to this evening the embassies had not received the communication and an informal conference of the allies' diplomats is said to have reached no definite decision.

The German and Austrian foreign ministers, Dr. von Kuehlmann and Count Czernin, have notified Trotzky that they will arrive at Brest-Litovsk Tuesday to begin negotiations for a general European peace.

Amsterdam, Dec. 19.—A semiofficial dispatch received here from Vienna, says:

"The governments of Austria-Hungary, Germany, Bulgaria, Turkey and Russia will follow up the armistice as speedily as possible with peace negotiations. The selection of plenipotentiaries now is proceeding and pending their arrival the armistice delegates at Brest-Litovsk have started informal peace negotiations."

Dozen Women Kept Busy Six Days a Week Patching Holes and Rents in Guards' Clothing.

Camp MacArthur, Waco—Economy is the watchword of the Michigan and Wisconsin guardsmen in training here

Every scrap of paper is picked up and saved, all the bones from the kitchen are kept, every empty bottle is laid away and any rags, whether parts of uniforms or the aprons of the cooks must be preserved. When there is an accumulation, the collection is turned over to the camp quartermaster.

The bones, bottles and rags are sold The parts of uniforms are saved, cleaned and used to patch uniforms for this thrift move on the part of the government has extended to the clothing of its fighting men also.

A dozen women keep needles busy all day, six days a week, at the camp quartermaster's building. They patch and mend and close up rents.

Nor are shoes thrown away now when they are worn. They are turned over to cobblers, who make repairs whenever possible and then they are returned to the original wearer, just as are the uniforms.

Once upon a time old shoes were destroyed. So were old uniforms, but that time has passed. The soldier may be patched and cobbled, but there is less waste.

SHIP POST TO PIEZ

Chicagoan Made General Manager of Fleet Corporation.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The senate adopted a resolution by Senator Hardinge of Ohio to investigate the shipping board, after sharp debate.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Charles Piez of Chicago was appointed general manager of the shipping board's emergency fleet corporation, succeeding Admiral Harris, who has resigned. Mr. Piez has been vice president of the corporation.

General reorganization of the fleet corporation will follow. Rear Admiral Bowles, aid to Admiral Harris, will have an important place. James Heyworth of Chicago will have full charge of wooden construction. Charles Day will head the construction department.

It was announced that Admiral Harris resigned because of his insistence that the offices of the corporation be transferred to Philadelphia.

The shipbuilding program, Chairman Hurley said, is in better shape than ever before since it was launched. Conditions on the Pacific coast are excellent. Ships are being turned out as fast as human labor can accomplish it.

Altogether there are now under construction or under contract $8,395,308 deadweight tons of shipping.

Admiral Harris has asked that he be reassigned to the post of chief of the navy bureau of yards and docks, which he had before succeeding Rear Admiral Capps as fleet corporation manager less than a month ago.

Chairman Hurley of the shipping board, also a Chicago man, denied rumors that he was preparing to resign.

PRO-WAR PARTY WINS IN CANADA

DRAFT VOTE WINS 87 SEATS

Election in Dominion While Nominally for Control of Parliament, Was Really Referendum on Army Draft.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—Conscription has been confirmed and the unionist government has been returned to power by the Canadian domestic vote. Returns from all over Canada indicate that the government of Sir Robert Borden has been elected to administer Canadian affairs for another five years and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is as definitely defeated as in the reciprocity election of 1911.

Figures indicate that the French portion of Canada has gone heavily for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and English constituencies have returned men who will support the union government measures and maintain Premier Borden in office.

Establish Safe Lead.

Official returns showed that, with sixteen districts to be heard from, the unionists had won 128 seats and the opposition 87, with four seats deferred.

Early returns at Vancouver showed unionist candidates were leading in British Columbia with big majorities, with the exception of one constituency.

Returns from Toronto, Hamilton, London and other districts in which the war is strongly supported, indicate that the government received overwhelming support.

In the counties of Kent and Westmoreland, New Brunswick, however, it was believed Laurier supporters had been returned. Their majorities ranged from 1,200 to 1,600.

Quebec Against War.

Quebec province has 65 seats and of these the government has won only three. Two ministers, Hon. F. E. Blondin, postmaster general, now overseas with a French-Canadian battalion, and Hon. Albert Sevigny, secretary of state, were among those who lost. Seats will be found for both elsewhere, it is said. The general impression here is that the province has gone as everybody expected it would—solid quit-the-war-Laurier and anti-British. The French-Canadians are highly elated at their cleanup.

Ontario went overwhelmingly unionist, thus protesting against the Quebec mandate against conscription as represented by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was defeated in Ottawa, one of the twin seats for which he ran.

Conscription the Issue.

The election, while nominally for the control of parliament, was really a referendum on conscription.

The unionists, under the leadership of Sir Robert Borden, passed a conscription act but could not enforce it in the face of an opposing minority, known as the Anticonscription liberals and nationalists, under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Messrs. Bourasa and Lavergne.

On the decision today rested the fate of the union government and, in effect, the further participation of Canada in the war. If returned to power, the unionists stand pledged to enforce selective service and thereby expand the ranks of the Canadians overseas.

Army Law Attacked.

Against conscription, and in spirit opposed to Canada's participation in the war, the nationalists-Laurier-liberals are pledged, in the event of victory, to shelve the present army law and set into motion the slow-moving machinery for a "referendum."

Big Drive for Recruits.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—A great drive for recruits throughout the middle West was ordered started by Col. John S. Dennis, commanding the division of the British-Canadian recruiting mission, following word of the adoption of conscription in Canada. Arrangements are underway here for a celebration of the conscription victory.

CHARGE PACKERS CONTROL FOOD

Prices of Meat, Canned Goods, Dairy Products Set in Chicago.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Francis J. Heney, special trust investigator for the federal trade commission, stated that the packing interests are in reality a mammoth food trust which has the entire country in its grasp.

This combination, he asserted, extends its control not only over the entire meat market but also poultry, eggs, lard products, leather, animal feeds, grain, canned vegetables and fruits.

Heney said that completeness of the meat monopoly is shown by the fact that every stockyard in the United States is controlled by the big Chicago packing triumvirate, Armour & Co., Swift & Co., and Morris & Co. The Wilson company, which absorbed the Sulzberger and the Cudahy companies, he said, also is "in on the combination" to a lesser degree.

Heney asserted that the disclosures so far made in this investigation are but an infinitely small part of those to come, and, he continued:

"This trust, we intend to show, absolutely sets the prices to the American consumer of meats, poultry, meat by-products, leather, grain and canned goods, including meats, vegetables and fruits."

Railways Owned by Packers.

Evidence established before the commission that Armour & Co. and other packers are large owners of the stock of the Chicago Stock Yards company, was backed up by proof that the packing interests control the stockyards and facilities.

The Chicago Junction Railways and Stockyards company is the operating company. It is owned by the New Jersey corporation, which, in turn, is owned by the Maine corporation. Directors of the operating company were shown to be Harry Veeder, attorney for Swift & Co.; Arthur Meeker, vice president of Armour & Co.; J. A. Spoor, trustee of the estate of Morris & Co.; Silas H. Strawn, attorney for the packers; B. Fitzgerald, a relative of the Swifts; H. A. Perento, manager of the Central Manufacturing district; E. V. R. Trayer and F. H. Prince, president of the New Jersey corporation.

It was the first time the names of Armour, Swift and Morris were [illegible] linked with the affairs of the Chicago Stockyards company.

It was hinted also that the big packers, through interlocking directorates, had some hand in the Libby, Cudahy, Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, Anglo-American, Hammond, Lipton and international companies.

Sought to Sidetrack Agents.

Testimony was introduced to show that when the packing interests learned of the federal trade commission's investigation they redoubled their efforts to throw the investigators off the track of the real ownership of the Chicago Stockyards company by a hasty distribution of the warrant shares held under a trusteeship for unnamed owners.

The same day that investigators visited the office of Frederick K. Prince & Co., in Boston, where the share warrants were held, 34,480 shares were divided into 17 portions. After that the share warrants were transferred a number of times.

Profits Tax Involved.

Edward N. Manning, bookkeeper for Prince & Co. and "dummy" secretary of the Chicago Stockyards company, was unable to explain how returns on this highly profitable corporation were made to the government for the purpose of income and surtaxes, both corporate and individual.

So far as the evidence goes, there is nothing to show that the government received the just taxes due from the enormous profits.

Commissioner Colver was especially interested in this phase, and the commission intends to call the matter to the attention of Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper and to give him access to the commission's records.

TO QUIT SECRET SERVICE?

William J. Flynn Said to Have Tendered Resignation—May Be Gotham Police Chief.

New York, Dec. 24.—After it had been announced that William J. Flynn, chief of the United States secret service, was considered by Mayor-elect Hylan for police commissioner, and that there was a strong probability of his appointment, it was learned that he tendered his resignation to the treasury department a month ago. Overwork in running down German spies, enemy aliens, and counterfeiters was the reason he gave for asking to be relieved of his duties. He said emphatically that the police commissionership had not entered into the matter of his resignation, which has not been accepted, according to the chief's friends.

"I have been in harness nearly thirty years and I have needed a rest for a long time," he said. "I have not sought the commissionership and am not looking for it now. Mr. Hylan asked me to see him and we may have another interview soon."

KEET BABY POISONED

Piersol Says Plotters Gave Child Drug.

Twelve Others Implicated in Abduction Case—Planned to Seize Banker.

Springfield, Mo., Dec. 24.—Claude O. Piersol, convicted kidnaper of Baby Lloyd Keet, has confessed to Sheriff Mackey, asserting the baby was killed by a drug administered by the "Mysterious Riley" to keep it quiet.

The signed confession, made public, implicates 12 other persons, including those now under arrest.

Maxie Adams, seventeen years old, recently released on a charge of attempting to kidnap C. A. Clement, was rearrested as a result of Piersol's confession. Other warrants have been issued.

Piersol, only twenty years old, who vowed, with a noose around his neck, that he was innocent, and won mercy from a mob bent on lynching him, revealed a wholesale abduction plot.

J. Holland Keet, the baby's father, was to have been kidnaped when he met the kidnapers to deliver the $50,000 ransom demanded.

Ed. L. Sanford, vice-president of the Holland Banking company and chairman of the state highway commission, also was marked for abduction. He was to have been held for $100,000 ransom.

When Maxie Adams was rearrested he offered to confess, the authorities say. Taylor Adams, held at Marshfield on a kidnaping charge in the Keet case, also has expressed a desire to tell his part, it is reported.

Piersol, who is under a 35-year sentence for kidnaping, and is awaiting trial for the baby's murder, named Riley as the leader of the gang who plotted the abduction. He says the man now under arrest is not the "right" Riley.

It was Riley, according to Piersol, who climbed into the window of the Keet home and took the baby. He says Riley handed the child to Dick Carter, who carried him to a waiting car, where he was received by a woman member of the band.

Piersol took an active part in the abduction, but declares that at no time did he ever touch the baby. He was stationed, he said, at the Keet home with Cletus Adams, Maxie Adams, Dick Carter and others, whom he names, but who have not yet been arrested.

The baby was then taken to a deserted house close to the Greene and Christian county line.

SCHEME TO HELP FARMERS

Secretary of War Baker Plans Farm Aid by Furloughs Given Soldiers.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Secretary Baker has a plan to permit farmer boys in the army to return to their homes at periodical intervals to assist in crop production. He outlined it to a delegation of New York farmers who protested against conditions created by the scarcity of labor.

William Afman and sons, Ben and Tyler Afman, of Grand Rapids, each paid fines of $50 in Justice Cresswell's court for feeding hogs and chickens on the carcasses of horses at their slaughter house, south of the city.

Kenneth Stine of Altona, near Big Rapids, while bringing home the cattle after he had been hunting, struck a calf with the butt of his gun, the calf kicked and discharged the gun. The bullet went through Stine's left hand.

Though seriously injured when their automobile got out of their control and plunged over a 90-foot embankment, Ralph Case, wealthy former lumberman, and R. H. Meyers, banker, both of Kinsley, near Traverse City, will live. The machine was smashed.

George Phillips, 65 years old, of Cladwin, dropped dead in an attack of apoplexy on a train coming from Gladwin to Bay City. He has been a Michigan Central engineer for 40 years. Phillips was the second oldest engineer in service on the Michigan Central.

Norman E. Buckner, Pontiac real estate and insurance man, pleaded guilty in a Birmingham justice court to conducting a loan agency and charging usurious rates of interest. He was fined the maximum, $100. Officers allege they found evidence of interest as high as 108 per cent a year being charged.

To enable the University of Michigan to prepare teachers of vocational training to meet the needs of Michigan manufacturers, the industrial education department at the university under Prof. George E. Myers is conducting a survey of Michigan industry. The university is also preparing to give industrial training in extension courses.

Loren English, former Flint policeman, now a Canadian soldier, escaped the Halifax disaster by a few hours. English, whose regiment was in Halifax waiting for orders to go overseas, got a four-day furlough the night before the disaster. Before leaving Canada he was informed that 150 members of his company, who were working on the docks in Halifax, were killed by the blast.

Dr. Frank Rice, of Owosso, medical member of the county draft board, fell and broke his right leg while making a call. The leg was broken in two places last spring when a street car hit him. He now has a $50,000 damage suit pending against the Michigan Railway company as a result of that accident. The physician was going to see the same patient who called him when he was injured the first time.

According to the monthly report from the state free employment bureaus, 10,287 applications were received for positions during November, while jobs were furnished 8,326.

Disbarred from practice in the federal court, sentenced to one year and fined $500, Maurice Sugar, a Detroit attorney who opposed the draft, has been taken to the Detroit house of correction, where he will stay for the next 12 months. He pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to register and obstructing the draft when he appeared before Federal Judge Tuttle.

Prince Max of Baden Who Warned Germany

Prince Max of Baden in his address to the Baden upper chamber declared Germany's sword alone would never bring triumph. Speaking on the American declaration of war he said: "Wilson has no right to set himself up as a judge of the world. Let us not, however, deceive ourselves. The American people do believe that the war must be continued in behalf of the ideal set up by Wilson. Power alone can never secure our position and our sword alone will never be able to tear down the opposition to us. The enemy must obtain the knowledge that behind our power stands an economical conscience." The prince, whose warning has created a sensation in Germany, is regarded as being one of the empire's sanest and ablest democratic statesmen.

ARRESTS AT HALIFAX

Survivors of Steamer Imo Held by Officials.

Prisoners on War Vessel—Premier Borden Announces Appropriation of $1,000,000 for Relief of City.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 10.—All the survivors of the Norwegian steamer Imo, which collided with the French munition ship Mont Blanc, were made prisoners by the British naval authorities. The survivors were removed to a British cruiser in the harbor and held for the admiralty investigation of the collision, which begins tomorrow. The number in custody was not revealed.

Captain Lamedec of the Mont Blanc and Pilot Mackay, who was handling the vessel when it was rammed by the Imo, are to be placed under arrest, Acting Chief of Police Hanrahan announced. Officers were sent out to get them and to hold them for the admiralty hearing, Hanrahan said.

All nonresidents not engaged in relief work or here on business of extreme emergency were requested by Mayor Martin to leave the city at once because of the serious lack of accommodation and the shortage of food supplies.

In a second proclamation the mayor urged persons not on relief missions to stay away from Halifax for the next two weeks.

Premier Robert L. Borden announced here that a preliminary appropriation of $1,000,000 had been made by the Canadian government for immediate relief in Halifax. This fund will be placed at once in the hands of the citizens' finance committee.

Weather conditions forced a virtual abandonment of the search for the dead in this ruined city.

Rain fell in torrents at daylight and continued throughout the day. The three-foot snow drifts were transformed into slush knee deep.

The estimate of the number of persons who perished in the disaster remained at approximately 4,000.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—The governor general has sent the following reply to the message of sympathy and offer of assistance from President Wilson to the city of Halifax:

"I desire to thank your excellency for your message, which the Canadian government and I have received with profound appreciation and gratitude. We recognize in it and in the generous offers of assistance to the stricken city of Halifax which have been received from many quarters of the United States a further proof of that community of feeling which unites the two peoples in a bond of mutual sympathy and interest so particularly appropriate at the present time, when both are engaged in a common purpose to vindicate the principles of liberty and justice upon which the foundations of both governments rest."

The family of William Piggott, of Negaunee, can boast of being probably the only entire family in the United States in the service of the nation. Every member, including the father, two sons and a daughter, are now overseas in the service of Uncle Sam. William Piggot, the father, being an expert railroad man, is now in France with the railroad corps. Both sons were among the first U. S. soldiers to go overseas. The daughter is a member of a hospital corps, also in France.

Ann Arbor.—President H. B. Hutchins of the U. of M. has been advised by the president of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, that arrangements had been made with the war department for exemption of engineering students. This refers to an effort to place engineering students on the same footing as medical and dental students of draft age, who may enlist in a reserve corps, medical or dental and then be detailed back to the university to complete their studies.

BLAMES GEN. CROZIER

Col. Lewis, Inventor of Machine Gun, Testifies.

Declares Ordnance Bureau Has Always Been Hostile to His Weapon Browning Gun Untried.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Col. Isaac Lewis, inventor of the machine gun which bears his name, in testimony before the senate military affairs committee, blames General Crozier for the failure to supply guns to the American forces now in France and declared the war department is "cursed with Crozierism."

Preceding Colonel Lewis, E. B. Borie, president of the Savage Arms company, which manufactures the Lewis gun, told the committee that even after the United States had entered the war the army ordnance bureau had refused his offer of thousands of these guns, which were eagerly snapped up by the navy.

"If my offers had been accepted," said Borie, "the army would have had 10,000 more machine guns at the outset of the war."

Borie said his firm had been "flabbergasted" by an order last summer from the war department to stop making Lewis guns and start on the Browning gun, "a weapon we know absolutely nothing about," he added.

His Parthian shot before leaving the stand was: "Let's get a director of munitions—a big, broad-minded man. Let's get a he-man, not a pussy-foot."

Colonel Lewis was even more graphic in his description of official ineptitude in the war department and more bitter in his denunciation of it.

"The responsibility for these shameful conditions rests on the ordnance bureau," he said, "and General Crozier is more responsible than any man living for the present obsolete and inadequate equipment of the American army."

Among other statements made by Colonel Lewis were these:

"The American forces in Europe have no guns except those they got from France.

"The Browning gun, which was adopted by the war department, exists only on paper and is a figment of the imagination.

"The ordnance bureau has always been hostile to Lewis guns; it has regarded them with suspicion, notwithstanding thousands are in use in Europe."

Colonel Lewis said that although his gun had been offered to the United States free of royalty and other charges, the influence of General Crozier in the department had been sufficient to cause the offer to be rejected. He said he is ready now to end the controversy and will make further efforts to have this country adopt the use of his gun.

Colonel Lewis said he took his invention to the chief of staff, then Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood.

He said General Wood favored his gun.

The inventor explained.

"I wanted to present it to the government.

"As late as last June I went to the secretary of war and offered him all my interests without pay. The only condition was that the official test should not be made at the Springfield arsenal."

LATINS MAKE NEW GAINS

Italian Forces Continue Counter Drive in Monte Asolone Region.

London, Dec. 24.—The Italian forces between the Brenta and Piave rivers in northern Italy continued their counter drive in the Monte Asolone region and wrested from the enemy further ground, Rome announced. Picked troops from General Diaz's army corps were sent against the positions recently won by the invaders and achieved remarkable success in the face of adverse atmospheric conditions. The newly won ground was held against a strong Austro-German counter stroke, the Italian statement says.

The Berlin war office, while acknowledging that the Teuton forces are still confined to the defensive, asserts that the Italian assaults broke down before heavy battery fire.

ITALIANS STOP TEUTON ADVANCE

BOWLDERS HURLED UPON FOE

Unconfirmed Report Says Kaiser Is Satisfied With Progress Made in Italy and Will Deliver Next Attack on Western Front.

Italian Army Headquarters in North Italy, Dec. 10.—The battle of Asiago is virtually suspended, with the enemy checked, if not defeated, in his main design of breaking through to the Brenta valley and the plain a few miles below.

Roll Bowlders on Enemy.

He succeeded in advancing his lines a short distance when the Italians fell back to new positions.

These positions, guarding the Frenzela and Gadena passes, have successfully resisted all enemy efforts, and the Italians on the steep heights on each side of the passes rain down artillery and rifle fire and release huge bowlders every time the enemy forces try to get through.

This has continued until the Italians seem reasonably assured of holding the passes and compelling the enemy to look for another line of approach.

Airmen Harass Troops.

An exceptionally large air raid was carried out with a fleet of 150 airplanes, including Italian light and heavy squadrons. The huge fleet flew low, scattering more than 2,000 bombs, which caused extensive damage in the northern sector, where the enemy is assembling forces and supplies.

Troop trains were scattered, railway depots destroyed and munition supplies blown up. Large fires marked the route of the raiders, indicating the extent of the destruction.

Drive in Italy Ends.

Zurich, Dec. 10.—The German general staff considers progress in the Italian campaign satisfactory and will make no present attempt to extend military activities beyond the Piave line, say semi-official reports, according to the Nord-Deutscher Zeitung. The reports add that it is the intention of the general staff to concentrate efforts on the western front.

16,000 Italians Captured.

Vienna, Dec. 10.—Following is the official report issued by the war office:

"In the Italian theater our brave troops to the east of Asiago stormed strong vantage points of Stenfle and maintained them against violent attacks.

"The prisoners captured by Mield Marshal Conrad von Hoetsendorf since Tuesday exceed 16,000.

"Our aviators fought numerous aerial battles and shot down six Italian airplanes."

Berlin Claims Gain.

Berlin, Dec. 10.—Following is the war office communication:

"In the battle area east of the Asiago the lively artillery firing continues. The positions captured on Mount Sisemol were cleared of the remnants of the Italian garrison."

Kaiser's Reward of $75 and Three Weeks' Leave Awaits Soldier Taking First American.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The American headquarters staff in France has just been informed by the French authorities that Emperor William has promised a prize of 300 marks (approximately $75) and three weeks' leave to the first German who captures an American soldier: This information came from a German prisoner recently taken, who declared that the offer was contained in an order issued throughout the army.

BANK PRESIDENT KILLS CASHIER

WIFE ARRIVES TOO LATE

Berne M. Mead Slain by Edward A. Strause Over Fight for Presidency of State Trust and Savings Bank.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 24.—Berne M. Mead, cashier of the State Trust and Savings bank of Peoria, was shot and killed by Edward A. Strause, president of the bank, in a revolver duel in the bank building at noon Sunday.

Business jealousy over the honor of being named president of the bank at a meeting scheduled for next week is believed to have been at the bottom of the killing. Mead was a heavy stockholder in the bank, and so is Strause. There had been bitter feeling between them for the last two months over control of stock.

Men Meet by Chance.

Strause, the only living witness to the death struggle, has made no statement, but his attorney, Joseph Weil, has promised one.

The men met by chance. Mead had been at the Creve Coeur club talking with Thomas Lovelace of the Corning distillery. He left a few minutes before noon, stating that he was going over to the bank, which is directly across the street. Strause had spent most of the morning at the Jefferson hotel, also across the street from the bank building, on another corner, telling his associates that he was going to the bank and that he would return in ten minutes.

Hear Three Shots.

At noon pedestrians, hearing loud talking in the bank, stopped and gathered about the windows. A few minutes later the crowd scattered when three shots were fired. The police were called.

Detective Clifford arrived, but found the bank door locked. He hammered on the door, and soon Strause, blood-spattered and his clothing torn to shreds, appeared and admitted the detective.

Strause led Detective Clifford down the lobby of the bank, back through the cages to the northeast corner of the room, where Mead was found, unconscious. He was lying face upward, arms stretched, and about a foot from his hand was a 38-caliber revolver.

Wife Reaches Scene.

Clifford saw that Meade was alive and bleeding from a wound in the forehead. After disarming Strause the detective ran to the door and called Dr. Albert Weil, who was passing. The physician, however, could do nothing, and Mead died without regaining consciousness.

While Doctor Weil was examining the body Mrs. Mead, having an appointment with her husband, drove up in her automobile. She heard spectators say that her husband had been murdered. The police refused to let her enter the building. She threatened to break through the glass door and was finally admitted.

Strause Is Locked Up.

Strause was taken to the police station, where he was locked in the private office of the chief. His lawyers, Frank Quinn and Joseph Weil, after a conference, said the banker would make a statement later.

Strause was booked on a charge of murder. He gave his age as forty-six and his nationality as American. Mead was about forty-five.

From what was learned by Detective Clifford, the men must have had a short, fierce struggle. The men fought behind closed doors. One shot had been fired from Mead's revolver and two from Strause's.

Coroner Elliott has begun an investigation.

Rivalry for Office.

It is declared that Strause was about to be deposed as president of the bank, and Mead was slated to take his place. Mead held $60,000 of the bank stock and Strause held $10,000, it is said. Friends believe personal ambition explains the tragedy.

Directors Issue Statement.

The directors, called together hurriedly, issued the following statement:

"The tragedy was, to our knowledge, due solely to a personal grievance between the two men, which extended over two or three years.

"The basis was friction resulting from the fact that Mr. Mead, a large stockholder, was serving as cashier under Mr. Strause, the president, who had smaller interests."

The statement then says the negotiations had been pending for ten days in which Mr. Mead offered to buy out Mr. Strause's $10,000 stock for $18,000. The bank is solvent, the statement says:

No More U. S. Rifles for Russ.

New York, Dec. 24.—Discontinuance of the manufacture of rifles for Russia by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company has been ordered by the British government, which had supervision over the contract, it was announced here. The original contract was for 1,800,000 rifles, of which 1,000,000 were completed a fortnight ago.

Wrapped in bed clothes to keep her warm, the four-day-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hessan, Detroit, was smothered to death.

Disappointed by his rejection at Camp Custer for physical disability, Abram Byrd, 30 years old, killed himself at his home in Vermontville. Byrd had served seven years in the army and wanted to re-enlist.

Members of the industrial bureau of the Detroit Board of Commerce are making an investigation to ascertain the number of factories in Detroit which have equipment for the manufacture of munitions. They will also seek to determine the amount of munitions which can be produced and submit the information to the government which is now endeavoring to place contracts here.

SHIP POST TO PIEZ

Chicagoan Made General Manager of Fleet Corporation.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The senate adopted a resolution by Senator Harding of Ohio to investigate the shipping board, after sharp debate.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Charles Piez of Chicago was appointed general manager of the shipping board's emergency fleet corporation, succeeding Admiral Harris, who has resigned. Mr. Piez has been vice president of the corporation.

General reorganization of the fleet corporation will follow. Rear Admiral Bowles, aid to Admiral Harris, will have an important place. James Heyworth of Chicago will have full charge of wooden construction. Charles Day will head the construction department.

It was announced that Admiral Harris resigned because of his insistence that the offices of the corporation be transferred to Philadelphia.

The shipbuilding program, Chairman Hurley said, is in better shape than ever before since it was launched. Conditions on the Pacific coast are excellent. Ships are being turned out as fast as human labor can accomplish it.

Altogether there are now under construction or under contract $8,305,308 deadweight tons of shipping.

Admiral Harris has asked that he be reassigned to the post of chief of the navy bureau of yards and docks, which he had before succeeding Rear Admiral Capps as fleet corporation manager less than a month ago.

Chairman Hurley of the shipping board, also a Chicago man, denied rumors that he was preparing to resign.

GOVERNOR'S HOME BLOWN UP

Abortive Attempt Made to Kill California's Executive—No Clew to Perpetrators.

Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 19.—Without a clew to guide them, police officers and state officials began an investigation of the bomb explosion which partly wrecked the executive mansion. Although Governor Stephens and members of his family were asleep in the mansion when the bomb exploded no one was injured.

The detonation of the explosion shook the entire neighborhood and was heard for miles around. In a score of homes windows were broken. The back porch of the executive mansion was destroyed and a corner of the house torn away.

RED CROSS NEWS

Dr. Hartzog, membership director, wishes to emphasize the fact that the membership drive will be continued until after the New Year. We must have more members and we are going to get them. The Lilley State Bank will take your subscriptions, and if you should happen to come to town when it is closed, you can pay at Gaston's store; we will make it as convenient for you as possible. Or you can give your money to any of the officers of the Red Cross, and your membership will be acknowledged in the next issue of the newspaper.

As has been published before, the Headquarters will be closed on Monday, Tuesday and Saturday on account of the coal situation. The Red Cross workers are anxious to keep the rooms open, but it has been found necessary to close the rooms except when a full attendance of workers will repay the expenditure in fuel. They will be open only on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons, and evenings when engaged by classes, until further notice.

The surgical dressing work of Dr. Bredow's committee has gone on right through the holidays on account of the terrible necessity for this work. Tecumseh's quota for the last consignment amounted to 1,000 absorbent pads, which were finished on Thursday evening. On Wednesday only 75 pads could be made, owing to small attendance, so the class had to work overtime on Thursday. Every table was filled and everyone was breathlessly busy, and they all looked so attractive in their pretty Red Cross head dresses that one would think there would be a waiting line for the surgical dressing class.

The quota for Detroit is 26,000 surgical pads, so that in comparison Tecumseh with 1,000 pads is doing much better. Mr. Eccles took the consignment to Adrian this morning and they will be shipped from Detroit on January 1st.

Next Wednesday, Jan. 2nd, general work at Headquarters will be resumed and Mrs. Sena Crane will be in attendance both Wednesday and Thursday.

Children are requested to come on Friday afternoon at the Headquarters are closed on Saturdays.

The Westminster Guild will meet at Headquarters on Friday evening, Jan. 4th.

Miss Hosmer has 8 sweaters and 14 pairs of wristlets ready to send. She is out of yarn at present; as soon as it arrives it will be published.

A meeting of the solicitors for the membership drive was held at Headquarters on Thursday evening; all ardent workers will be welcomed in this committee. Please report to Mrs. Burridge.

Mrs. Ann Moore, 85 years of age, is reported to be the oldest Red Cross worker in Tecumseh. She knits for the soldiers and takes great interest in the work.

Mrs. Hardy's Red Cross meeting in Litchfield was very successful; the opera house was packed with about 600 people, although the population of Litchfield is only 700. There was a fine band and a chorus and $80.00 was taken in money and pledges. Litchfield is the banner Red Cross town of Hillsdale county, having 700 members and their present drive is for 1,000. Surely Tecumseh can beat Litchfield; we are three times as big, so we ought to have three times as many members.

Total membership, 994.

We will be grateful to those who will pay their renewals now, instead of in April. These renewals will count for Tecumseh in the general estimate.

Jenny C. Law Hardy,
Publicity Director.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

Mr. and Mrs. George Chaplin were the victims of a fine surprise Christmas day when sixteen of their relatives and friends walked in upon them. They came with well filled baskets for a bountiful Christmas dinner and a most enjoyable time was reported, and Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin made happy.

Mr. and Mr. Chas. Bell of Jackson were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Heesen for Christmas, returning home Wednesday.

The postoffice will be open January 1st, New Year's Day, one hour between 10 and 11 o'clock. One city delivery will be made in the morning.

T. Jefferson Kennedy of Jackson has been the guest of his brother James and wife this week and shaking hands with his many friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Harris of Ann Arbor are guests today of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lewis. They are enroute home from a Christmas visit with relatives in Fremont, Ohio.

FIRE CHRISTMAS MORNING

Mike Bachman of Ridgeway Loses Home

It was a sorry Christmas day for Mike Bachman and family of Ridgeway when their home was burned to the ground early in the morning.

About 6 o'clock Mr. Bachman was at the barn doing chores when, happening to go to the front door, he discovered a bright light on the back porch. Thinking his wife had turned on the light for something, he went back and later discovered that the whole back of the house was in flames, the fire originating from the chimney.

The house burned rapidly, only the woodhouse being saved. Aside from the loss of the house, the contents of a well filled cellar were also lost, 50 bushels of potatoes, 15 bu. apples, 400 lbs. pork, a can of lard and a large supply of canned fruit were totally destroyed. Nothing was saved from up stairs except some bedding. Some of the furniture below was saved, except from the kitchen. All of their clothing was destroyed.

Their two sons, Harold of Saginaw and Gordon of Detroit, were home to spend Christmas with their parents.

The family have moved into Elmer Linn's house and hope to rebuild as soon as possible. Mr. Bachman's three brothers and a brother-in-law, all carpenters, have proffered their help in this direction. The home was insured.

"TWIN BEDS" AT THE BRADLEY

It is very seldom that the management of the Bradley books big road attractions on Saturday nights, but the only date available for the biggest laugh producing show on earth, "Twin Beds," was Saturday, Jan. 5th, so rather than lose the opportunity of offering his patrons this big New York success, promptly cancelled the pictures for that night and booked this big attraction.

Charming Lois Bolton plays the cutest of all newly-weds and is the clever little bride of the play. Miss Bolton is surrounded by an excellent cast. Every one who has seen "Twin Beds" was fascinated by it. You will be no different than the others—it makes you forget where you are, who you are or what you are. "Twin Beds" is a comedy classic, a hundred critics in a hundred cities throughout the entire world have unanimously declared it is the best farce in years.

The play was written by Margaret Mayo, author of "Baby Mine" and "Polly of the Circus," which alone should be guarantee enough for any one as to the merits of the attraction but besides that the local management personally guarantees that this is the same identical company and production which played the Detroit Opera House the week of August 26th and you know, or should know, that the prices at the Detroit Opera House are $2.00 for the entire first floor so you are getting a $2.00 attraction when "Twin Beds" play the Bradley, but you won't have to pay $2.00 to see it. The prices here will be 25c, 50c, 75c and $1.00, with a very few at $1.50.

If it's the last thing you ever do, "Tie a tin can to trouble" and see "Twin Beds."

REV. WIDDIFIELD WRITES OF HIS WORK AT THE FRONT

His Co-laborer a Methodist Parson from Connecticut

On active service with the American expenitionary force.
November 29, 1917

My Dear Mr. Rogers (et al.)

I know my good people in Tecumseh must think that I have forgotten them entirely, but the truth is that the more and more writing has been crowded out of my programme, the more I have thought of you all and the more guilty I have felt at not just taking the time to let you know I remembered and cared. But my days and a good deal of my nights have been filled every minute from reveille at 6 a. m. until after taps at in the barracks and billets have all 11 p. m. for long after all the lights disappeared I have been burning the midnight oil (or candles, when we haven't oil). Then we have only been touching the outside edge of our work. Believe me it is no child's job to have a truck dump you and a load of furniture, fittings, equipment and canteen stores outside a partly finished "hut" in a small out-of-the-world French village, and leave you there and tell you to "go to it." That was my experience on my first day's work for the Army Y. M. C. A.

The Battalion struck the town just about the same hour. Everything was in an upset. Some few went into the hastily constructed barracks the rest were put in billets. The latter might be anything, anywhere, houses, lofts, stables, barns or anywhere there was a place for a man to spread a blanket. A stone stable or loft is not the warmest place in the world nor the stone or baked mud floor the most comfortable for a bunk, but the men all took it as part of the game and blamed none, but the Kaiser and added it to the little score they have to setttle with him.

They are getting ready to settle it too. They are undergoing some stern training. To see them march off each morning in their steel helmets, rifles over their shoulders, to the training trenches makes one feel that its a mighty stern business. this war game, and that America has not sent tin soldiers to do the job, but men to a "mass job." All day we hear the rattle of the guns or the bursting of the bombs as they are learning to handle the new weapons they must use.

I should love to be able to send you some pictures of it all, but cameras had to be left behind when we came into the zone of the armies. I should like most of all to send you a picture of myself in my steel shrapnel helmet and my gas mask. This is not a piece of vanity because I am anything but a beauty then, it's a picture to frighten children with and many grown ups too, if they should be superstitious and believe in ghosts and goblins.

I needn't tell you about the "mud" everyone in France has written about it and it is all they say it is and "then some."

This village is some miles from a railway station so we are well cut off. It is small, no stores at all except a couple of wine shops, and it was dirty with a manure pile in the street in front of every house, but the troops have changed it into a respectably tidy place now.

I have to go to town, some 8 or 9 miles, a couple of times a week. If I have luck I catch a truck, if I don't I walk. However, I am really enjoying it all—and growing fat on it. The "chow" (soldier's language) is good, first class, and we are always hungry.

How many times I have longed for my little "Henry" I would hate to say. We have a bicycle, but it is not much of a success as it seems to be up hill (and hills that are hills) most of the way to town—and worse coming back.

Today has been Thanksgiving Day with you in the States—in "The Old Country," as the boys say—and don't think we have forgotten it over here. I don't mean we have been homesick for we saw to it we didn't have time for that. We planned a full program for that very reason. This morning we ran off two inter-company football games—and the teams would have done credit to many athletic associations back home. Then came the dinner—turkey and potatoes and vegetables, pudding and fruit and coffee and smokes. This afternoon, the field sports: tug of war, sack race, potato race, relay race. You will notice we didn't include events with which a big dinner wouldn't agree.

Last night we had the "Y" hut packed for the minstrel show with an eleven-piece orchestra — "some show" — followed by boxing. Tonight the boys are pretty tired and have gone to bed early, which has given me my chance to write.

I wish I could tell you more about my own duties and work, but they are so varied and so many it would take too long. They change with every changing need. I can never foretell just what will be the next question or the next demand and we are supposed to answer all and fulfill all. The canteen work is steady during certain hours: 12:45 to 1:30 and 5:45 to 8. It is tiring, but fulfills a need you can't appreciate in any other circumstances. I don't begrudge the work or the time.

"Sending money home" has been another time-murderer. The boys got paid, the first time in two months, a couple of weeks ago, and I am glad to say we were able to get them to send a good proportion home by providing the means and acting as banking agents.

Sunday we hold our services. I have a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8:15 and we have a second service at 9:30. There are two of us here. Mr. Benedict, my fellow secretary, is a Methodist parson from connecticut. Needless to say, we work well together, for differences are minimized and agreements magnified over here—as they should be.

I wish I could see you all back home in Tecumseh and Clinton tonight. I should like to know just how things are going—I trust well. Letters come so very, very slowly, and so far between. I feel confident of one thing at least and that is that the Sunday-school is being cared for. We grown-ups can understand the upsetting of things and adjust ourselves to doing without things we want and need, if necessary, but the children "must be fed" and I know you are all capable of caring for their spiritual needs through the Sunday school and I know more, that you will.

Please remind all my good people that I want them to remember us over here I think of you all as a "congregation," my "flock" so often. I think of a great many as my individual friends. Should I stop to send personal greetings to individuals by name I am afraid Uncle Sam would want to send this letter by parcel post, so I shall refrain.

Here now on Thanksgiving evening, (night I should say now) it is time for me to think of wishing you all a very, very happy Christmas. I do it with all my heart. It is not so hard to think of Christmas for we have had a couple of snow storms.

I know that there will be many prayers offered up that He who came at the first Christmas to bring "Peace on earth, good will to men'," will bring that peace in His own way, now when we all desire it so much. We are praying for it here and are preparing, if needs be, to help Him bring it by laying down our lives for it.

I must say good-bye. Write when you can and believe me

Faithfully yours,
Jas. G. Widdifield.

CHRISTMAS AT WM. WILLNOW'S

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Willnow had a very happy Christmas time at their home Tuesday with all their family at home. Their son Floyd, who has been in the service at Waco, Texas, gave them a genuine surprise Monday night when he arrived home, having received an honorable discharge from the service for physical disabilities.

Their son Charles was home from Camp Custer. He was united in marriage to Miss Helen Kolkloesch in Adrian Saturday at the Baptist parsonage and so brought a daughter to his parents for his Christmas gift. He returned to Camp Custer Christmas night.

Needless to say they had a right merry Christmas, the only regret being that Charles had to leave them for duty in camp.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

A very pleasant Christmas party was enjoyed Tuesday evening at Witherell's hall under the auspices of the young men of Tecumseh. There were about 45 couples present. The hall was beautifully decorated with evergreen and Christmas bells and with a large Christmas tree in the center of the hall.

The Toledo orchestra assisted by W. L. Coller furnished the music. The scene was a very pretty one with the many tinted dresses of the young ladies to make up the color scheme. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. PETER'S CHURCH SCHOOL

On Christmas eve there gathered at St. Peter's parish house about 40 of the church school children with their teachers. At 5:30 they were gathered around the tables and had soon done justice to an elegant supper furnished by the ladies of the school and church. After supper was cleared away the following program was given:

Bells for Christmas"—School
Prayer—Superintendent of school
Santa Claus—Mary Audrey Smith
If You're Good—Berford Barber
My Christmas Dolly—Zisco Mominee
Christmas Bells— Maxwell Smith
Vocal solo, "Coumbia"—Katherine Jean Wood, with Mrs. Wood at the piano
A Patriot's Lament—John Hicks Anderson
A Christmas Carol—Muriel Genevieve Bly
Duet, "The Christmas Tree"—Alice Barber and Josephine Daisher
Shoes or Stockings—Beatrice Barrett
Reading, "The Birth of Christ"—Dorothy Bly
Song, "Shine Out, O Blessed Star" —Mrs. Bly's class
Be a Santa Yourself—Alice Barber
A Happy Christmas Day— Wilhemina Jepsen
Hymn, "Silent Night" — School, acted by Josephine Daisher and Dorothy Bly
It Sometimes Pays—Allen French
When Santa Claus was a Boy—Thelma Cornell
A war song, "So Long, Mother"—Allen French and Wilma Bly
A Christmas Tree—Edna Hand

Sacks of popcorn, candy and oranges were then given out with Christmas cards from each teacher to the members of her class. Afterward the children were dismissed with the singing of "Amerca."

It was intended at this time to make all members of the church school members of the Red Cross, but as there was some misunderstanding concerning buttons, this was postponed until next Sunday.

She received her teacher's diploma two years later and became a teacher of Latin in the Tecumseh High School the following fall.

She taught here for three years and in November, 1895, was married to Benson J. Garlinghouse. When he died in May, 1908, she took up his work as manager of the Tecumseh Telephone Company and held that position until her death.

Her marriage to Horace R. Brewer occurred in November, 1915. December 18th of the next year, he died and from that time on her health was not good. Collects Small Fortune For an Ambulance Fund

Wall street, the resort during the day of millionaire bankers and brokers, was startled the other day to behold a foreign-looking automobile bearing unreadable printing on the side draw up in front of the subtreasury. More surprise was occasioned when Miss Natalie Camp set her brakes, left the wheel, and in most bewitching Russian military costume, stepped down and smiled her sweetest, meanwhile offering a collection box to the crowd. Few could withstand the originality of the plea and the men dived into their pockets and dropped all their change into the box. Not until Miss Camp had cleaned the neighborhood of its loose change did she step into her ambulance and drive away. The money will be used for furthering the work of the Allied Ambulance corps.

THIRTY YEARS' WAR PLAGUES

Sweeping Away of Lives Was Frightful, Combatants Themselves Being Mown Down.

In the famous Thirty Years' war, it is estimated, the population of central and western Europe was reduced from thirty millions to less than fifteen millions, and yet during the whole of that time there were only forty important battles fought, and their total death casualties did not reach half a million.

All the rest of the frightful sweeping away of life was from plague and famine, which not only followed in the wake of the armies, but mowed down the combatants themselves.

Nor was the deadly work of these fierce partners of war—the terrible triple alliance of the prayer book, plague, pestilence and famine—confined to the civil populations. They played equal havoc in the ranks of the armies themselves.

Even as recently as the days of Gustavus Adolphus that great captain is said to have broken up his winter quarters and begun his summer campaign nearly two months earlier than he had intended, because at the rate at which his soldiers were dying from disease in their huts and barracks he would soon have had no army left to campaign with.

BAKERY RULES FIXED

Food Board Announces Weight Units for Bread Loaves.

Administration Makes Public Regulations Under Which Bakeries Will Be Permitted to Operate.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Following the issuance of the general orders licensing all bakeries, the food administration made public the rules and regulations under which bakeries will operate. The most important provide that the licensees must not: Buy, contract for, sell, store or otherwise handle or deal in any food commodities to unreasonably increase the price or restrict supply or attempt to locally or generally monopolize commodities; destroy any bakery products; waste or wilfully permit deterioration of products; accept returns of bread or other bakery products, make cash payments or allow credit to any retailer for any unsold bread or other bakery products "or exchange any of them for other bread or bakery products which he has sold."

Bread must be made and sold only in the specified weights or multiples of 16-ounce units which must not run over 17 ounces and 24-ounce units which must not run over 25½ ounces, in both cases net weights, unwrapped, 12 hours after baking. Each unit of twin or multiple loaves must conform to these weight requirements. Rolls must be in units weighing from one to three ounces, but no rolls manufactured or offered for sale shall weigh, unwrapped, 12 hours after baking, less than one ounce or more than three ounces. These standards are to be determined by averaging weights of 25 loaves or five dozen rolls of each unit.

In mixing dough for bread or rolls on the unit basis of 196 pounds of any flour, meal or mixture, bakers must not use more than three pounds of cane or beet sugar, or in lieu of them, 3½ pounds of corn sugar; nor more than six pounds of fresh milk from which butter fats have been extracted; nor use any shortening except not exceeding two pounds of compounds containing not more than 15 per cent of animal fats, or, instead, not more than two pounds of vegetable fats. Where sweetened condensed milk is used, its added sugar content shall be deducted from the net sugar allowed. GUARDSMAN SHOT BY COMRADE

Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex.—Only a few minutes after he had finished reading a letter from his mother, Corporal Earl R. Kennard, of Vassar Mich., was shot in the temple and fatally wounded while sitting on his cot in his tent in the machine gun company of the One Hundred and Twenty fifth infantry regiment.

Testimony in the inquiry after the shooting was to the effect that Kennard was killed accidentally by Private Wm. Malinoski, of Detroit, a member of the machine gun company.

Witnesses stated that Kennard was lying on his cot and that Malinoski was snapping his service revolver aimed in a playful way, first at one man and then the other.

On the fourth snap, Private Albert Whittemore, of Grand Rapids, testified there was a report and the bullet struck the corporal between the eyes. He died five hours later in the base hospital after an X-ray picture was made and the bullet removed.

Kennard was 20 years old. He enlisted 18 months ago and had been considered a first class soldier during his service.

According to Whittemore, Kennard never had a cross word with any of the boys. He said he felt certain it was a case of accidental shooting.

Says British Soon Will Be Bombing In Reprisal

Sir Auckland Geddes, British minister of national service, in a speech delivered at Nottingham said that the grim work of bombing German towns and villages would be in full swing "before many moons had elapsed." NAT WILLS, ACTOR, DEAD

Well-Known Comedian Dies of Petromorites—Body Found in Garage by Family.

Union Hill, N. J., Dec. 10.—Nat Wills, who bore a nation-wide reputation as a cofedian, was killed by petromorites in the garage on his estate here. He died while preparing to set forth upon a mission of human kindliness, for he was to have taken part in a performance in the afternoon and evening at the Hippodrome, New York city, for the benefit of the soldiers at Camp Upton.

Mr. Wills' automobile was not working as smoothly as usual when he was ready to start for the Hippodrome in the afternoon. He started for the engine and crawled beneath the car to locate the trouble.

He had neglected to open the doors of the garage and the fumes from the engine's exhaust killed him.

Some time later Mrs. Wills took her little daughter, Natalie, three years old, and entered the garage. They discovered the comedian's body beneath the car.

Mr. Wills was born in Washington forty-four years ago. His talents had won for him a position as one of the foremost funmakers of the country.

RED CROSS RELIEF SAVES THE KIDDES

Washington, D. C.

The War Council of the American Red Cross announces the following cablegram from the Paris headquarters of the American Red Cross in reference to the work of the Red Cross in caring for the repatriated refugees from devastated districts in France and Belgium.

"There arrived last week at Evian where the repatries from France and Belgium are received back into France, a train loaded with Belgian children. There were 680 of them, thin sickly, alone, all between ages of four and twelve, children of men who refused to work for the Germans and of mothers who let their children go rather than let them starve. They poured off the train, little ones clinging to the older ones, girls all crying, boys trying to cheer. They had come all the long way alone.

"On the platforms were the Red Cross workers to meet them, doctors and nurses with ambulances for the little ones waiting outside the station. The children poured out of the station marched along the street shouting, "Meat, meat, we are going to have meat", to the casino where they were given a square meal, the first in many months.

"Again and again, while they ate, they broke out spontaneously into songs in French against the German, songs which they had evidently learned in secret. The Red Cross doctor examined them. Their little claw-like hands were significant of their undernourished bodies, but the doctor said, "We have them in time. A few weeks of proper feeding and they will pull up."

"Every day at Evian 1000 homeless people arrive, of which 60 per cent are children. 30 per cent of the older people die the first month from exhaustion. The children can and must be saved."

The Red Cross is caring for them. Are you a member? If not, join. If so, enroll for next year in the Christmas membership campaign.

TO FREE PRISONERS

Russ and Teuton Envoys Agree to Liberate Captives.

Agreement Provides Basis for Building Commerce With Germany—Slavs to Give Up Land.

Brest-Litovsk, Dec. 31.—Provisional agreement on a series of important points, including liberation of war prisoners and resumption of commercial relations, was reached by the delegates of Russia and the central powers in discussion of issues which, in the event of a general peace, would have to be settled among the nations represented in the negotiations here.

This provisional discussion was terminated on Friday, the basis of an agreement adopted being reached under the reservation that it was to be examined by the governments represented by the delegates.

In respect to treaty relations, an understanding was arrived at regarding the restoration of the situation as it existed when the war began.

It was provided that certain laws adopted during the war shall be canceled and that those affected thereby shall be restored to their previous rights or indemnified.

The rules in regard to payment of war costs and damage were defined in greater detail. Provisions were made concerning damages suffered by civilians outside the war area.

An agreement in principle was reached regarding the reciprocal liberation and return to their homes of war prisoners and interned civilians, and also for the return of captured merchant vessels.

Speedy resumption of diplomatic and consular relations is embraced in the understanding. It is set forth that there shall be immediate stoppage of economic warfare, establishment of commercial intercourse and the organized exchange of commodities.

A substantial understanding was arrived at on which the basis of economic relations shall be settled permanently.

GERMANS TO REGISTER

United States to List Enemy Aliens in February.

All Male Subjects of the Kaiser More Than Fourteen Years Old Must Fill Out Questionnaire.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Registration of all German alien enemies will be made in the first week of February. Rules and regulations for the registration were made public by the department of justice.

The questionnaire requires a most comprehensive record of each registrant and includes photographs in quadruplicate and finger prints. Women are not required to register, but all German males of fourteen years or more within the United States or its possessions, who have not acquired full citizenship, must comply with the regulations or suffer the penalties provided.

Germans born in Alsace-Lorraine prior to May 10, 1871, the date of the final ratification under which the lost provinces were transferred to Germany, or in Schleswig-Holstein prior to August 8, 1868, the date when Prussia seized that Danish territory, are exempt.

The registration will be conducted by the police and postal authorities throughout the United States and by especially delegated authorities at a time still to be designated in American insular possessions.

The registration district in a city of 5,000 population or more will be the police precinct or district, otherwise the district of the local post office. Registration will be made in the police station or post office. The registration questionnaire must be filled out in triplicate, each with a photograph, and after ten days each registrant, if his record is verified and found satisfactory, will receive a registration card with photograph attached and then may resume normal relations unhampered except by local zonal mandates and compliance with the registration laws.

These registration laws require that no alien enemy move from one place of abode to another within his registration district without a premit.

No enemy alien may change his place of residence from one registration district to another without first obtaining a permit from his registration district, making application on a form furnished by the department of justice, and notice must be given at once to the registrar of the district of the new place of residence.

Any German subject to registration who does not register or uses the registration card of another, or makes false statements or representation, shall be deemed to have violated the regulations and may be interned or punished otherwise.

"Registrants are not to be treated as persons of evil disposition," the regulations read, "and the registration officers are urged to deal with them in a courteous and friendly manner."

125,000 MADE HOMELESS BY EARTHQUAKE

City of Guatemala Wiped Off the Map—Many Killed by Falling Walls.

WARSHIPS RUSHED TO SCENE

Message Received by Navy Department at Washington Says Bad Shock Saturday Night Completed Work of Destruction.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Guatemala City, the capital of Guatemala, has been wiped off the map by earthquake and 125,000 persons—the entire population—are homeless in the streets.

News of the destruction of the city reached Washington in a cablegram from Guatemala City received by the navy department through its radio system.

Orders have been issued by the navy department to all of its vessels in the vicinity of he Gulf of Honduras and the Pacific coast of Guatemala to give all the assistance possible to the stricken populace.

Everything in Ruins.

The message received by the navy department stated that there had been another bad earthquake shock Saturday and that this had completed the work of destruction started by the earlier shocks. The department's message read:

"Bad earthquake Saturday finished the work of others. Everything in ruins and beyond description as a result of the last shock. One hundred and twenty-five thousand people are in the streets. Parts of the country are very cold and windy. Tents are needed badly. Quite a number killed by falling walls."

Thousands Are Homeless.

First news of the earthquake reached the state department officially in a telegram from Charge d'Affaires Thurston last week stating that the earthquake shocks continued on December 28, that the water situation was then becoming serious and sanitary conditions becoming correspondingly affected.

The dispatch said that even then the destruction was continuing and that thousands were without shelter, although the foreign colonies were safe.

Our charge d'affaires was instructed by Secretary Lansing to inform President Cabrera that this country desired to be of every possible assistance to the sister republic.

Quakes Continue Three Days.

A wireless dispatch explained that the earthquakes began on December 25. Official advices indicate that they have continued every day until Saturday, when the work of demolition of the city had been completed. The earlier quakes had destroyed 80 per cent of the buildings. The remaining 20 per cent went down Saturday.

U. S. Consulate Destroyed.

The American consulate was destroyed in the quakes that occurred between December 25 and 28.

The American legation building was standing on the 28th, but was filled with refugees. It also has gone down, according to the latest report.

Recorded at Georgetown.

Severe shocks occurred between 5:57 and 7 o'clock Satrday night. Violent quakes were recorded at that time by the seismographs of the Georgetown university observatory, and the distance was estimated at 1,300 miles from Washington.

FAMILY OF THREE SLAIN

Bodies of Oklahoma Farmer, His Wife and Daughter Found in Ruins of Home.

Muskogee, Okla., Dec. 31.—The bodies of C. E. Logan, his wife and four-year-old daughter were taken from the ruins of their home near McLain, a farming community, twelve miles south of Muskogee. The bodies of Mrs. Logan and the child were burned to a crisp, but an examination of Logan's body revealed that his head had been crushed with a blunt instrument. The position in which his body was found indicated that he died after a struggle. Deputy sheriffs from Muskogee took bloodhounds to McLain, and it is reported that they have already picked up trails which it was believed may lead to arrests.

RAIL HEAD TO QUIT POST

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 31.—E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railroad system, is planning to retire to private life. He said that he has been seriously thinking of retiring for a long time. Mr. Ripley made known his plans while discussing the action of the United States government in taking over the management of the roads.

"Prospective salary cuts do not interest me," Mr. Ripley said. "I have been thinking seriously for some time of retiring from active work. I feel that I have been in the service long enough."

M'ADOO NAMES 2 FOR RAIL WORK

POOLS EAST AND WEST ROADS

Director General Orders Presidents to Report at Once on Eliminating Congestion on Eastern Roads.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Director General of Railroads McAdoo appointed Walker D. Hines of New York, former general counsel of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and Alfred H. Smith of New York, president of the New York Central railroad, as assistants pro tempore to him in the government management of the railroads of the country.

The director general also called upon presidents of all railroads to take up vigorously the matter of common use of terminals and parallel lines, and specifically requested that all terminal facilities in the Chicago district be treated as a unit as far as possible.

Director McAdoo also issued an order retaining all officers, agents and employees of railroads in the service of the roads under government management, providing for retirement of those who wish to leave with proper notice and designated rules for operation of the roads as a national system.

Must Solve Wage Dispute.

An important development was the disclosure that the railroads had determined to reject the demands of the organized workers for a 40 per cent increase in wages and had turned responsibility in the labor controversy over to the government and Director General McAdoo.

With this revelation also came the comforting one to the director general and his advisers that the railroad brotherhoods had decided not to press their labor demands upon the government for at least 30 days, or at least until the director general has had an opportunity to get the united operation of transportation lines well under way.

May Handle Securities.

Other developments in the new railroad situation included:

Discussion of plans for handling railroad finances through the formation of a government corporation under the director general to buy and market railroad securities.

Consideration of an order withdrawing passenger trains from certain lines paralleling each other, devoting some lines exclusively to freight traffic.

Deliberation over the wisdom of ordering nation-wide embargoes on commodities not essential to the prosecution of the war or actual welfare of the people.

Removal by direction of railroads war board, co-operating with Director McAdoo, from Pittsburgh to Washington of the operating committee of the eastern railroads.

Ordering from western to eastern lines of more locomotives to aid in lifting the freight jam in this section.

Confers With Cummins.

Director McAdoo conferred with Daniel Willard, chairman of the war industries board; Senator Cummins of Iowa, ranking Republican member of the interstate commerce committee, and Interstate Commerce Commissioners Meyer and Wooley.

The conference with Senator Cummins related to legislation which will be needed in congress to carry out the government operation plans.

"I believe congress will act as promptly and expeditiously as possible in the emergency," Mr. Cummins said. "I also think that the legislation will be confined to the emergency only and that no effort will be made at this time to enact any permanent railroad legislation.

"There is no question, however, that the matter of government ownership has come forward with tremendous strides in the last few months."

WOMEN BEG COAL IN GOTHAM

Thousands of Homes Unheated When Zero Weather Hits the East—Situation Is Serious.

New York, Dec. 31.—With the coldest night—6 degrees below zero—in 37 years, pneumonia almost an epidemic, thousands of underheated homes, and no relief from the coal shortage, New York city is in a critical state. State Fuel Administrator Wiggin importuned the priority shipment board to give preference to immediate railroad shipment of coal to the city. The supply of coal on hand is less than sufficient for one day. Some apartment houses and many homes were entirely without fuel. In Richmond (Staten Island) the fuel administrator went about with his car delivering 100 pound sacks to the poor.

All over Greater New York women with baskets besieged the coal offices, piers and terminals, begging for coal. There is less than 3,000 tons of coal in all Brooklyn. It needs 21,000. Several churches in the suburbs were not opened yesterday.

Boston, Dec. 31.—New England is in the grip of the coldest wave of several winters with thousands of homes without sufficient fuel because of the coal shortage. The suffering among the poor in the tenement districts of the cities was especially severe.

When the family home burned, the four-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Jameson, of Ontonagon, was saved by John Garvin, former county clerk of Ontonagon county. The parents were away from home when the fire was discovered. The presence of the baby in the house was not known until the fire had made serious headway. Garvin found the baby under the bed, where it had crawled from fright.

More I. W. W. Nabbed.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—Federal authorities are in control of the I. W. W. headquarters here and 18 members of the organization are in jail as the result of a raid. The raid was undertaken by government agents after reports that an attempt to liberate indicted members of the I. W. W. was being planned.

MUST YOU PAY TAX ON YOUR INCOME?

Matter That Every American Is Called On to Determine Without Delay.

MARCH 1 LIMIT FOR RETURNS

Failure to File Them Involves Severe Penalties—Taxpayers Will Be Assisted by Treasury Officials in Every County.

Washington.—The time has arrived for every American subject to the income tax division of the war revenue act to figure up his income and file his return. If he is unmarried and has a net income of $1,000 or more, or if he is married or the head of a family and his net income is $2,000 or more, he must pay the tax. His return must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue in the district in which the taxpayer lives or has his principal place of business before March 1, 1918.

The man who thinks to evade this tax is making a serious error. Revenue officials will be in every county to check returns. Failure to make a correct return within the time specified involves heavy penalties.

"Net income" means gross income less certain deductions provided for by the act. The law defines income as profit, gain, wages, salary, commissions, money or its equivalent from professions, vocations, commerce, trade, rents, sales and dealings in property, real and personal, and interest from investments except interest from government bonds, or state, municipal, township or county bonds. Income from service as guardian, trustee or executor; from dividends, pensions, royalties, or patents, or oil and gas wells, coal land, etc., are taxable.

Normal Rate Is 2 Per Cent.

The normal rate of tax is 2 per cent on net incomes above the amount of exemptions, which is $2,000 in the case of a married person or head of a family and $1,000 in the case of a single person. A married person or head of a family is allowed an additional exemption of $200 for each dependent child if under eighteen years of age or incapable of self-support because defective. The taxpayer is considered to be the head of a family if he is actually supporting one or more persons closely connected with him by blood relationship or relationship by marriage, or if his duty to support such person is based on some moral or legal obligation.

Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the year and taxes paid except income taxes and those assessed against local benefits are deductible. These and other points of the income tax section of the war revenue act will be fully explained by revenue officers who will visit every county in the United States between January 2 and March 1 to assist taxpayers in making out their returns.

Officers to Visit Every Locality.

Notice of their arrival in each locality will be given in advance through the press, banks and post offices. They will be supplied with income tax forms, copies of which may be obtained also from collectors of internal revenue.

The bureau of internal revenue is seeking to impress upon persons subject to the tax the fact that failure to see this official in no way relieves them of the duty imposed by law to file their returns within the time specified.

The penalty for failure to make the return on time is a fine of not less than $20 nor more than $1,000, and in addition 50 per cent of the amount of the tax due. For making a false or fraudulent return, the penalty is a fine not to exceed $2,000 or not exceeding one year's imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, and in addition 100 per cent of the tax evaded.

As to the Farmers.

The number of farmers who will pay income taxes has not been estimated by the government officials, but it is certain they will form a large percentage of the 5,000,000 persons assessed who never before have paid an income tax. The average farmer does not keep books but if he avails himself of the services of government experts who will be sent to aid him, it will not be difficult for him to ascertain the amount of his net income.

The farmer is making out his return may deduct depreciation in the value of property and machinery used in the conduct of his farm, and loss by fire, storm or other casualty, or by theft if not covered by insurance. Expenses actually incurred in farm operation may be deducted, but not family or living expense. Produce raised on the farm and traded for groceries, wearing apparel, etc., is counted as living expenditures and cannot be deducted.

Pilgrim Got By.

A seven-year-old was asked by his teacher at the primary school to produce a composition upon the subject of his favorite literary work. The youngster went into executive session with himself and turned out the following succinct criticism of a well-known and popular classic:—

"The Book I like best is called Pilgrim's Progress. My mother reads this Book to me every Night before I go to Bed. I love to hear about the Pilgrim. He had a hard time, but he got by!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Ann Arbor. — President H. B. Hutchins of the U. of M. has been advised by the president of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, that arrangements had been made with the war department for exemption of engineering students. This refers to an effort to place engineering students on the same footing as medical and dental students of draft age, who may enlist in a reserve corps, medical or dental and then be detailed back to the university to complete their studies.

Norman E. Buckner, Pontiac real estate and insurance man, pleaded guilty in a Birmingham justice court to conducting a loan agency and charging usurious rates of interest. He was fined the maximum, $100. Officers allege they found evidence of interest as high as 108 per cent a year.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 31.—C. W. Galloway, general manager of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, gave out a statement here in which he said disobedience of orders was responsible for the collision of passenger trains No. 2, bound from St. Louis to New York, and No. 23, from Cincinnati to St. Louis, near North Vernon, Ind. Seven trainmen and a passenger were killed and 20 others injured in the accident.

"The investigation indicates clearly," says the statement, "that the conductor and engineer of train No. 2 held an order which required them to wait at North Vernon for No. 23. For some reason not yet determined this order was disregarded.

"Both the order, which was a hold order, and the automatic signals, which are supplementary safeguards, were, for some reason not yet explained, wholly disobeyed, and on this violation of the rules by the crew of No. 2 rests the responsibility for the accident."

The engine crews of both trains were killed. The conductor of train No. 2 wes so seriously injured that he has been unable to make any statement.

North Vernon, Ind., Dec. 31.—Eight persons were killed and 20 injured as the result of a head-on collision between Baltimore & Ohio trains a mile east of here late Saturday night. The west-bound train carried several soldiers, according to reports, but it is not known if any of them were among the injured.

DIVERS CRASH UNDER SEA

Washington, Dec. 31.—Two United States submarines have collided 30 feet underwater and both have come safely home to port. No one ever had suspected that two submarines could bump and not both be crushed like eggshells. No accident of this sort ever has been reported before. The only injury was that the stem of one vessel was clipped off and some rivets were sprung on the other. The commanding officer of one vessel told the story on a recent visit here. The navy department now permits it to be made public.

Brownsville, Tex., Dec. 31.—Gordon Parmalee was killed and Charles Greenslade, paymaster for the Borderland Sugar corporation, slightly wounded when their automobile was fired upon from the brush one mile south of Llano Grande station, near Mercedes, Tex., by alleged Mexican bandits. Greenslade speeded up the car and escaped. Sheriff A. Y. Baker of Hidalgo county and deputies with a citizens' posse are searching for the bandits, and one report says a trail has been struck.

British Air Raid on Mannheim Resulted in Two Deaths and Dozen Wounded—French Soldiers Hurt.

Amsterdam, Dec. 31.—A semi-official communication printed in German newspapers referring to the British air raid on the city of Mannheim on December 25 says that no military damage was done. Two persons were killed and about a dozen were wounded, no soldiers being among them. A number of French war prisoners were injured, the communication says, and one British airplane was brought down in Palatina and the occupants made prisoner.

Unexplored Quebec.

It is estimated that in the north of the province of Quebec there are still 250,000 square miles of unexplored country, making, with the 642,000 square miles in western Canada, a total of 901,000 square miles. In other words, 28 per cent of Canada is still unexplored. In the basin of the River Mackenzie there are believed to be great petroleum wells. Natives state that they have seen lakes at the Yukon, from 60 to 70 miles long, that have not been seen by white men. The Mackenzie mountains no one, not even the Indians, knows anything of.

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Besides the saw mills and flouring mills, this water power is made available also to drive the machinery of a stave and heading manufactory. This establishment owned by Messrs. Blinn & Hayden went into operation some five years ago. It gives employment to eight or ten hands, men and boys, and turns out a million and a half or thereabouts of staves a year and a relative amount of heading. The machinery employed is very ingenious, complete and efficient and the work which it produces is remarkably perfect and satisfactory. It supplies the mill, not only with barrels, but also furnishes barrels to the farming community for the shipment of apples, potatoes and whatever other productions they may thus desire to send abroad. It is also of essential benefit to those who have timber to spare. It creates a call not merely for such timber as might be riven but very much that in this way, would be unavailable. Besides it puts a large quantity of this material into market, so that, in a sudden emergency a supply is at hand and a large amount of perishable property may be disposed of that otherwise, would be entirely lost, and a transient demand made available, which but for this facility would necessarily go by unimproved. The like facility for preparing hoops a result now especially sought, and more and more hoped for will leave little, if any thing, to be coveted in this department of manufacture. Should such a result be attained the enterprising proprietors of this establishment will be quick to know and improve it.

THE RAISIN MILL

There is another mill property, which though not in the corporation, is nevertheless, in the way of business, thoroughly identified with our village. We allude to what is usually styled the Raisin Mill. These mills, one for sawing and the other for flouring purposes, are situated one mile south and a half a mile east of the village. They are in the town of Raisin and hence the name, but their financial and shipping business is mainly done in our village and they furnish their full proportion of the lumber and of the choicest flour in our market. Hence they claim a notice here.

The site on which these mills stand is rather natural. The power is gained by throwing a dam pretty directly across the river which is flanked by high banks on either side of the stream and which creates a broad [illegible] to which flows the whole [illegible]

The saw mill was built in 1838, by Samuel Satterthwaite and Tilton Curtis. This mill did a large business for many years and still continues to do the sawing for a large rural district being thus of special importance to the prosperity of the people.

The flouring mill was built in 1847 by Samuel Satterthwaite and Aaron Comfort both of the society of the Friends and universally esteemed for virtue and integrity. They carried on the milling business for a number of years with prudence and success. Afterwards another proprietor was admitted and the style was changed to J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., who for some years, conducted the business under the uniform and very flattering auspices. The reputation of the flouring mill for gristing was one of the first and its superfine flour was excelled by no "brand" in the market.

While this company was, doing a large business, and was as generally supposed, healthful and something more then safe, they very unexpectedly to every body, in March 1861, were found unable to redeem the paper. They were forced into an assignment, which was set aside by the courts, when a compromise was proposed and accepted; and on the first of December, 1864, no old liabilities being adjusted, the property went into the hands of Woolston Comfort, Esq., who is still the proprietor.

Mr. Comfort, on taking possession of the property, found the flouring mill in an impaired condition. He proceeded immediately to put it under a course of thorough repair. In this he was very successful and for perfection of machinery and judicious management the mill had no longer any rival. And, by introducing the best of machinery at present known, by the employment of laborers of known skill and intergrity, and above all by strict and untiring personal attention to business, he continues the mill in uniform completeness and the flour whch it produces is equal in quality to any which the market affords.

Disappointed by his rejection at Camp Custer for physical disability, Abram Byrd, 30 years old, killed himself at his home in Vermontville. Byrd had served seven years in the army and wanted to re-enlist.

ONE RAIL SYSTEM TO RUSH TRAFFIC

Lines Submerge Interests in Effort to Co-Ordinate Service for War.

EMBARGO ON LUXURIES NEAR

War Operating Board to Restrict Passenger Travel to Lessen Transportation Burden—Inland Waterwas to Relieve Congestion.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Henceforth, for war purposes, there is just one railroad system east of Chicago; New York Central, Pennsylvania, B. & O., Erie and the rest of them are merely historical names.

These roads will be operated as a single big system by a committee composed of the vice presidents of the various lines. Instead of trying to make one road popular and more profitable than another, the railroads will be administered with the sole purpose of getting freight handled in the most expeditious way.

This is the answer of the railway war board to the complaint that the eastern roads are clogged and congested and unable to handle the enormous increase in their task due to war activities.

The war board directs "that all available facilities on all railways east of Chicago be pooled to the extent necessary to furnish maximum freight movement."

There is no question of individual ownership and interest; the roads are to be handled as a unit. Involved in the startling departure is the coal industry and the shipping business. It is a pooling of governmental transportation agencies as well as the railways.

At the meeting of the railway war board, Chairman Edwin N. Hurley of the shipping board, Dr. H. A. Garfield, then fuel administrator; Priority Director Lovett and Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clark were present. [illegible] the program [illegible] range for supplying the various coal markets from the nearest coal mines.

Seek Constant Flow.

"A constant flow of all traffic concurrently produces the best transportation results," says the railway war board.

The inland waterways are to be developed and thus some of the pressure will be taken off the railways. Secretary of War Baker has asked the shipping board for $3,360,000 to build 24 monster barges and two tugs for use on the canals, lakes and rivers.

Embargo on Luxuries.

The committee which will operate eastern railroads as a unit will suggest:

1. A practical embargo on luxuries after the Christmas deliveries.
2. A request to the public to reduce pleasure travel.

The reduction in pleasure rail travel will be urged through a campaign of advertising. Unnecessary travel makes huge demands on rolling stock, crews and trackage. Although the railroads have cut passenger equipment and canceled many trains, passenger travel is still increasing.

RUSS ARMY CHIEF IN TRUCE OFFER

Gen. Krylenko Makes Formal Armistice Proposals; Bundesrat Committee Called.

BOLSHEVIKI TO ARREST FOES

Lenine and Trotzky Accuse Bourgeois of Blocking Efforts to Provision the Army and Provide Funds for the Government.

Petrograd, Nov. 27.—Abolition of all titles of nobility was announced in an order by the bolsheviki government. The same proclamation announced confiscation of all corporate property of nobles, merchants and burgesses.

Zurich, Nov. 27.—The new Russian army commander in chief, General Krylenko, has made formal armistice proposals to the German and Austrian supreme commands, according to word received here. No details were given and it was not known whether any Russians had been formally received by German commanders or whether the armistice proffer had been transmitted by wireless.

Meet to Consider Armistice.

Amsterdam, Nov. 27.—The Tageblatt of Berlin prints a dispatch from Zurich to the effect that the meeting next Tuesday of the foreign affairs committee of the bundesrat presumably has been called because of the Russian armistice proposal.

Bolsheviki Plan Arrest of Foes.

Petrograd, Nov. 27.—Proclamations have been posted alleging that the bourgeois is blocking efforts to provision the army and to provide funds for the support of the government. They are signed by Lenine and Trotzky.

Another proclamation forecasts wholesale arrests and imprisonment at Kronstadt, as it instructs soldiers to disband committees opposing the bolsheviki program and to arrest the members.

The committee on the salvation of the revolution in a proclamation to the army declares that the last step of the bolsheviki is final ruin for Russia. The proclamation says:

"The allies will consider all Russians traitors. Without resources Russia will be a prey to anyone who chooses to pluck her. Abandoned, you will be at the mercy of Germany and will have to beg on your knees for clemency. This is where Lenine and Trotzky are leading."

The only possibility of saving the country, it is pointed out, is for the army to refuse to carry out the armistice proposal and demand that legal measures toward peace, which might find support from the allies and lead to the accomplishment desired, be taken.

The bolsheviki have taken over the state bank in Moscow, whose vaults are estimated to contain 700,000,000 rubles (about $350,000,000).

London Thinks Petrograd Gold Safe.

London, Nov. 27.—In calling attention to the fact that no statement of the Russian state bank has reached London since that for the week of October 29, the Times says it is not [illegible] whether the omission [illegible] the activities of the bolsheviki. It adds that current belief in well-informed circles is that the actual gold holding of the bank has been removed safely from Petrograd and it is not likely to get into the clutches of Lenine.

RED CROSS NEWS

On Thursday there was a meeting of the canvassers for the membership drive at Headquarters, Mr. Burridge in the chair. The town was divided up between those present, and they have done their work well, in spite of the very cold weather, they have to contend with. We must secure many more members for the honor of Tecumseh. Some of our neighboring towns are way ahead of us in membership, in proportion to their size, and the impression seems to be abroad that the people living in the country are not supporting us as they should. We hope to see the "100 per cent." on the Red Cross Service flag on the houses of our loyal farmers. It means, that when every member of your family, or of the residents in house are members of the Red Cross you have the right to hang a label with 100 per cent on your window.

The membership drive will continue indefinitely and every house will be canvassed, everybody will be asked for membership for this year and for renewals for April 1918.

The following list of members both new members and renewals, Mrs. Andrew Taylor, Edna Taylor, Raymond Taylor, S. C. Cutting, Newberry Satterthwaite, Mrs. Geo. Kempf, Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mrs. Jas. A. Murphy, Otis Sisson, Edna Sisson, Albert Howard, Eleanor Caldwell, Mrs. Fred O'Dell, Miss Louise Phelps, Mrs. W. T. Eccles, W. T. Eccles, Charles Burridge, Mrs. Chas. Burrdge, Charles Gaston Burridge, Dr. P. B. Hardy, Jenny C. Law Hardy, Robert Russell, Mrs. Robert Russell.

You can pay present memberships or renewals to Mr. Herbert Temple, at the Lilley State Bank, or to officers of the Red Cross and if you do so, you will save the canvassers a great deal of hard work and time they can devote to knitting.

Post cards were included in the Christmas packets sent to the soldiers; the first one to use them was Louis B. Hall, 140th Inf., Co. H., Fort Sill, Okla. He sent his thanks and says that he appreciated the gift very much.

Mrs. Sena Crane has received her new patterns for pajama suits and will resume work at Headquarters the first Wednesday after the New Year, she will be there both Wednesday and Thursday and would like a full attendance of her committee, as she has plenty of work.

The company has raised $862.00 to date, and will bring the amount to the desired $1,000 as soon as possible.

Dr. Tresie Pavicie made the following charges against the Austrian soldiers in a speech on the Austrian Reichrath:

"The autocrat of Bosnia, General Potiorek, ordered all Servians to be removed from the frontiers of Bosnia and his orders were carried out. The inhabitants of the village of Siree when they reached Mt Rude, were forced by their guards to dig their own graves, and to lie down quietly, each in his own. Many women lay down with their children at their breasts. The soldiers did not shoot them all at once, but one by one. The living had to heap earth upon the dead, until their own turn came to be covered by the soldiers.

"In Slavonia all who were suspected of pro-Slav sympathies were ruthlessly handled. They drove the people from villages into yards and shot them down like hares in a drive. They were also shot down by machine guns.

"The Austrian regiments carried thousands of yards of rope with them to be able to hang people quickly. At Tuzla 300 Servians were seen hanging to trees."

Remember this is the treatment we shall receive, if we are beaten. There is no imagination about it; you know these things are true, and the rulers of Germany hate us worse than they do Serbia. To humiliate America and to drag her men and women in the dust, would be a supreme joy to the Kaiser.

And there are people who will not join the Red Cross; are you one of these? If so, if a dollar is more to you than America, then you are but worthy of being the German's servant. In every country in the world every human being has to take his stand; in a short while you too will have either to be a loyal American and pay the price or be an alien outcast, even if you were born here.

For your own honor, join the Red Cross and do it NOW. Don't wait to be asked.

Jenny C. Law Hardy,
Publicity Director.

UNIQUE CHRISTMAS DINNER

Enjoyed by our Tecumseh Bunch in Orlando, Florida

A unique Christmas dinner was enjoyed at the Gore house at Number 3 East South street, Orlando, Fla., Sunday, December 25, 1917.

Unique in that the twelve people who partook of it were all from the village of Tecumseh, in Michigan. Unique in that it was designed, prepared and eaten entirely by that Michigan bunch, for not a person but a Tecumsehite entered the Gore home that day till some time after the meal was concluded. Unique because the "place cards" were genuine U. S. army "hard tack," each tied with a bit of red ribbon. Unique in that no member of the party was less than 59 years old. Unique because every member of the party has children and grandchildren in the North.

If there was a single "fly in the ointment" it was the fact that there were no children or young folks in the company. To the Northerners it seemed unique because it was a Christmas dinner with doors and windows wide open. In fact, for two hours the members of the party, not actively engaged in preparing the repast, sat and visited on the front porch where the thermometer at one time stood at 78 degrees in the shade. It was also unique in that every one of the company is a regular communicant of one of Tecumseh's three Chicago street churches.

The feast was ready at a few minutes past one and those Yankees sat, ate and visited for two long and short hours. There were undoubtedly more elaborate spreads in Orlando that day but none better cooked, better served, or more wholesome.

Father Mills sat at the head of the table and "carved the duck," which in this case looked like chickens. Mrs. Sheldon sat at the other end of the board and "mothered" the whole flock. The "wish bones" were parts of the portions served to Mr. Hurry and Dr. North. For one "elderly crowd" they were remarkably merry, due probably to their surroundings both external and internal. He who asked Heaven's blessing on the company and the food did not forget to petition the Higher Power for loved ones in the North and for safety for our soldiers boys at the front in this awful war.

The decorations were holly and Christmas bells arranged by the ladies. The centerpiece of green and red grapes over red apples and oranges was truly a center of admiration. The idea of such a banquet seems to have originated with Mrs. Benedict, and a photograph of the dozen and the house s to be taken soon. Thus the Peninsular State of the North courts the favors of the Peninsular State of the South.

Those participating in the feast were: Mrs. Ella L. Sheldon, Mrs. Ellen Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hurry, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Mills, Dr. and Mrs. L. G. North.

As the darkness fell upon Orlando the Beautiful, the company sat on the front porch and those that could sing joined Mrs. Hurry in singing "Michigan, My Michigan."—Contributed

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

We clip the following from the Jackson Patriot of December 29 which will be of interest to the friends of the family in Tecumseh:

Entertaining informally Thursday evening a few friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E Crossman, 223 W. Wesley street, announced the engagement of their daughter Beulah Annette, to Forrest Reed Winchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reed Winchell, 1220 Francis street. The announcement came in the form of a telegram and was read by Clare D. Wilson. Miss Mary Matthews sang in her charming ways two selections, and Miss Yetdhen Worch favored with instrumental selections while Harold Leslie with his rich baritone voice delighted his hearers. The house was beautifully decorated in green, carrying out the Christmas colors, red carnations being used in profusion. Refreshments were served after hearty congratulations by the guests of the young couple. The time of the wedding is indefinite.

Mrs. John Meade of Detroit has been visiting her father, Robert Elliott and family for the weekend.

FEDERAL TAX OFFICERS WILL BE IN TECUMSEH ON FEBRUARY 16th.

Will Make his Headquarters at Postoffice and will Instruct Income Tax Payers, Fee of Charge

In a communication received by this paper, Collector of Internal Revenue James J. Brady announces that a federal income tax officer will be sent into this county on February 11 and will be here until Februury 16. He will have his office in the postoffice in Tecumseh for one day and will be there ready and willing to help persons subject to the income tax make out their returns without any cost to them for his services.

How many income-tax payers will there be in Tecumseh? If you can guess how many married persons living with wife or husband will have net incomes of $2,000 or over and how many unmarried persons will have net incomes of $1,000 or over this year, then you know. The collector of internal revenue estimates that there will be 1400 taxpayers in this county.

Returns of income for the year 1917 must be made on forms provided for the purpose before March 1, 1918. Because a good many people don't understand the law and won't know how to make out their returns, the government is sending in this expert to do it for them. But the duty is on the tax payer to make himself known to the government. If he doesn't make return as required before March 1 he may have to pay a penalty ranging from $20 to $1,000, pay a fine or go to jail. So if you don't want to take chances on going to jail, you better call on the income tax man. If you are not sure about being subject to the tax, better ask him and make sure. Whether you see the income tax man or not, you must make return if subject to tax.

Of course, persons resident in other counties may, if they want to, come and see the income tax man who will be at Tecumseh on Feb. 16, 1918.

The collector suggests that every body start figuring up now his income and expenses so as to be ready with the figures when the expert arrives. Expenses, however, don't mean family expenses, money used to pay off the principal of a debt, new machinery, buildings or anything like that. They mean what you spend in making your money—interest, taxes paid, hired help, amount paid for goods sold, seed, stock bought for feeding, rent (except for your dwelling), etc. Income includes about every dollar you get.

SERIOUS RESULTS FROM AN OPERATION

Saturday afternoon Lester Rogers was operated upon for the removal of his tonsils which had become badly diseased. The operation was a successful one, but the after resulst proved quite serious.

Mr. Rogers returned from the office to his place of business and in the evening suffered a very bad hemmorrhage. The doctor was called at once and rendered the necessary aid. He was then taken to his home and has been very weak since, but is doing as well as possible.

HARRY ORENDORF

The remains of Harry Orendorf were brought here from Mt. Clova, Ohio, Monday for burial. The funeral was held at the home of his aunt Mrs. Floyd Snell. Rev. W. B. Hartzog officiated, with burial in Brookside cemetery.

Mr. Orendorf was a brother of Mrs. Pliny Gratz and a nephew of James Teagarden and Mrs. Micheal Wise. He was a resident of Tecumseh about 15 years ago and was 28 years of age.

This is the Stove Polish YOU Should Use

IT'S different from others because more care is taken in the making and the materials used are of higher grade.

Black Silk Stove Polish

Makes a brilliant, silky polish that does not rub off or dust off, and the shine lasts four times as long as ordinary stove polish. Used on sample stoves and sold by hardware and grocery dealers.

All we ask is a trial. Use it on your cook stove, your parlor stove or your gas range. If you don't find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Insist on Black Silk Stove Polish. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works
Sterling, Illinois

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel on grates, registers, stove-pipes—Prevents rusting. Use Black Silk Metal Polish for silver, nickel or brass. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

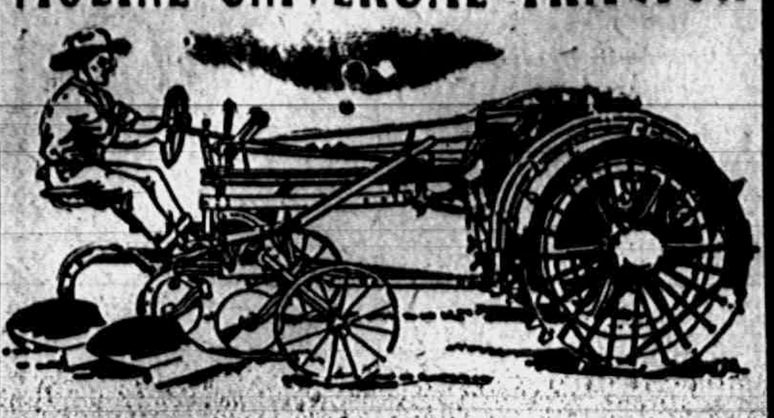
WHY BUY A

MOLINE UNIVERSAL TRACTOR



One man controls tractor from seat.

Cost less than four horses, requires care less than one.

Does as much work as seven "eats" only when in use.

Weighs from 1500 to 2000 lbs. less than other tractor of the same power, therefore will work where other mine.

Handles easier than a team, will back where you cannot back with a team, turns in a 16 inch circle.

Plows from 4 to 12 acres per day.

Works close to fences, one drive wheel in furrow.

Can easily and quickly be attached to your binders, harrows, grain drill or other machinery you have.

Manufactured by a $10,000,000 company who stand back of it with the broadest kind of a service guarantee.

Been in actual use seven years, one year in Michigan.

Every tractor has to be ordered in advance as demand is greater than supply regardless of the fact the factories are the largest tractor factories in the world.

Military Organization of Romans 2,000 Years Ago Was Model of Efficiency

When Rome invaded the Germanic countries—about 11 B. C., or Julius Caesar's time—the Roman general staff was obliged to send back to the rear along the Rhine and the Lippe—large amounts of grain and other rations, says the People's Home Journal. The vessels in which these were transported nearly 2,000 years ago have been found in mounds of earth and refuse recently excavated. These great earthen vessels are marked with many inscriptions regarding their contents, showing how carefully the Roman general staff did its work. As an example of efficiency the Roman military organization has been the wonder of the world. From the inscriptions on these vessels one discovers how the Roman soldier was fed. His rations evidently consisted of bread, the staff of life, for the preparation of which the grain was ground in small hand mills.

Fish, snails, mussels and oysters, as well as many kinds of fruit, especially peaches, were included in the bill of fare. Of metal vessels the common man of that day knew very little; he ate from earthen unglazed dishes and cooked his food in pots of the same ware. A curious document has been found in the caves of the 1,000 Buddhas in India, written about 900 A. D., and in a good state of preservation. The author, a military officer by the name of Bagatur Chigsil, pronounces in angry terms his dissatisfaction with the food supplied by the commissary department, viz: One sheep and two butts of water for the commanding officer and 30 adjutants, all of whose names are recorded. "Bagul, the commissary, is a wretched, good-for-nothing slave," declared Bagatur. This complaint recorded over 1,000 years ago, is the "touch of nature which makes the whole world kin."

is to set 'em so they'll

Senators' Peculiar Affliction.

There is one United States senator who does not take himself as seriously as some of his colleagues take themselves. This is evident from a remark he made in the cloakroom one day:

"The trouble with the senate is," he said, "that after a man has been a member of it a few months he gets a disease of the retina. It fixes him so he cannot see anybody but himself."

WHICH WAY ARE YOU FACING?

Can You Distinguish Between the Grand or Commonplace, the Noble or Contemptible?

At a popular seaside resort two rows of seats stood back to back. One of these faced the ocean. A silver moon threw a luminous path across the water, and touched with strange radiance the breakers as they broke in foam on the sand. A red signal light in the distance blinked its warning. Overhead the stars looked down silently. Seated there one forgot the the noisy jostle of the busy world, and felt life's beauty and majesty.

The adjacent seats faced in the opposite direction. The occupants looked on a merry-go-round and a screen on which moving pictures were being thrown. This bench was crowded. The young people who sat there saw many colored electric lights, in place of the moon and the stars, and listened to the boisterous music of a steam piano, rather than to the thundering melody of the waves. They laughed over the fantastic pictures on the screen, unmindful of the sublime scene over their shoulders.

These young people, so close that their garments touched, carried very different impressions away from their evening. They had been together, but they had been facing different ways. Some had seen the petty and belittling, others had looked on the majestic and uplifting and beautiful; and the life of neither could be quite the same after that evening.

The seaside episode has its counterpart in everyday life. We can see the grand or the commonplace, the noble or the contemptible, the uplifting or the degrading. Which way are we facing?—Girls' Companion.

MEANS FOUND NOT GUILTY

New Yorker Acquitted of Charge of Murdering Mrs. Maude A. King.

JURY OUT FIFTEEN HOURS

State Contended That Means Had Looted Widow's Fortune and Killed Her to Escape an Accounting.

Concord, N. C., Dec. 17.—Gaston B. Means was acquitted here of a charge of slaying Mrs. Maude A. King, the wealthy New York and Chicago widow.

The jury deliberated a little over fifteen hours.

During the trial, which began November 26, New York and Chicago witnesses declared that nearly all the $1,000,000, inherited by Mrs. King from her husband, the late J. C. King of Chicago, had "vanished" during the time Means acted as the woman's business agent.

The state contended at the trial that Means had looted Mrs. King's fortune and killed her to escape an accounting.

History of the Tragedy.

The tragedy for which Means had been blamed occurred on the evening of August 29, about two miles from Concord, N. C. Means who was well known in New York, and not without acquaintances in Chicago, was accompanied by his brother, another man and Mrs. King on a trip to the country.

It was on this trip that Mrs. King was killed. Her death was instantaneous.

Means said the shooting was accidental.

Mrs. Means Left $1,000,000.

As supplying a possible motive for murder, it was charged that Means, as manager of Mrs. King's property, had dissipated a large part of it and that exposure was near at hand, and that Mrs. King had been contemplating another marriage, which would end Means' management of the property.

Mrs. King first came to Chicago 16 years ago from Morrison, Ill., as the young bride of James Clark King, an aged millionaire. King died five years after his marriage. He left his widow only $100,000, but she contested the will and was awarded $1,000,000.

Widow Marries Again.

Taking her fortune, the widow went to Paris. There she married Dr. Perry Chance of Dayton, O., but who was living in the French capital. Four years later she divorced the doctor.

After the death of Mrs. King and during the investigation of Means life, it was charged he was a German spy. At the trial it was brought out by the defense that while Means had acted as a German agent prior to the United States entering the war, he had been loyal since then. He told on the witness stand of service rendered the Washington government to frustrate German propaganda.

FRANK GOTCH DIES IN IOWA

Wrestling Champion, Conqueror of Hackenschmidt, Had Been Ill for Two Years.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 17.—Frank Gotch of Humboldt, who retired as heavyweight champion wrestler a few years ago, died here on Sunday.

Gotch was known all over the world as the greatest catch-as-catch-can wrestler in the history of that sport. Death was caused by uraemic poisoning. Gotch had been ailing for two years.

The last time Gotch appeared in Chicago he refereed the contest between Ed "Strangler" Lewis and John Olin, which lasted close to three hours. Gotch at that time was very weak and had to rest during the match by sitting on the ropes.

Gotch was the conqueror of Hackenschmidt, Stanislaus Zbyszko, Yussif Mahmout, Fred Beel and others well known in the wrestling world.

The last match between Hackenschmidt and Gotch was staged in the White Sox ball park.

Gotch was one of America's most famous athletes and his death will be mourned by thousands.

ALLEGED SLACKER IS SLAIN

Two Others Seriously Wounded by Deputy Sheriff During Fight Near Sasco, Ariz.

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 17.—One alleged selective service evader was instantly killed and two others so badly wounded that their capture was easily effected later when Enis Thurman, a deputy sheriff of Pinal county, encountered the three in a lonely mountain region near Sasco. Armed only with a shotgun loaded with bird shot, Thurman had been seeking the three men who were reported to have driven off cattle from a ranch five miles from Sasco.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Senator Gore of Oklahoma went to a sanitarium here today for treatment for nervous trouble and insomnia.

Italy's Aerial Tramways.

Before the war the aerial tramway was utilized in various parts of the world for transporting materials across chasms and up mountain sides, but it remained for the Italians to adapt it to their necessity of negotiating the sheer heights in Alpine warfare, according to the National Geographic Magazine. A young engineer of Milan is credited with having first suggested its present use, but it seems to have exceeded in usefulness his wildest dreams. Few facts have been given out concerning the extent of the system, but when this war is over a thrilling tale of engineering feats in its construction will remain to be told.

Cruel Words.

"But can't you give me any encouragement at all?" asked the rejected suitor.

"I'm afraid not," replied the heartless beauty. "However, I don't mind telling you that I have refused one or two men who pleased me even less than you do. If you can get any comfort out of that, you are welcome to it."

PRO-WAR PARTY WINS IN CANADA

DRAFT VOTE WINS 87 SEATS

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—Conscription has been confirmed and the unionist government has been returned to power by the Canadian domestic vote. Returns from all over Canada indicate that the government of Sir Robert Borden has been elected to administer Canadian affairs for another five years and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is as definitely defeated as in the reciprocity election of 1911.

Figures indicate that the French portion of Canada has gone heavily for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and English constituencies have returned men who will support the union government measures and maintain Premier, Borden in office.

Establish Safe Lead.

Official returns showed that, with sixteen districts to be heard from, the unionists had won 128 seats and the opposition 87, with four seats deferred.

Early returns at Vancouver showed unionist candidates were leading in British Columbia with big majorities, with the exception of one constituency.

Returns from Toronto, Hamilton, London and other districts in which the war is strongly supported, indicate that the government received overwhelming support.

In the counties of Kent and Westmoreland, New Brunswick, however, it was believed Laurier supporters had been returned. Their majorities ranged from 1,200 to 1,600.

Quebec Against War.

Quebec province has 65 seats and of these the government has won only three. Two ministers, Hon. F. E. Blondin, postmaster general, now overseas with a French-Canadian battalion, and Hon. Albert Sevigny, secretary of state, were among those who lost. Seats will be found for both elsewhere, it is said. The general impression here is that the province has gone as everybody expected it would—solid quit-the-war-Laurier and anti-British. The French-Canadians are highly elated at their cleanup.

Ontario went overwhelmingly unionist, thus protesting against the Quebec mandate against conscription as represented by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was defeated in Ottawa, one of the twin seats for which he ran.

Conscription the Issue.

The election, while nominally for the control of parliament, was really a referendum on conscription.

The unionists, under the leadership of Sir Robert Borden, passed a conscription act but could not enforce it in the face of an opposing minority, known as the anticonscription liberals and nationalists, under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Messrs. Bourasa and Lavergne.

On the decision today rested the fate of the union government and, in effect, the further participation of Canada in the war. If returned to power, the unionists stand pledged to enforce selective service and thereby expand the ranks of the Canadians overseas.

Army Law Attacked.

Against conscription, and in spirit opposed to Canada's participation in the war, the nationalists-Laurier-liberals are pledged, in the event of victory, to shelve the present army law and set into motion the slow-moving machinery for a "referendum."

Big Drive for Recruits.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—A great drive for recruits throughout the middle West was ordered started by Col. John S. Dennis, commanding the division of the British-Canadian recruiting mission, following word of the adoption of conscription in Canada. Arrangements are underway here for a celebration of the conscription victory.

MONTANA MOB ATTACKS JAIL

Attempt Made at Billings to Lynch Mexican Who Killed a Policeman.

Billings, Mont., Dec. 19.—The county jail is strongly guarded as a result of an attempt by a mob to enter it in an effort to seize Juan Juarro, a Mexican section hand, who shot and killed a policeman. After battering down the front door, the mob was held back by Sheriff Stone Matlock and his deputies until police assistance arrived. The deputies fired into the crowd, but so far as could be learned no one was wounded.

Raindrops Make Lightning.

An English scientist declares that the splitting of raindrops in falling through the ascending air currents, which are characteristic of thunderstorms, is the source of lightning. The small drops with negative charges go up with the wind while large ones with positive charges stay below. Thus during a thunderstorm there is usually a region of positive electricity between the positive earth and the negative upper portion. When the charge has become sufficient a series of direct current discharges usually takes place along approximately the same line and these reduce what we see as a lightning flash.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

Regimental officers estimate that only about 50 per cent of efficiency is obtained in the cold weather, but declare this is better than no outdoor wor kat all. It is against the policy of the division to allow men to remain in barracks if avoidable.

Camp Custer is the healthiest army camp in America, according to figures announced by the division surgeon's office.

Simultaneously with the appearance of the trench helmet there has appeared the first camouflage uniform. It resembles a suit of hooded white pajamas and will be used by sentries and outposts during winter weather. Garbed in one of these outfits it is hard to distinguish at 300 yards or more, and at night cannot be seen at all at 150 yards, even when moving [illegible]

WAR ORDERS HURT CREAMERIES

Dairy Commissioner Says Condenseries Pay Too Much for Milk.

Lansing—War prosperity in the condensed milk business in Michigan promises to harm the dairy butter business, according to Fred L. Woodworth, state dairy and food commissioner.

Mr. Woodworth says the condenseries are able to pay a big price for milk to the farmer, because of the prices at which the government is buying condensed milk. The government says to the condenser, your price to us must be cost plus 10 per cent. This leaves the way open for almost any cost. In some parts of the state condenseries are paying almost $4 a hundred pounds for milk.

The creamery cannot face such competition. Generally $3 is a high price for the creamery to pay, especially with the price of butter being kept down by the food administration. The creameries say that their business will be ruined, if the condenseries are permitted contiually to boost the price they pay the farmer for his milk.

If prices continue to go up the creameries feel that they would not be able to successfully bid on government naval contracts next spring.

This year state creameries sold millions of pounds of butter to the navy.

Petrograd, Dec. 19.—The evening papers announce that Leon Trotsky, bolsheviki foreign minister, has notified the allies' embassies that the armistice has reached definite results and that peace negotiations will begin, and has asked them to participate or to say whether they wish peace.

Up to this evening the embassies had not received the communication and an informal conference of the allies' diplomats is said to have reached no definite decision.

The German and Austrian foreign ministers, Dr. von Kuehlmann and Count Czernin, have notified Trotsky that they will arrive at Brest-Litovsk Tuesday to begin negotiations for a general European peace.

Amsterdam, Dec. 19.—A semiofficial dispatch received here from Vienna, says:

"The governments of Austria-Hungary, Germany, Bulgaria, Turkey and Russia will follow up the armistice as speedily as possible with peace negotiations. The selection of plenipotentiaries now is proceeding and pending their arrival the armistice delegates at Brest-Litovsk have started informal peace negotiations."

London, Dec. 19.—The Petrograd agency of the bolsheviki has issued the following announcement:

"At a meeting of representatives of the upper classes, presided over by the director of the Persian Bank of Discount, for the purpose of lending aid to strikes, the following persons were arrested: M. Pepine, former manager of the general treasury; M. Skvordsoff, former director of the ministry of finance; M. Chatslahanoff, former vice minister of finance; M. Balanbanoff, former vice director of the ministry of finance; M. Heymann, director of the Persian Bank of Discount."

Loren English, former Flint policeman, now a Canadian soldier, escaped the Halifax disaster by a few hours. English, whose regiment was in Halifax waiting for orders to go overseas, got a four-day furlough the night before the disaster. Before leaving Canada he was informed that 150 members of his company, who were working on the docks in Halifax, were killed by the blast.

Dr. Frank Rice, of Owosso, medical member of the county draft board, fell and broke his right leg while making a call. The leg was broken in two places last spring when a street car hit him. He now has a $50,000 damage suit pending against the Michigan Railway company as a result of that accident. Woman Is Sent Abroad on Government Mission

Mrs. Norman DeR. Whitehouse, chairman of the New York state suffrage party, who has been selected by Chairman George Creel of the federal committee on public information as one of a group of prominent persons to bring to the German people, through neutrals, the war aims and intentions of the American people. The Palace of Life.

The school, as the entrance hall to the palace of life, must be in architectural harmony with the greater building, if it is not to be incongruous and harmful rather than beautiful and useful. As an audience is essential in the larger sphere of manhood activity, so is it essential to the preparatory years spent at school.

FLYERS GUARD PADUA

Enemy Airmen Driven Back by Italians.

Teutons Drop Bombs on Other Cities When Forced Back by Daring Aviators—Artillery Quiet.

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Jan. 7.—Padua was spared another air raid, largely through the daring of Italian aviators, who went into the air an hour before moonrise and formed an aerial cordon around the city, meeting enemy machines as they advanced.

The enemy aviators, seeing the heavy concentration, diverted their course, going to Mestre, Bassano and Castel Franco. They caused some casualties and considerable loss at the last place.

British aviators are doing especially good work. Their latest exploit was the destruction of an enemy balloon at Susegana and the bringing down of an enemy airplane by gunfire.

The artillery action along the mountain and Piave fronts is intermittent, and no longer shows the intensity of a big offensive. Along the upper Piave enemy batteries have been virtually silent for a week, indicating either a shortage of ammunition or a possible movement of forces westward to other fronts.

Rome, Jan. 7.—Austro-German and Italian big guns maintained a vigorous fire along the entire Italian front, says the war office announcement, and there was great aerial activity. Enemy patrol attempts between the Brenta and Piave rivers were easily repulsed.

"I want you to get it back for me."

"Who has it?"

"My wife has it."

"Watson, kindly show the gentleman out," responded the astute Sherlock with a yawn.

LLOYD-GEORGE ANSWERS FOES' PEACE TERMS

FREEDOM FOR NATIONALITIES

Entente Not Fighting to Destroy Germany—France and Italy to Be Given Lost Peoples—Poles to Be Reunited—Russia Is Left to Decide Its Own Fate.

London, Jan. 7.—The British prime minister, David Lloyd-George set forth Great Britain's war aims and the peace terms it would discuss more specifically and at greater length than he has ever done before. He delivered the address before a meeting of the delegates of the trades unions.

The premier said the government stood responsible for the words he used; that he was speaking, "not merely the mind of the government, but the mind of the nation and the empire."

Fight to Insure Peace.

The premier said the empire was fighting to make war impossible in the future. War and the danger of war must be made impossible by the replacing of the rule of might by the rule of law, sustained by the family of nations.

"We believe," he said, "that a great attempt must be made to establish a great international organization as a means of settling international disputes.

"War is a relic of barbarism, and as law has succeeded violence in the settlement of individuals' disputes, so it is destined to settle national controversies."

Three Conditions Vital.

Mr. Lloyd-George asserted the safety of the world depends on three conditions. These he announced as follows:

"First, the sanctity of treaties must be re-established.

"Second, territorial settlement must be based on the right of self-determination or the consent of the governed.

"Lastly, the creation of an international organization to limit armaments and diminish the probability of war."

"To secure those conditions," the premier added, "the British empire is prepared to make even greater sacrifices."

Mr. Lloyd-George told the war and peace aims in fulfillment of a promise to address the delegates of the trades unions, who are meeting to discuss the question of man power with Sir Auckland Geddes, minister of national service.

People Entitled to Know Facts.

Premier Lloyd-George's speech in part follows:

"When the government invites organized labor in this country to assist them to maintain the might of their armies in the field, its representatives are entitled to ask that any misgivings and doubts which any of them may have about the purpose to which this precious strength is to be applied, should be definitely cleared. And what is true of organized labor is equally true of all citizens in this country, without regard to grade or avocation.

"When men by the million are being called upon to suffer and die, and vast populations are being subjected to sufferings and privations of war on a scale unprecedented in the history of the world, they are entitled to know for what cause or causes they are making the sacrifice.

Must State War Aims.

"It is only the clearest, greatest and justest of causes that can justify the continuance, even for one day, of this unspeakable agony of the nation, and we ought to be able to state clearly and definitely not only the principles for which we are fighting, but also their definite and concrete application to the war map of the world.

"We are arrived at the most critical hour in this terrible conflict, and before any government takes a fateful decision as to the conditions under which it ought either to terminate or to continue the struggle it ought to be satisfied that the conscience of the nation is behind these conditions, for nothing else can sustain the effort which is necessary to achieve a righteous end to this war.

"I have, therefore, during the last few days taken special pains to ascertain the view and attitude of representative men of all sections of thought and opinion in the country.

"Last week I had the privilege not merely of perusing the declared war aims of the labor party, but also of discussing in detail with labor leaders the meaning and intention of that declaration.

"I have also had opportunity of discussing this same momentous question with Mr. Asquith and Viscount Grey. Had it not been that the nationalist leaders are in Ireland, engaged in endeavoring to solve the tangled problem of Irish self-government, I should have been happy to exchange views with them, but Mr. Redmond, speaking on their behalf, has with his usual lucidity and force, in many of his speeches, made clear what his ideas are as to the subject and purpose of the war. I have also had an opportunity of consulting certain representatives of the great dominions overseas.

Speaks for the Empire.

"I am glad to be able to say, as a result of all these discussions, that, although the government is alone responsible for the actual language I propose using, there is a national agreement as to the character and purpose of our war aims and peace conditions, and in what I say to you today, and through you to the world, I can venture to claim that I am speaking not merely the mind of the government, but of the nation and of the empire as a whole.

"We may begin by clearing away some misunderstanding and stating what we are fighting for.

Not War of Aggression.

"We are not fighting a war of aggression against the German people. Their leaders have persuaded them that they are fighting a war of self-defense against a league of rival nations, bent on the destruction of Germany. That is not so. The destruction or disruption of Germany or the German people never has been a war aim with us from the first day of this war to this day.

"Most reluctantly and, indeed, quite unprepared for the dreadful ordeal, we were forced to join in this war, in self-defense of the violated public law of Europe and in vindication of the most solemn treaty obligations, on which the public system of Europe rested and in which Germany had ruthlessly trampled in her invasion of Belgium.

Forced to Join Struggle.

"We had to join in the struggle or stand aside and see Europe go under and brute force triumph over public right and international justice.

"It was only the realization of that dreadful alternative that forced the British people into the war, and from that original attitude they have never swerved. They have never aimed at a breakup of the German people or the disintegration of their state or country. Germany has occupied a great position in the world. It is not our wish or intention to question or destroy that position for the future, but rather to turn her aside from hopes and schemes of military domination."

U. S. INSURES 362,941 LIVES

Soldiers' Policies Aggregate $3,105,776,500—Last Day for Applications February 12.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Secretary McAdoo announced that 362,941 insurance policies, aggregating $3,105,776,500 and averaging $8,557 a policy, had been taken out by American soldiers and sailors under the war insurance law. The secretary also called attention to the fact that February 12 is the final day upon which applications for insurance may be received by the government.

PEACE PARLEY IS SUSPENDED; TEUTONS REVOLT

25,000 German Troops on Russ Front Object to Being Sent to France.

FOOD SUPPLIES ARE CUT OFF

Kaiser Halts Conference at Brest-Litovsk Following Russ Demand to Transfer Seat of Negotiations to Stockholm.

London, Jan. 7.—An official statement issued at Berlin Saturday and forwarded from Zurich announced that because of the Russian request to transfer the peace conferences from Brest-Litovsk to Stockholm, the central powers had temporarily suspended the negotiations with Russia.

The message which was filed at Zurich Saturday, said:

"Another crown council was held today at Berlin, which Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General von Ludendorff attended. After the meeting this official announcement was issued:

"'In consequence of the request of the Russian government to transfer the seat of negotiations from Best-Litovsk to Stockholm, the central powers have temporarily suspended the negotiations with Russia.'"

25,000 Germans in Revolt.

A dispatch received here from the Russian wireless service says that 25,000 German soldiers in the region east of Kovno have revolted. German deserters stated that in consequence of the government drafting all soldiers below the age of thirty-five for dispatch to the western front, the aforementioned number of men rebelled and marched out of the battle line.

Then they entrenched themselves with rifles and machine guns against the other German units. The German military authorities have been powerless against the revolters and are trying to cut off their food supplies.

The German deserters declared that one of the motives for the revolt was that the sending of troops to the western front was a contravention of the Russo-German armistice agreement.

ENGLAND CUTS BEEF IN HALF

Lower Meat Consumption First Step in Lord Rhondda's Rationing Plan.

London, Jan. 7.—Until the situation improves the consumption of beef in England must be reduced at least one-half, according to an official statement concerning the scarcity of meat. The Daily Mail says that meat will be the first food dealt with under Lord Rhondda's compulsory rationing plan. Butter and margarine will follow meat and other foods will be added as they become scarcer. All the chief foodstuffs, it adds, will be rationed by April.

RECORD STORM HITS CHICAGO

City Swept by Worst Storm in Its History—Traffic Is Halted.

DRIFTS OVER 15 FEET HIGH

Telegraph and Telephone Wires Down—Several Persons Injured—Stalled Autos Abandoned—Steamer Missouri Marooned.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Chicago was struck by the most severe storm in its history yesterday. A 44-mile-an-hour gale which arose in Texas two days ago swept into the city early Sunday morning and kept up its terrific pace throughout the day and night. A blinding snow accompanied it.

Every form of traffic was demoralized by the elements and drifts of 15 or more feet were not uncommon sights. Several persons were injured. Pedestrians were few and far between.

Roads Unable to Conquer Drifts.

Railroads—especially to the South, North and West—tossed up the sponge. Those from the East maintained trains, but delays were great.

Street cars crept along in the wake of plows and sweepers, and in many instances lines were delayed for hours.

Telegraph and telephone wires, especially in the open country where the wind had full play, were wrecked. Many telephone wires in the city were also put out of order.

Chicago Nearly Snowbound.

One danger today will be a snowbound city. This seriously will interfere with the delivery of coal. There is a sufficient supply, though, to carry Chicago through the emergency.

Milk and bakery deliveries also will be disrupted, it is expected.

There was no automobile traffic save on a few streets in the loop. Hundreds of cars were stalled along boulevards and other streets and their owners deserted them.

Scores of Motors Buried in Snow.

Many autos were almost buried by the snow. The auto bus service on the North side gave up its schedule entirely.

The elevated lines saved the day for many persons who were forced to leave their homes. The storm proved too much for the street cleaning bureau.

Cold weather will follow in the wake of the blizzard. The weather bureau says the wind will subside some today, but the mercury is expected to go to 10 above.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the storm is the area which it covers. Arising last Friday in western Texas, it proceeded leisurely up the Mississippi valley and toward the Great Lakes, developing strength.

Sunday it put in its most telling licks and a blizzard raged from Kansas City to Pittsburgh and from the Ohio river up to Canada.

In less than 12 hours Chicago received one-third of a winter's snowfall. At five o'clock a fall of more than 12 inches was registered and there were 4½ inches already on the ground from a previous fall. An average year's snowfall is from 30 to 35 inches.

One portion of the wind whisked off to the southeast and tore through Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. It carried rain with it.

Lake Shipping Periled.

Lake shipping is periled by the storm. The steamship Missouri, owned by the Northern Michigan Transportation company, is icebound two miles from the outer harbor, according to information received by Capt. J. O. Anderson of the coast guards.

The Goodrich liner Alabama weathered the storm and reached port after a three-hour battle with the ice off the mouth of the river.

Taxis Held in Loop.

When the wind and snow showed no sign of abatement the large taxicab companies announced abandonment of service outside the loop.

Attendance at all churches was greatly reduced, and in Waukegan one minister called off his service for the day.

In many instances the snow banked itself against houses and prevented both entrance and egress.

Wires Are Down.

"Something awful!" was the word from the Postal Telegraph company. "We seem to be having wire trouble all over."

A similar statement was made by the Western Union. Heavy wet snow and sleet—a sure sign of wire trouble—was reported in the southeastern part of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Travelers Halted by Storm.

Railway stations yesterday became clubhouses, cantonments and, in some cases, lodging houses for thousands of travelers and commuters, delayed by the big snowstorm.

The Chicago & Alton annulled its entire schedule at noon. When thirty-five blind children, who had spent their holidays in Chicago and vicinity, were found waiting for a train to take them back to their home in Jacksonville, the Alton officials ordered train No. 71 made up for all local stops to the children's destination.

The Illinois Central, Michigan Central and Big Four kept to their schedule only in so far as the combining of several trains into one would permit.

The Panama Limited, due to leave at noon, did not get away until late in the evening.

Many Red-Headed Warriors.

Since the time when Pompey the Great inscribed his name in Roman history as the leading warrior of his time until Julius Caesar put an end to his career as the leading Roman general ruddy locked soldiers have been in the habit of doing big and important things. Ancient and modern history is replete with names of red-head warriors.

Rabbits of the World.

All of the domestic varieties of rabbits, except the Belgian hare, are descendants of the burrowing rabbits of the Old World, and the big European hare, almost as large as our western jackrabbit, is the ancestor of the so-called Belgian form, which is now quite popular as a domestic animal of profit and is becoming more so, observes an exchange.

In the Northern hemisphere of the New World we have many more species of hares than the Old World can boast of, as the cottontail, the Southern swamp hare, the Arctic hare or snowshoe rabbit and two species of Western jackrabbits or giant hares. Yet we have not successfully domesticated one of these forms, though this might be done as a matter of profit in the production of meat.

Loving a Child.

Loving a child is key
To Heaven's mystery.
Loving a child, and giving
It knowledge, this is living.
Loving a child brings pain,
And is life's greatest gain.

Loving a child is knowing
The fierce joy of a sowing
That shall cause mighty reaping.
Loving a child is weeping,
And fearing, too, and praying;
This, there is no gainsaying.

Loving a child is being
A part of God, and seeing
The world beneath one's hand
Enlarge, expand,
Be different, and grow
To one's thought. Even so.

Loving a child is key
To every mystery.
Loving a child is laughter
And heartache after.
—Heartache and grief and pain
But always joy again.

WRITTEN IN 1869

The only railroad as yet constructed and in operation through the village of Tecumseh or in its immediate vicinity is the Jackson Branch of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co. This company had its origin in the Palmyra and Jacksonburgh R. R. Co. incorporated by an act of the Legislature of the state of Michigan, approved March the 28th, 1836. Dr. M. A. Patterson one of our oldest pioneers and still a resident of the village, became one of its principal stockholders and president of the company.

In pursuance of an act approved Jan. 22nd, '37, the said company obtained a loan from the state of $20,000 by means of which, together with individual subscriptions, the road was finished from Palmyra to Clinton, so as to run cars by horse power, on wooden ribbons, spiked on longitudinal sleepers. This wooden superstructure soon wore out, and the road was practically abandoned. In June '42, by gratuitious gifts from the citizens of Tecumseh, the track was renewed as far as to the village, in expectation that it would be ironed by the Erie and Kalamazoo R. R. Co., of whose road it was virtually a branch, but in this the citizens of Tecumseh were disappointed, and the road was allowed to go to decay. In June '44 the road was sold state, in pursuance of the act authorizing the loan of the $20,000 and it then became a branch of the M. S. R. R. running from Monroe to Adrian and Hillsdale.

Before the sale of the central and southern railroads in 1846, the track of the road had been partially renewed by the state and ironed with rail as far as to this village. In '53 the M. S. R. R. Co. commenced extending the road to Jackson, but on account of litigation with the Michigan Central R. R. Co. and other causes, the road was not finished to Jackson till '56.

It is now a first class railroad laid with T rail of the same size as that used on the main line of the same length.

In April, '38, an act was passed by the legislature incorporating the Ypsilanti and Tecumseh R. R. Co. and subsequently a loan of $100,000 to the company was obtained from the state and about two-thirds of the amount was expended on the line of the road. The survey and location of this road was mainly carried on under the direction of Hon. Stillman Blanchard, still one of our citizens. It is hoped that this line or one in the same direction will soon be adopted as the part of a line or lines now contemplated from the city of Detroit to the south and west by Adrian, Hillsdale and other towns to Ft. Wayne or Lognasport in Indiana. Should this road pass through our village, as we have good reasons to hop,e the additional facilities which it will afford must unavoidably render Tecumseh one of the most inviting and advantageous business situations to be found in any part of the country.

Tecumseh Foundry and Steam Engine Works

These works were started in 1848 by Messrs. Elijah Anderson and J. Stoughton Strong, the former being a mechanic, the later not. In about a year or sometime in 1849, Mr. J. J. Tucker took an interest in the concern and the firm, in the style of Anderson, Tucker & Co., carried on the business until February, 1851. Mr. Tucker was a very ingenious mechanic.

In 1851 Mr. Horace Brewer, a man of rare mechanical skill and fine taste, purchased one-half of the concern, Mr. Anderson took the other half and under the style of Anderson & Brewer, the business was conducted with success and with growing reputation until February 1st, 1861. During this time some of the finest machinery known to the country, went from this shop. Mr. Brewer from this date became the sole proprietor and until October, 1867, conducted the business alone.

At this time, 1867, his son Albert became interested in the business and the style became H. Brewer & Son, and under this name the firm is now known and the business carried on. The company employ a capital of about $30,000 ,employ some 25 hands, and have a growing popularity and a continually increasing demand for their productions: mill gearing and general machinery; also Tiffany's patent drain tile machine, Sword's brick machine, etc.

The past week or ten days has brought some relief to Tecumseh people in regard to fuel shortage. Our dealers have been receiving some of their long delayed shipments and the sound of the coal shovel is being heard all over town. We seem to be more fortunate than some of our neighboring towns as seven Lenawee towns are reported as entirely out of coal.

The coal famine investigation now being made by the Senate committee seems to be bringing out a wholesale steal which has been forced upon the public by the mine operators. Mr. Clifford Thorne of Chicago, who has been investigating the coal situation, stated before he committee that the mine operators' profits amount to $1,000,000 a day, that the government price-fixing had advanced prices and that the operators were making excessive profits.

The reasons given by Mr. Thorne for the shortage of coal now experienced throughout the country are excessive shipments of coal to the Northwest, the temptation of operators to hold back for higher prices, greatly increased consumption, interference with distribution through natural channels and an inadequate car supply. The relief he suggests may be brought about by Government control of all of the mines in the country or the purchase of the whole season's supply from he operators. If either of these means were resorted to the Government could absolutely control prices and distribution.

The usual slowness of Government investigation does not guarantee us much relief as far as this season is that necessary legislation will be enacted to put a stop to ruthless steals from the public and to the manipulation of the supply of coal. This coal famine ought to awaken the people of this country to action and such action that it would force Congress to put a stop to the existing evils once and for all. These criminals who have been stealing from the people and causing so much hardship during the past winter months should in some way be convicted and sent to a federal prison or lined up in front of a stone wall and shot as a German spy would be shot.

BED LINEN OF LATE DESIGN

Scallops, Ribbon Bows, Three-Initial Monograms, and Other Decorative Features Add to Cheerfulness.

Counterpanes and bolster and pillow shams are being developed in a variety of new materials and designs. Some are made up in fine corded gabardines, finished along the edges with wide scallops. A big bow of satin ribbon corresponding in color to the decorations of the rooms, is tacked in the center of the shams and cover. In other instances three initial monograms occupy this place of honor. In the latter cases large eyelets are often embroidered around the edges, and colored ribbon run through.

Heavier coverings are developed in fine white pique in broad ribs. The edges are turned back with wide hems mitered at the corners. In the center of both cover and shams large baskets filled with different colored flowers are embroidered in heavy cross stitch. Stamped in cross-stitch patterns representing Mother Goose characters and animals, these last are particularly attractive for the youngster's room.

The woman who is fond of crocheting and has plenty of leisure, may make a very lovely linen set for her bed out of strips of heavy white linen sewed together with pieces of filet insertion and edged with lace. If more elaboration is desired, the linen may be embroidered in a fine running design.

SOME MODES OF THE MINUTE

Colored Velveteen Coats, Turkish Toweling Blouses, Scarfs and Collarettes of Tulle Are Popular.

The introduction of colored velveteen coats as a substitute for the expensive silk sweater lowers the price of one open-air garment. Velveteen has suddenly leaped into fashion along with the new hats. It is frequently chosen in green, lapis lazuli blue, burnt orange and black. Its use is not confined to sport coats; it is also worn by smart women for sport skirts.

Fine turkish toweling has recently been given a place. Ingenious women have found out that the bathroom can be robbed for the tennis court. Two extra large towels with a good-looking colored border serve for a blouse with elbow sleeves and a colored cotton sash. This makes a more commendable sports garment than voile or silk.

Scarfs and collarettes of tulle in maroon, beige and all colors are now worn with thin frocks. Purely decorative are most of these airy trifles, which are altogether transparent, forming a sort of cloudy frame for the face. Half ruche, half collar, with picturesque floating ends, these bits of tulle are more than worth their weight in gold. Very effective is a cache-nez of vivid red crepe heavily embroidered with gold thread. It is worn with a white frock.

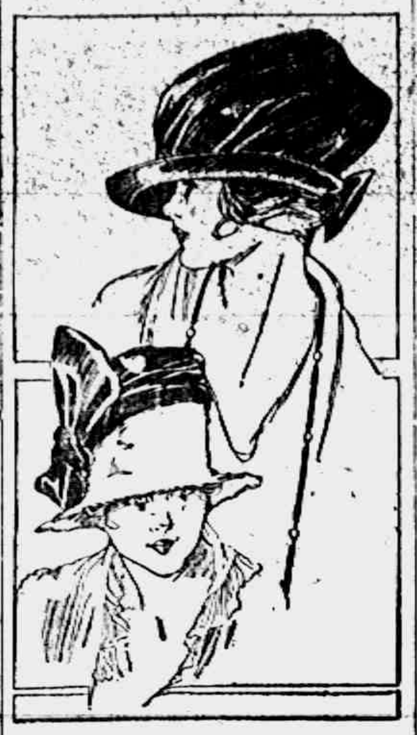
NEW SHAPES; ODD

Popular Hat Imitation of Stage Driver's Headpiece.

Charm of This Style Lines in the Shaggy Material With Which the Frame Is Covered.

The lower head in the accompanying sketch shows the high-crowned hat of "oursine," which is an almost exact imitation of the quaint hats worn by the drivers of stage coaches in olden times. This may be said to be the most popular shape of the present season and it is exceedingly becoming to pretty faces, writes Idalia de Villiers, Paris fashion correspondent.

The whole charm of this style of hat is embraced in the shaggy material with which the shape is covered. In some cases long-haired silk beaver is adopted, but silk beaver hats are exceedingly expensive and for ordinary wear shapes covered with soft "oursine" are quite as effective.



Two New Shapes.

The model sketched was in pure white oursine, with a wide band of sapphire-blue velvet twisted round the top of the crown and tied in a loose bow at one side. Similar hats are simply trimmed with a wide band of crochet work in some bright-colored wool, with a full tassel falling coquettishly over the right ear.

The second head shows a model by Lewis. This is one of the newest shapes, and it is half hat, half toque. In front the brim is pressed into a point, but at the back it is flat and finished with a large, flat bow. No trimming is introduced on hats of this kind, and they are worn well pressed down over the hair.

For wearing with simple tailored suits this model would be specially suitable and it might be made in some bright colored velvet or panne; for example, in emerald green or tomato red. The crown is high and very full, with a slight tendency toward extra width at the back. For everyday wear such a hat might be made of gray oursine, or of golden-yellow chamois cloth, with a flat black satin bow at the back.

GIRL MAKES NOVEL REMINDER

Artistic Results Achieved by Use of Common School Slate and a Little Black Enamel.

One girl, who rejoices in more artistic impulses than a good memory, has made for herself the cutest little reminder imaginable. The foundation is a slate like the youngsters use or used to use in the lower grades of school. With some black enamel she gave the frames two coats until it shone just like the lovely Oriental lacquer work. Then from a Japanese tray she copied a few suggestive sketches of Fujiyama, the famous snow-capped mount, a pagoda or two on the framework right over the black enamel with some gray paint. To the slate she hung a slate pencil on a bright red cord with a tiny sponge at one end. This she hangs right near her bed, and when something she must remember strikes her just as she jumps into bed before sleep comes, down it goes on the pretty slate and is safe till the morrow.

The same idea could be used for a girl who boards for laundry lists, or for messages which come by 'phone while she is out.

Charming Bag Idea.

If you are thinking of something "different" in a knitting bag, how about this? Black oilcloth, bone handles, white silk lining, and stuffed silk fruits. The top of the bag is attached with three rows of shirring, the lining is of brilliant white moire silk. And the use of the bright colored silk fruit is the most striking thing about it. Satin apples, pears, peaches, and even grapes in their natural colors just drip from down each side of the bag. There is absolutely no decoration on either the front or the back of the bag.

An Artless Maid.

I'm not a fright, but day and night
  I fret and pout because
I long to be as pretty as
  The girls that Crosby draws.

Dad gets in debt to robe me, yet
  I'm sighing all the while
For dainty dresses and silk hose
  In C. Cole Phillips' style.

My glass says: "Dot, cheer up, you're not
  A clothspin or a bag."
But O, for fetching curves as made
  By James Montgomery Flagg!

I walk the sands and wring my hands,
  My hair is turning gray,
Because my bathing suit won't hang
  The Orson Lowell way.

I have an air, my friends declare,
  That's rather smart, but then
I crave that chic and Frenchy touch
  Of girls from Gibson's pen.

My pearls, my pup, my polo cup,
  To the four winds I'd hurl,
To be a Crosby-Phillips-Flagg-
  Lowell-Gibson girl!
    —Ethel Duffy Turner in Life.

Information Desired.

"How to Instill the Ethical Idea in the Child." A friend of ours thinks that would be a good title for an illuminating article if anybody could write an article illuminating enough to live up to the promise of the title. He says it can't be done.

He says that he said to his little boy the other day:

"My son, never be afraid to tell the truth."

"I ain't," asserted the child.

"Never."

"Naw. What I'm scared of is lookin' scared when I tell a lie. How do you do it so you don't?"

HOW GRUBSTAKE BECAME FORTUNE.

Probably the largest fortune that ever came from a very small grubstake was that at Tombstone mines, when Richard Gird got about $2,000,000 from a grubstake of a few hundred dollars and some scientific work. In 1873, Gird, who had been vainly seeking riches in mines for a dozen years in South America, and all over the Pacific coast, went down to southwestern Arizona. The Apaches were raiding and murdering at that time, and the territory was deserted by white settlers. Gird was told that he would get a tombstone rather than a fortune there. Hence the name Tombstone for the mines.

He found no trace of pay ore where he expected it, and was about to come back to southern California.

One morning he fell in with other prospectors, the Scheffelin brothers. They said they believed they had found rich ore, but they wanted to have it assayed before they would risk their lives in that Apache country digging for something that would not pay them. Gird was an assayer. He agreed to do the assaying at Tuscon for the brothers free and to give several hundred dollars' worth of food and clothing for a third interest in the mines, providing the assay proved what he believed it would be. That was in May, 1879. Mr. Gird sold his third interest in the Tombstone mines in the following October, after the memorable stampede there of 10,000 miners from all parts of the Union, for $2,140,000.

FOUR FACTORS IN GREATNESS

Why Certain Men Are Raised High Above the Crowd.

The merits by which men of action rise to greatness are four—intellect, energy, courage and independence—says James Bryce in the Youth's Companion. When those four are united in the same person, and in a quite exceptional measure, they raise him high above the crowd. Other men defer to his opinion, trust his predictions, repeat his phrases, rely on his firmness, take him as their chief. If he succeeds in what he undertakes, each success confirms his authority and surrounds him with a halo of prestige. He becomes a power.

Of the four qualities enumerated, that which impresses others is independence, because it is so rare. The man who, perceiving difficulties and dangers, will face them alone, in reliance on his own judgment and force, is the natural and inexitable leader. If he is large of soul, true to his principles and to his friends, he will win affection and an even fuller measure of confidence. But the impression of that indefinable thing we call greatness depends after all chiefly on the impression that he makes of the power of initiative, of an unshakable resolution. The mass of mankind want someone to follow, someone in whose hands they can feel themselves safe, as crew and passengers do when they see their captain cool and dauntless in the wildest storm.

BERRY PATCH FROM BARREL

How One Man Had Garden Despite His Small Back Yard.

A Los Angeles man whose back yard was too small for growing strawberries conceived a clever idea, which is described in Popular Mechanics. He made a strawberry patch out of a barrel. Holes about 12 inches apart were bored in rows in its sides. Several tin cans with perforated bottoms were piled one on the other in the center of the barrel and enough dirt was thrown about them to fill the receptacle up to the first row of holes.

After the dirt had settled sufficiently strawberry vines were planted in the holes and allowed to hang outside. This process was repeated until the barrel was full and vines had been set in all the holes and on the top. As the soil was added, cans were piled up through the center to provide an irrigation passageway. A hole was bored in the side near the bottom to allow water to drain off.

How Automatic Machines Benefit Mankind.

Automatic machines cut out the labor of three men, say. These men are permitted to go into a field where automatic machines haven't appeared yet. It is all good, declares Charles M. Horton in Industrial Management. The machine has let loose these men in order to let them work elsewhere toward keeping the big storehouse up to demands. And so on, forever, without end. When all work is done by machinery, all mankind will have leisure to pursue arts and the like to their own heart's desire. But get this: Automatic machinery is man's friend and not his enemy.

How to Eradicate Consumption.

At the annual conference of the National Union of Railway Men in Manchester, England, it was declared that "the most effective way of eradicating the fearful scourge of consumption is to insure that the citizens are not lacking in nourishing food, healthy homes, and reasonable facilities for leisure and open-air life."

Indian's Comeback.

This war has given the Indians a chance one would guess they have been waiting for to poke fun at "the white man's civilization." Red Fox Skiubushi, a Blackfeet Indian of Montana, recently told a meeting of Methodist ministers:

"The present European war is the most striking illustration of the futility of the present form of civilization to civilize men. The present perfected system of education and worldwide eminence in music, literature and science has utterly failed to advance the Europeans one step toward true civilization."

Rare Experience.

"Do you find your new car all the salesman said it was?"

"All and more," replied the happy owner.

"You are one purchaser in a thousand."

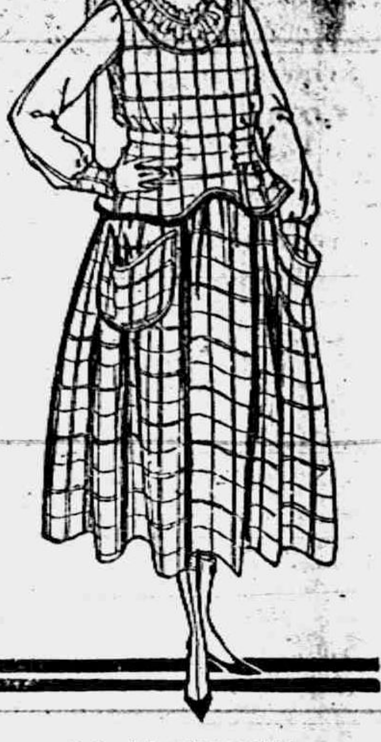
"Maybe so, but the chap who sold it to me was one salesman in a thousand. He kept his eloquence within reasonable bounds and told me the truth."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

FROCK FOR SCHOOL

Attractive Garment for Misses of Fourteen to Sixteen.

Requires Four Yards of Plaid Fabric and One and One-Half Yards of Plain-Color Material.

Notwithstanding that girls of fourteen to sixteen years far too often have a habit of affecting the clothes styles of their elders, ignoring completely the girlhood years, there are fortunate or wise mothers who are able to keep their schoolgirl daughters in youthful clothes. For these damsels style designers turn out every season some very attractive garments. They are wont to define them as "flapper" styles, and it is a matter of especial pride to many designers of clothes for the younger generation that there really need by no "awkward" age for the young female.



School Frock for Girl.

The little school frock here sketched is an ideal garment of its class. Either plaid serge, plaid taffeta or plaid velvet may be used for the dress, with guimpe of plain color, which may blend with the plaid or be in sharp contrast. Of course, a white guimpe may be worn if desired, but one in color would be much smarter. The neck may be finished with a frill of self-fabric, or with a plain facing, over which a dainty white collar is worn.

This dress may be arranged in two or three different ways, according to the figure of the girl for whom it is intended. If she is very thin and without hips to hold a skirt properly the skirt may be attached to the guimpe, with the plaid coatee a slip-over, or the guimpe may be separate and coatee and skirt attached, in which case the coatee buttons in the center back. If it is a slip-over, buttons may be eliminated.

The big generous pockets are important. They are, of course, extremely convenient, and give a smart style touch to the frock as well.

To make this dress for the average fourteen or fifteen year old girl four yards of plaid fabric 36 inches wide and one and a half yards of plain-color material will be required.

BASKET-NET FOR FISHERMAN

How Angler Can Catch Minnows and Small Fish for Bait.

Perhaps the greatest difficulty that the amateur fisherman encounters on his expeditions is the securing of live bait. But if he has included in his equipment a basket net he can catch minnows and small fish in any stream.

The frame of the net is made from six tempered spring steel rods. To this the netting is attached with rust-proof ring clips. In the center of the netting is the bait pocket, in which bread, meat or other bait is placed to attract the minnows. When the net is lifted, the weight of the contents causes it to "bag," so that the minnows will not escape over the sides.

When the net snags or when, for some other reason, it is subjected to extraordinary strain, the six tempered steel rods bend inward and downward until all but one of the rings by which the net is attached to the frame slip out of the hooks. This collapsing of the frame frees the net from the snag and releases the strain. The inventor claims, however, that the net will not collapse except under extraordinary strain, which if resisted would damage the net. It folds up into a compact little bundle which is scarcely noticeable among the fisherman's "traps."

FLOCK TO HER WITH GIFTS

Woman in Atlanta Used Slippers as a Bait for Men Friends and Got Many Presents in Return.

There was a sharp young lady in Atlanta, who had 40 or more admirers. For each of these she bought slippers, all of the same pattern, which she had an aged seamstress make up, says the Augusta News. Meanwhile she kept a pair for herself in the parlor, where she could have them on hand whenever one of her lovers called. Of course, each young man asked for whom she was making such pretty slippers. She would reply, with a bewitching smile and half a wink: "Oh, they're for a man friend of mine."

Then each infatuated youth went off to invest in a gift. Some bought clothes. Some bought jewelry. One bought furniture. In return, the girl bestowed upon each of them a pair of slippers, worked by the seamstress and footed by a Dutch shoemaker, at an average cost of $2.65 a pair. The presents from her admirers averaged $45 per man.

The pair the girl worked herself she presented to a young dry goods clerk in Augusta, to whom she was secretly married. She afterward sold her presents and had enough to start housekeeping.

CLING TO CHARM OF YOUTH

Good Complexion Cannot Be Retained If Covered With Layers of Rouge and Swathes of Powder.

Every young girl, no matter who she may be, has the charm of youth and should hold it. It is as elusive as a dream and cannot last for many years, so while it is hers she should cherish it. It is the look of youth.

But no girl can hold it, no matter how clever, who covers it up with layers of rouge and swathes of powder, declares a beauty specialist. A touch of rouge when one is tired and the face is colorless, especially in the evening, is not unpardonable, but the girl who has a good complexion, the gift of nature, should never resort to rouge or powder, except for the light rice powder that keeps the face from the shiny look, which is such a detractor of beauty.

It seems almost unbelievable that any girl with a really good complexion would resort to paint or powder, and yet it is true that many do. It may be that these girls have an idea that these aids to complexion give to them the appearance of sophistication.

And they are right, in a measure. For rouge invariably does give the lines of the face an older look, a hardening of the countenance, if too rashly used.

STYLES FOR WINTER COATS

Fashion Provides for Straight Lines With Generous Fullness, but There Must Be No Flare.

Straight lines characterize the best coats designed for the season. This must not be taken to mean that the garments are narrow. Quite the contrary is true. Generous fullness is let in, but they are without flare. In street and utility coats sleeves are usually set in, while flowing sleeves cut in one with the garment are the rule on evening wraps.

An indicated waistline is almost the invariable rule with the new coats. Sometimes a belt that is wide and girdle-shaped is used; again a strap belt tied loosely and with hanging ends may be favored.

The coat with empire back and slightly circular front section is occasionally seen.

Dressy afternoon coats of satin, or velvet, and nearly always elaborately furtrimmed, are being given a great deal of attention by the best designers and a strong demand for them is expected.

WATCH THE LITTLE THINGS

Wise Mothers Keep Eye on Remnant Counter and Utilize Leftovers for Little Girls' Dresses.

The little girl of the family may be charmingly outfitted at a trifling cost if thought and industry go into the task.

Few people are so foolish as to underestimate the importance of appearance, and the woman who dresses well with a comparatively small outlay of money in her turn, has been properly dressed as a child by a mother who took interest in her small daughter's clothes.

The wise mother will keep an eye on the remnant counter, and on odds and ends left over from the apparel of grown-up members of the family. With a clever combination of fabrics, or a deft touch of handwork here and there, she will give originality and individuality to dresses for the little girl.

A complete season's outfit should never be arranged at one time. A new dress now and then means more to a child than it does to an adult, so that to some extent the juvenile wardrobe should be arranged piecemeal.

BOTH HANDSOME AND USEFUL

This model exemplifies the fact that a suit can be both handsome and useful. It is a serviceable all-round suit of taupe velour, with a touch of mole trimming.

Keep After Things.

Do you remember when you learned to swim, or ride a bicycle? You went to it for all you were worth, but you couldn't get the hang of it. Then, a few days afterward, you tried again and it "came to you" first thing.

But it wouldn't have "come to you" if you hadn't "gone to it" that other time. The effort which seemed to be wasted at the time you made it wasn't wasted after all. You will find it the same with learning how to think. If you can't keep your mind on the subject tomorrow morning, keep on trying till the half hour is up. The next morning you'll do a little better, and you'll surprise yourself within a few weeks.—Exchange.

The Class.

Serious Sue—Here is a catalogue embracing all kinds of coats.

Facetious Fan—Then, if it's embracing them, they must be coats-of-arms.

Anything.

The Sexton—Do you wish cushions in your new pew, sir?

Mr. Short-Soot—Sure! Anything that will ease up the sermons.—Judge.

MRS. SHEPARD ANSWERS THE CALL

Miss Franc Hyde received a letter announcing the death of Mrs. Henry Shepard who passed away, December 12, 1917 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Thayer in New Plymouth, Idaho. She will be remembered as the wife of Rev. H. L. Hayward, who preached in the Universalist church some 35 years ago. The following clipping was from a Plymouth paper.

Mrs. Charlotte E. Shepard died Wednesday. She was born May 31, 1838 in Bristol, N. Y., and was one of a family of 8 children of whom a twin sister and a sister three years older survive her. She was married to Henry Shepard on Jan. 15, 1862. There were born to them three daughters, one daughter dying in childhood and one living to the age of 28. Twelve years ago Mr. and Mrs. Shepard went to Cleveland to live with their daughter, Mrs. E. E. Trayer. Mr. Shepard died a few months later. Since the death of her husband she has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Trayer coming to New Plymouth with them nearly 4 years ago. She was a woman of high standing in this community. "HANS UND FRITZ"

What will undoubtedly prove to be the biggest sensation in cartoon musical comedy since the introduction of "Mutt & Jeff" to the stage, is the big musical offering at the Bradley Opera House, next Monday night, January 14th, when Gus Hill's big company of "Hans Und Fritz" will be presented to the patrons of the Bradley for the first time. "Hans Und Fritz" is written by R. Dirks, originator of the original "Katzenjammer Kids" and produced in musical comedy form by Gus Hill the famous New York producer who is responsible for suchothercartoon plays as "Bringing up Father"; "Mutt & Jeff" and many other well known successful cartoon plays.

Old and young alike will enjoy this mile a minute cartoon musical comedy, none are too old or none too young to enjoy the funny antics of these two funny boys from Holland During the action of the play many musical numbers are introduced by a big beauty chorus, exquisitely gowned (which have recently been classed as the 'Fashion plate chorus') in fact the entire piece is just music pretty girls and fun galore.

"Hans Und Fritz" will be presented here with the usual big scenic production, for which all of the Gus Hill plays are noted, and a special orchestra. The company is the same one which plays Jackson, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Toledo and all of the surrounding cities and will be presented here at prices within the reach of everyone. The seat sale opens at Hay's Saturday morning and if the tickets go as fast here as in all of the other cities where "Hans Und Fritz" is being presented it will be a wise idea to get your tickets as 'early as possible.'

FRANCES A. FERGUSON

Writes of Her Experience in France.

Somewhere in France,
Dec. 6, 1917.

My Dear Mrs. McNeil and friends:

By this time you know I'm safely over and very happy. Had a wonderful trip, was not seasick at all and enjoyed every minute of our trip. We had a few rough days and the old boat sure did rock. Most of our time was spent in French lessons, boat drilling and watching the waves. We had services on deck both Sundays by our chaplain and an English bishop, and with thanks to the guiding hand of our captain, we arrived in safety. It was a wonderful trip and I'll never forget the beautiful sunsets.

The latter part of our journey consisted of a long train ride. French trains are very slow, little like our U. S. trains, and since the war they are still slower. It was our first time of eating "rations" and it would be needless to say, "Did you like them?" If you could have seen the hard bread, jam and bully beef disappear! Chicken could not have tasted better.

We are nicely located in a pretty little French town right among the mountains, brooks and trees. The weather is not real cold although we have snow, but much damper than at home. Mistletoe, pussy willows and holly are all out and so pretty.

Our rooms are comfortable. Of course they are unheated for fuel is very high, but with warm clothing we do not mind and in our dining room we have a fire where we all gather.

Food is very high and sweets are sold only on certain days and at certain hours, but they tell us after the first of the year there will none be made. We have very good food and it is well cooked. The war bread I like and butter you never miss.

We go on long hikes most every day and the roads are so wonderful, walking is easy. Today we walked to another little French town eight miles away

'Most every French person you meet has some one in the war and has lost many. One little woman told me yesterday that both husband and son and eleven other male relatives had been lost in the war. She works during the day and her evenings are spent in writing some other mother's son now at the front to "keep them in courage." She was so brave.

We are planning on having a Xmas tree for the fatherless children who are here. Will write you about it afterwards.

Our hospital is progressing and expect to be at real work very soon. It contains 2000 beds.

Will add that the only excitement we have had was an air raid which happened at a little town on our way here. No harm was done but caused some little excitement among the French people.

Well this is a long letter but once I get started I forget to stop. Write me soon and I'll be more prompt.

Best wishes to you all and would be glad to hear from all.

Lovingly, Ann.

Address:
Frances Ann Ferguson,

TO HONOR EARL RECTOR

Honoring Earl Rector who was home from Camp Custer for a few days furlough, about thirty of his relatives and friends gathered at the home of his mother Friday evening A pot luck supper was served and the evening was spent with music and social good cheer. Mr. Rector has a host of friends in Tecumseh, who are glad to shake hands with him and wish him a safe return from the war.

Mother (to Frank)—How is it that you're late home nearly every afternoon?

Frank—Well, no wonder; we've got such a big clock in our school.

Mother—Why, what has the clock to do with it?

Frank—'Cause it's so big it takes the hands an awful long time to get round it. If we had a clock like papa's little one I'd get home a great deal quicker.—Pearson's Weekly.

Reciprocity in Forbearance.

"Come go on a fishing party with us," urged a friend to a man prominently in the eye of the public.

"I don't want to go fishing," replied the other.

"Why not?" asked his friend.

"Why should I go fishing?" demanded the conscientious one. "The fish never did anything to me."

Little Pitchers.

"Pa, was that a Christmas present you brought home last night?"

"I didn't bring anything home last night, Tommy."

"Well, I heard Mr. Smith next door tell Mr. Jones as I was passing them on my way to school, that he saw you go in last night with a large-sized package."

One's Life Task.

"Let each one accept his task, a task which should fill his life. It may be very humble; it will not be the less useful. Never mind what it is so long as it exists and keeps you erect! When you have regulated it without excess—just the quantity you are able to accomplish each day—it will cause you to live in health and in joy.—Emile Zola.

"TWIN BEDS"

"Twin Beds," a farce comedy in three acts, held sway at Bradley's opera house Saturday night. It was advertised as a "big laughing festival" and it was all of that and certainly a good cure for the blues. It is hard to imagine a flat full of people who could find more complicating conditions to go up against than did this company of fun makers

The cast was weakened somewhat by the fact that one of their important actors was absent, called home by the illness of his mother and it was necessary to use an understudy. The balance of the cast was unusually good. Lois Bolton, as Blanche Hawkins the innocent little newlywed, won herself into the hearts of the audience by her clever acting, while the work of R. M. D'Angelo and Virginia Fairfax as Signor and Signora Monte came in for their share of favorable comment. Bess Stafford, who took the part of Norah, the maid, certainly knew how to rob a fellow of his clothes and kept the tailor busy.

The costumes were new and attractive and the scenery and furniture above the average. Coller's orchestra furnished the music.

Something new in All-Rodded Insurance which will interest my farmer friends. Mrs. Franc Gillespie.

SHORTAGE IN FARM MACHINERY

(From an editorial in "The Country Gentlemen," Dec. 22)

"The farmer who does not begin the new year with his thought bent upon machinery for the 1918 crop is sure to be awakened with a saddening jolt about plowing time."

The tractor and implement manufactures are up against a shortage of raw material that can scarcely be relieved in time to meet the needs of agriculture. Instead of a spring surplus, there is every likelihood of a farm-machinery famine next spring.

Perhaps the Goverment will act in time slightly to relieve the shortage, but no matter what is done at this late date, tractor and implement manufacturers will scarcely be able to meet the demands upon them.

Farmers who require tractors, tillage or harvesting machinery, stationary engines, dairy barn or hay barn equipment, tools, or repair parts, will be wise to make an early choice and get their orders in. For a large number of farmers to wait until the eleventh hour to make up their minds will likely prove disastrous to themselves and to agriculture generally.

The above hits the nail right on the head. You are aiming to produce the most for 1918 you ever produced; you will receive double the price of 1916; the machinery you buy later in the season will also be double the price of 1914. This summer it will take $1.00 to buy what 50c bought four years ago.

STOCK ON HAND.

We anticipated this raise in prices and have on hand in our warehouse a reasonably good and well-assorted stock of farm machinery. For a limited time only we are going to sell this stock for nearly 30% less than the new goods coming in.

Don't wait until summer, believing you can do as well then as now; when this stock is gone the new prices will go into effect, if we can get the goods which is beginning to look doubtful.

Don't wait until our traveler gets around to you, but phone in your requirements NOW, TO-DAY while we still have the stock on hand: we will call if you are unable to get in.

Roll Call: Original observation of bird habits

The papers read were most interesting and the club showed unusual interest in discussing birds and their habits. The roll call brought out many stories about our winged friends and evidently some of the members have made birds a study for years.

At the close of the program refreshments were served and this was followed by an advertising stunt.

Any woman who is likely to want a new suit in the course of the next few months can't do better than to buy now. Such materials another year, even at the higher prices, will not be as good and many of the finer ones not procurable and in all probability no radical changes in styles as Manufacturers and Designers are not gambling to any extent with the finer materials under conditions as they exist to-day.

WHO INVENTED MOVIE FILM?

Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, United States Supreme Court Holds, Was Originator of Photographic Feature.

Watching for three hours the unreeling of a stupendous film, one not only marvels where this art will end, but also wonders where it began, says a writer. It may almost be said to have begun in the pulpit, for although the idea was in the old toy called the "wheel of life," yet without the photographic film the cinematograph would have been impossible, and that was, according to the judgment of the United States Supreme court, the invention of Rev. Hannibal Goodwin.

Mr. Goodwin was pastor of the Episcopal church in Newark, N. J., and was a great lover of children, although he had none of his own. He was always scheming for their enjoyment, and it was in order to make a picture machine to amuse his Sunday school that he turned his attention to photographic films, the secret of which he discovered in the early eighties of the last century.

He made the films in the old rectory, and sometimes he went directly from the pulpit to the laboratory in his vestments. He resigned his pastorate in 1888, but it was not for ten years later that he obtained his patent. He was about to put his films on the market when he met with an accidental death in 1900. Mr. Goodwin got nothing out of an invention which has made tens of millions.

LOOKING WITH FAVOR ON ART

Public Hastens to Attach Respectability to Favorites, Despite Their Various Shortcomings.

The public always tries to make its favorites respectable, those it truly loves. It longs to make them more like itself. It delights to read of happy family life among its beloved artists, and of the pure summers of the movie star who lives with her mother and has a garden, observes the New Republic.

The course of Mary Anderson comforted and justified thousands of housewives for their mild domesticities and their distrust of the stage. Even the public's favorite romancer lived with his wife three years before he married her, and he did not even suffer from a wasting illness; but they will not have it so, and are fast turning him into a pitiful, cheery saint and martyr as flat and sweet as their own ideals. The favorite short story writer embezzled and went to the penitentiary and loved poker, but they want to make him an overflowing human heart wandering about taking snap-shots. They have spent more time raking over and clearing up the records of Goethe and Poe and Byron and Shelley than they ever spent on the poems.

Tidy Shoes and Good Luck.

The Australian natives knew nothing of shoes, and the natives of Africa are in the same box to this day. The Chinese make their shoes of wood and paper, and cannot remember when they began to make them. A Chinese shoe is warm in winter and cool in summer, and always easy to the foot.

Superstition has busied herself greatly about shoes; but it is not worth while to cite all the silly sayings about them. There is no significance about the way people wear their shoes, either at heel, toe or side, although untidy footgear is doubtless some indication of carelessness. See that you have a comfortable shoe, keep it tidy, and bad luck will never bother you.

BIG FIRE AT ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Flames Destroy Stewart Mill—Forty-Mile-an-Hour Gale Menaces Entire Town.

St. Charles, Ill., Jan. 7.—Fire destroyed the Stewart mill, an old three-story building owned by the St. Charles school district, and for a time threatened to spread to the business district of the town. With a 40-mile gale blowing and the roads and interurban lines tied up, the St. Charles fire department without hope of outside help succeeded in preventing a spread of the flames. It was feared the fire would extend to the St. Charles National Bank building, but the firemen held it in check. An overheated stove may have caused the fire. The mill, at one time a flour mill and formerly owned by the Charles Haines estate, has been used for grinding feed.

REVOLUTION IN SPAIN FAILS

Army Classes of Noncommissioned [illegible]—All Forced to Resign.

Madrid, Jan. 7.—Premier Alhucemas announced that a revolutionary movement is now under control. Telephone and telegraph communications were suspended but were re-established and other precautions taken.

Minister of War Cierva issued an official explanation of the revolt, in which he said that the army classes composed of 1,500 noncommissioned officers, corporals and sergeants, proposed to unite into a junta against the desires of their chiefs and that of the minister of war. All troops were ordered to remain in barracks and the principals were forced to resign from the army.

KNEW JUST WHAT HE NEEDED

Man-With-the-Grouch had Blinks Sized Up to Perfection, and Told Him So.

Very indiscreetly the Man-With-the-Grouch invited Blinks into the grill room of the big hotel. The two men met by chance on the chilly street just in front of the inviting door.

Of course, it was a temptation not to be resisted. The two men went in and sat down by the warmth and glow of the sea-coal fire.

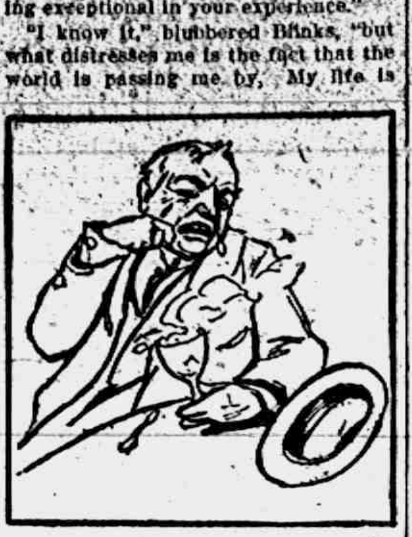
The Man-With-the-Grouch ordered hot Scotches. Yes, of course, it was extravagant, but the day was cold and affairs were generally depressing. A little stimulant was necessary.

The Man-With-the-Grouch realized that he had made a blunder when, after two potations, Blinks began to weep and talk foolishly.

"I'm getting to be an old man," he sobbed between swallows, as he wiped his eyes. "It's this war, old man. This war shows me that I'm getting old."

"Well, what of it?" asked the Man-With-the-Grouch. "You're not the first man to grow old. There's nothing exceptional in your experience."

"I know it," blubbered Blinks, "but what distresses me is the fact that the world is passing me by. My life is stale. I need a great pain, or a great sorrow, or a great sin, or a great love—something to assure me that I am a living soul and not a mere machine. I need—"



"My Life Is Stale, I Need a Great Pain."

"You need a good swift kick where it will do the most good," answered the Man-With-the-Grouch. "You don't need a great sorrow or a great sin or anything of that sort.

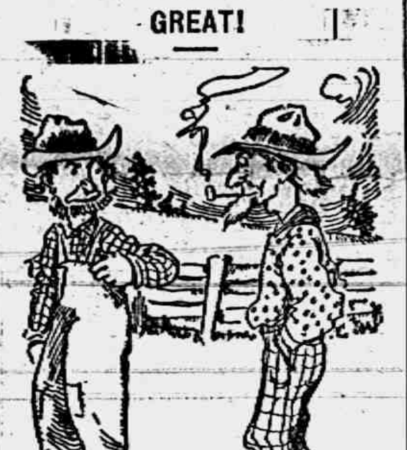
"What you really need is a great effort. You put your nose to the grindstone, or your hand to the plow, or whatever is the euphemism for doing your own little job. Then you'll forget all this patter about your soul.

"By the way, have you sawed the branches off that big tree you hauled into your cellar last month after the big storm broke it off?"

"No," said Blinks.

"Well, you go home and saw wood. Then you won't have these morbid spells. And next time I see you I won't invite you to take a costly drink. I'll ask you to sign the pledge."

GREAT!



"How is Hiram making out at college?"

"Great! Rains the hull while, I guess, fer he sez he takes a shower bath every day. By hep! Let's try it next time it rains. He sez it's fine!"

Let Go.

Holding fast is a much-esteemed virtue, and rightly so, but the art of letting go, of being able to let things go when they are no longer worth holding fast, is an equally valuable trait. We hold fast to old customs that have outlived their usefulness, we hold on to our failures and mistakes instead of dropping them and going on, and especially do we hold fast to our wrongs and injuries, brooding over them instead of casting them off.

Hope.

When things are not at their worst there is always something left to be thankful for, and when they are at their worst it is certain that the only change possible must be for the better, so there is something still left to be hopeful for. Thankfulness and hope are mighty oars to spread one over the darkest waters to anchorage in a sure and safe harbor.

Useless Trouble.

"Why don't you clean that dirty deck?"

"Beg pardon, sir, but I understood you to say it might be swept by heavy seas."

WON'T SEIZE PACKING PLANTS

Federal Trade Commissioners Deny Government Intends to Operate Meat Firms of Country.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The great packing and meat industries of the country are not to be seized and operated by the government under any plans now under consideration by the government authorities in connection with war necessities.

Federal trade commissioners and Francis J. Heney gave unequivocal denial to a sensational story sent out from Philadelphia that "an official connected with the federal trade commission, which has been investigating meat conditions here, said the government intended to seize all the packing and allied industries, and Francis J. Heney, who is examining witnesses, did not deny that the plan was being considered in Washington."

Mr. Heney, who is here, said he had not stated any such thing while in Philadelphia or elsewhere, and has no knowledge the government had any thought of taking over the packers' plants.

REASON BEHIND EACH NEW STYLE

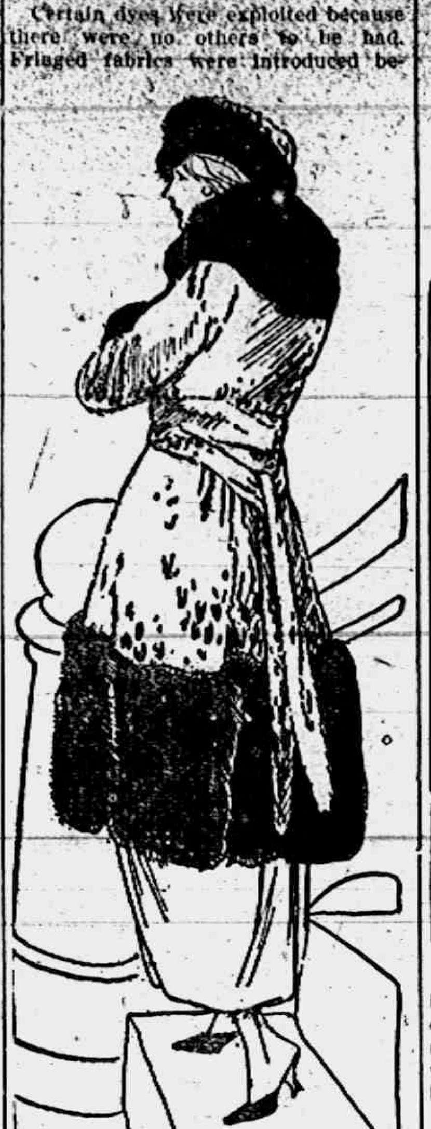
Skirts Are Narrow Because of French Embargo on the Use of Cloth.

FROCKS SLIP OVER THE HEAD

Are Made Without Fasteners Because Those Accessories Are Difficult to Obtain in Paris.

New York.—Everything that was invented in clothes this year had a reason. Skirts are narrow because the French government limited the use of cloth to five meters. They are minus fasteners because these accessories were difficult to get and war-time activities demanded a speedy method of dressing, so frocks were made to go over the head and tie around the body in a primitive fashion.

Certain dyes were exploited because there were no others to be had. Fringed fabrics were introduced because applied ornamentation was costly and the supply was vastly decreased from that of former days.



Leopard meets muskrat in this coat made by Callot. It serves for the street and the motor. The cap is arranged to match, with its leopard skin crown and its upturned muskrat brim.

Immense top coats with inter-linings were made by the dozens because the French women were compelled to walk through a lack of taxicabs, and the American women were supposed to have started on a system of economy which would compel them to walk instead of paying money for taxis.

Voluminous peltry was applied to all costumes because of the intense cold on both continents last winter and because of the scarcity of coal in Paris last January and the promise of it in this country for this winter.

The Paris designers have given all kinds of anecdotal reasons for their gowns, and some of the American dressmakers who are not given to either their narrative or reasons for their clothes, are repeating the French talk in an interesting way.

Most Dominant Fashion.

The most dominant fashion produced this winter is the garment that slips on over the head and has pieces of the material to tie it into place. This is quite as primitive as in days when Melisande lived, loved and died.

A year ago, the reporters who study clothes intently and with an inside knowledge of scarcity of certain materials, prophesied that the near future would bring about women's clothes that were fashioned to be adjusted without fasteners. France sent up some trial balloons in gowns that were cut in two pieces and tied around the hips by a sash that was a bit of the material of the front width and evidently these trial balloons proved that the air was safe for the sending out of dozens of such frocks.

The Americans have accepted them in high glee. It is a novelty that tickles the mind of the novelty-hunting American women. When you see a group of fashionably dressed women eagerly talking and gesticulating, pulling out pieces of a frock here and there and turning themselves around as on a pivot, you will realize that they are each explaining to the other how the frock is adjusted without a hook and eye, without a button and without a loop.

Coat Suits Catch Fever.

The new coat suits have caught the fever, and some of the best are adjusted with merely a loop of military braid run through a buttonhole and tied back on itself.

The smartest afternoon gowns have large buttonholes from neck to waist, through which are run pieces of braid or picot-edged ribbon tying the two fronts together.

No woman who likes puzzles and who is fond of trying out novel schemes, can fail to be interested in this game. She can wear a new gown with a new kind of fastening and crow over her neighbors as though she had taken in the largest subscription for the Liberty loan. It may develop into a pastime, if the interest and excitement in this kind of clothing keep up.

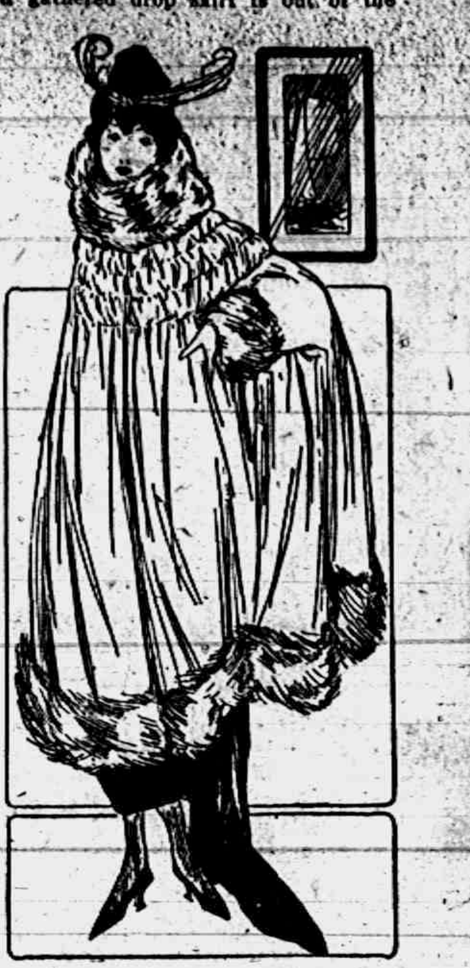
At the moment of writing, our government has not put an embargo on the amount of material to be used in each gown. Germany and France have both done this, and those who are in Paris say that the French dressmakers have taken the keenest delight in following the decree. A quantity of material in a gown has never appealed to a French designer, and with the government behind the elimination of fabrics, each of the gowns turned out this year shows originality of conception and treatment in achieving an artistic result with a very few meters of cloth.

The French Silhouette.

A few of the American clothes which were designed before the French silhouette was thoroughly accepted, have taken their place a little behind the front row of fashions because they look bunglesome. Here is the French silhouette as the best-dressed Americans have adopted it: A slim underskirt made in one piece that runs from the collarbone nearly to the ankle in a street frock, and from bust to within six inches of the ankle in an evening gown. It is merely the skeleton of the gown, but on it are draped the few remaining yards of fabric that are allowed to complete the work.

Therefore, it is quite fashionable to use transparent material for the afternoon and evening, in order to slow the slim little slip beneath. It is not necessary that the transparent fabric used over this slip should be cut off to correspond. It may rise to the shoulders and drop to the instep, and in that very alluring transparency, you get the East Indian effect.

The statement may be taken as authoritative that whatever gown has a gathered drop skirt is out of the fashion. You may gather the top material, but the lining must be slim and cut closely to the lines of the figure, although it is not drawn in at the waist.



This durable coat for winter nights is of olive green velvet, with collar, cuffs and hem of Russian fitch. It is made on long, loose lines, like a cape, with the front held into the figure by a band that passes around the back.

KNIT HAT OF SATIN RIBBON

One Hundred and Forty Yards Required to Weld the Fascinating Piece of Headgear Into Shape.

At the precise moment that the command is issued to reduce the measurement of every new frock we are confronted with a hat which exacts no less than 140 yards of ribbon, to make it, says a Paris letter.

Just think of it! One hundred and forty yards to fashion an amusing fancy for resort.

It may be as well to add that the ribbon chosen is satin, as a rule, and it is knitted into shape according to the latest whim of Dame Fashion. These hundred and forty yards of ribbon, however, will not run the risk of compromising either the resources or the future of our country, for many young coquettes find amusement in welding this fascinating type of headgear into shape by their own agile fingers. For sport and country wear the vogue for crocheted or knitted hats, made either in silk or wool, grows each day, and, always evolved in the most "vivid hues" possible, these affairs are made to harmonize with the jersey or sports coat and the scarf they accompany.

"Tanks" Have Them Guessing.

Nothing in the war since the German guns of 1914 that smashed the Belgian forts and were to drop shells in Dover has so captured the general imagination of the amateur as the death crawlers known as "tanks." The airplanes are more vivid, but they lack the mystery of the tanks. Nobody knows how many England has, but nobody guesses under a thousand now in service. Doubtless the Germans will provide some device for putting them out of service—something corresponding to the depth bombs which have scandalized the submarines they have met. Probably the tank will pass before the war is over from the limelight. But they hold the center of the stage at present, masked, grim and mysterious, like the old actors of Greece.

Overhasty.

John Murphy had secured a license to marry Mary Manning, but the intended bride "rued," and six weeks later John made his second appearance in the clerk's office.

"Misther Johnson," said he, "in February I got a license from you to marry Mary Manning; an' I didn't marry her; an' now, plaze yer honor, wud yer be so good as to aither it so it wud fit Honora Moriarrity?"

"No," replied the clerk. "You must get a new license to 'fit' Honora."

"And pay for it?"

"Certainly; it will cost you a dollar, the same as the first one."

"Och, indade! Thin I'm ruined intirely, intirely, fur I jist coorted Honora to save the dollar."

With a Chuckle.

As Mr. Jones unlaced his boots he remarked casually to his wife: "Have you heard about the catastrophe which happened at the Smiths' house tonight?"

"No. What was it?" asked Mrs. Jones.

Jones paused for an aggravating moment to pull on his slippers before he replied: "Why, Mrs. Smith gave the baby a bottle to play with, and while she was out of the room it fell from the cradle and broke its neck."

"What! The poor little baby?" shrieked his wife.

"No; the bottle!" replied Mr. Jones with a fiendish chuckle.

SHORTAGE IN FARM MACHINERY

(From an editorial in "The Country Gentlemen," Dec. 22)

"The farmer who does not begin the new year with his thought bent upon machinery for the 1918 crop is sure to be awakened with a saddening jolt about plowing time"

The tractor and implement manufactures are up against a shortage of raw material that can scarcely be relieved in time to meet the needs of agriculture. Instead of a spring surplus, there is every likelihood of a farm-machinery famine next spring.

Perhaps the Government will act in time slightly to relieve the shortage, but no matter what is done at this late date, tractor and implement manufacturers will scarcely be able to meet the demands upon them.

Farmers who require tractors, tillage or harvesting machinery, stationary engines, dairy barn or hay barn equipment, tools, or repair parts, will be wise to make an early choice and get their orders in. For a large number of farmers to wait until the eleventh hour to make up their minds will likely prove disastrous to themselves and to agriculture generally.

The above hits the nail right on the head. You are aiming to produce the most for 1918 you ever produced; you will receive double the price of 1915; the machinery you buy later in the season will also be double the price of 1914. This summer it will take $1.00 to buy what 50c bought four years ago.

STOCK ON HAND.

We anticipated this raise in prices and have on hand in our warehouse a reasonably good and well-assorted stock of farm machinery. For a limited time only we are going to sell this stock for nearly 50% less than the new goods coming in.

Don't wait until summer, believing you can do as well then as now; when this stock is gone the new prices will go into effect, if we can get the goods which is beginning to look doubtful.

Don't wait until our traveler gets around to you, but phone in your requirements NOW, TO-DAY while we still have the stock on hand; we will call if you are unable to get in.

Puzzled Musician.

Sir Frederick Bridge, the veteran organist at Westminster Abbey, recently told a good story of a musical party he attended a short while ago.

"I could not make head nor tail of one piece of music that was being played," he said. "It sounded very abstruse, and, to me, quite incomprehensible for the most part, yet here and there I seemed to recognize a bar or two.

"Presently, consumed by curiosity, I leaned over and asked my hostess the name of the piece.

"She looked at me in surprise for some seconds; then said, somewhat stiffly, 'It's Bach's fugue in D minor, Sir Frederick.'

"'That it most certainly is not,' I thought, but I kept my opinion to myself.

"I found out later, however, on making an investigation, that the lady was right. Only the perforated music roll had been put in upside down, with the result that the piano had played the fugue backwards."

Wireless to Detect U-Boats.

To assist naval airmen in detecting the presence, and then determining the position of enemy submarines, a delicate instrument of considerable ingenuity has been produced, observes a writer. An adequate conception of its character is afforded without necessarily discussing its technical details, which for obvious reasons are withheld. Roughly, it consists of a compact buoy that carries a receiver which converts the sound waves from a submarine's propeller into electrical energy. When thrown overboard by an airman, it floats on the surface of the water. Upon the approach of a submarine within a certain radius of it, the antenna attached to the buoy sends out wireless signals which are in turn picked up by receiving instruments installed on the aircraft. The presence of a boat within this area is thus announced. Its general position in relation to the buoy, as well as its movements are indicated by the intensity of the signals.

Lightning Breaks Dish.

During a thunderstorm in New York state surprise and wonder was caused in a certain home by an unusual accident that accompanied a sharp bolt of lightning. The latter struck very close to the house in question, causing the telephone to "snap" so that those in the room heard it distinctly. Following this report a glass dish containing some steel beads, standing on a table about twelve feet from the telephone, broke into pieces, scattering the beads on the floor. The apparent explanation for the phenomenon is that when the lightning caused the spark at the telephone there was a discharge of electricity into the room and that the beads, being of polished steel with numerous sharp edges, offered a path of least resistance to the discharge, which, seeking a ground, burst the dish.

A Brussels Joke.

What amounted to a practical joke was played on the Germans by the Belgians in Brussels. The Germans announced a grand concert of German music at the opera house. A syndicate of Belgian bankers and brokers bought all the seats except one and the royal box. General Baron von Bissing was delighted at this evidence that the Belgians were not averse in times of foreign occupation to listen to a German concert. But on the night of the concert not a single Belgian used his ticket. When Von Bissing arrived at the opera house it was empty save for one solitary auditor, a German landsturm soldier.

Love.

If love were the only heaven we shall know,
I could not ask a fairer Paradise.
Nor forth with sunny laughter gladlier go,
Beneath whatever dark or perfect skies.

For marble mansions of eternal light,
And golden streets and cities tourmaline,
With all their glossy beauty burning bright,
Have not the lure of love's immortal sheen.

And thus I toss the golden ladders down,
Turn from the gates, and take my way with thee,
Oh, Love, that makes a heaven of the town,
And brings the pale moon trembling o'er the sea.
—Folger McKinsey, in Baltimore Sun.

A Father's Ambition.

"I kind o' wish I was in the army," said Farmer Corntossel. "I'd like to be along in the company with my boy Josh."

"So as to cheer him up?"

"No. Josh is always cheerful. But I'd like to be a corporal or something, so that for once in my life I could make him stand around and do exactly as I tell him."

A Proxy.

"Glithersby is always talking about 'my soldier.'"

"So he is."

"I didn't know he had a son at the front."

"He hasn't. Glithersby sent his chauffeur and, just confidentially, I think he takes too much credit upon himself."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

TIMES AND PLACE FOR SLEEP

Churches and Street Cars Are Favored But the Cozy Bed Affords a Most Delightful Pastime.

There are lots of people who say they don't sleep well at night. But there are many who regularly go to sleep in the street car. Of course, those who go to sleep in church are not counted. That might be construed as libel, observes the Milwaukee News.

But why do perfectly healthy folks want to sleep in street cars? Is it a protest against the wistful-eyed straphanger who gazes at their large and apathetic laps? Is it mere whim, desiring to shut out the events of the day and snatch a quiet moment of dreaming as a respite?

It is often mere pie, just a rampant indigestion. It is also the bad air due to offices that devitalize the worker compelled to breathe it eight hours. It is also due to the terrible habit of shutting all available car windows in dread of that fresh air which is the best friend a workingman has.

Going to sleep is a delightful pastime—at night, in bed with the proper accompaniment of pillows and paraphernalia. It is exotic in the daytime, save as a mere relaxation for a few minutes after luncheon, which is a good habit, and seldom, therefore, followed.

BRITISH PEACE TERMS

The principles which were announced by Premier Lloyd-George, which may be taken as the attitude of the British empire on war aims and peace terms, may be summed up as follows:

GERMANY.

The entente is not fighting to disrupt the German nation or to dictate its form of government. The battle against Germany is made in self-defense to end the menace of junkerism and militarism. The German people themselves could bring peace at once by the adoption of a democratic government.

AUSTRIA AND THE BALKANS.

Unless genuine self-government is granted to those Austro-Hungarian nationalities who long have desired it, general peace cannot be assured. Justice must be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech. Serbia and Montenegro must be restored.

BELGIUM.

Belgium must be restored in full and reparation made for all damage.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

"We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand for the reconsideration of the wrong done in '71 when Alsace-Lorraine was torn away." All occupied French territory must be restored.

ITALIA IRREDENTA.

"We regard as vital the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue."

POLAND.

"An independent Poland comprising all the genuinely Polish elements who desire to participate, is an urgent necessity for the stability of western Europe."

RUSSIA.

The entente would be glad to fight side by side with the new Russia, but if the present rulers of Russia act independently, Russia must be saved by her own people.

TURKEY.

Britain would not deprive Turkey of its capital or of the lands in Thrace and Asia Minor, which are predominantly Turkish, but Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine are entitled to separate nationalities. The Dardanelles must be neutralized and internationalized.

GERMAN COLONIES.

They will be dealt with by a conference which must take primary regard to their native inhabitants and placed under an administration acceptable to them. All exploiting of these regions by European governments or capitalists must cease.

SEA OUTRAGES.

"There must be reparation for injuries in violation of international law. The peace conference must not forget our seamen and the services they have done."

MAKING A MAN OF THE BOY

Schoolmaster Has the Great Task in Hand, and on Him Depends the Final Important Outcome.

The sum of all admonitions is that the schoolboy must pay attention. That is precisely what he is doing, writes S. M. Crothers, in the Atlantic. He is paying attention to a variety of things that escape the adult mind. As he wriggles on the bench in the schoolroom he pays attention to all that is going on. He attends to what is going on out-of-doors; he sees the weak points of his fellow pupils against whom he is planning punitive expeditions; and he is delightfully conscious of the idiosyncrasies of the teacher. Moreover, he is a youthful artist and his sketches from life give acute joy to his contemporaries when they are furtively passed around.

But the schoolmaster says sternly: "My boy, you must learn to pay attention; that is to say, you must not pay attention to so many things, but you must pay attention to one thing, namely the second declension."

Now the second declension is the least interesting thing in the room, but unless he confines his attention to it he will never learn it. Education demands narrowing of attention in the interest of efficiency.

A man may, by dint of application to a particular subject, become a successful merchant or real estate man or chemist or overseer of the poor. But he cannot be all these things at the same time. He must make his choice. Having in the presence of witnesses taken himself for better or for worse, he must, forsaking all others, cleave to that alone. The consequence is that by the time he is forty he has become one kind of a man and is able to do one kind of work.

HAS CHURCH BUILT ON PIER

Ilfrancombe, England, Possesses Historic Edifice, Where the Sailors Offered Prayer Before Going to Sea.

Ilfrancombe, England, has a church on a pier, and is the only seaside place in the world that has such a distinction. Indeed, Ilfrancombe would not possess the honor were it not for the fact that Lanterin Hill forms a part of the pier. Those who argue about the matter are always silenced by the plea that you have to go on the the pier in order to enter the church, observes a writer.

The curious old building to be seen on the top of the hill has had many strange adventures. It is dedicated to St. Nicholas, the patron saint of seafaring folk, and in that connection it is interesting to learn that at one time the old church was used as a lighthouse. In bygone days the sailors used to trudge up the hill to pray before going to sea, and many were the regrets when the little edifice ceased to hold its services. It is now used by the pier authorities for storing purposes, but the day may come when it will be restored, and form one of many attractive "sights" Ilfrancombe already possesses.

Arrived Safely in France.

Two newspaper artists have been occupying a studio in Gramercy Park for five years. They came to New York together and were a sort of Damon and Pythias combination, says a New York correspondent.

One went into the naval reserves and the other tried for aviation but failed on account of his eyesight. The other week the sailor boy dropped in before breakfast. He said he was going out for a little cruise and the handclasp was a bit firmer than usual as he said good-by.

A few mornings ago the artist at home received this cablegram from France: "Arrived. Safe." His friend on the other side. And when I saw the artist at home he turned his head and shook some suspicious drops from his eyes. But he was mighty proud.

WHY

The Soldier Must Have An Emergency Ration

AMERICAN MEDICINE comments on the soldier's ration, and more particularly on the emergency ration of hardtack and sweet chocolate suggested by Doctor Vedder. It weighs only one pound, but gives the soldier the proper amount of food on which to carry on the work required of him. The writer says:

"The problem of rationing the soldier is of the utmost importance, not merely for the purpose of preserving his physical health, but of conserving his military effectiveness. Regardless of what the civil population subsists upon, the rationing of the soldier must not be reduced so as to curtail the food requirements.

"It oftentimes becomes necessary to send in advance scouting parties for whom adequate food supplies cannot be prepared to be carried by them. To meet such military exigencies an emergency ration is essential.

"As Vedder has pointed out in the Military Surgeon, an emergency ration must be balanced and possess a reasonable energy value and tissue-building power. Palatability must not be sacrificed. Its bulk must be minimal in order to prevent the ration from serving as a drag upon the soldier, already weighed down by his essential military appurtenances. The food must be of such a character that it will not readily deteriorate, while at the same time it must be cheap and readily purchasable.

"Vedder has suggested as an emergency ration ten ounces of hardtack and six ounces of sweet chocolate. The total weight of the ration is one pound, while it supplies approximately 2,100 calories, of which 180 calories arise from protein sources.

"A man resting in bed requires 1,800 calories per day to satisfy the normal heat and energy requirements of bodily function. According to Chittenden, on a low protein diet, 250 calories from protein are provided with a total of 2,854 calories for the 24 hours. The haversack ration as at present constituted supplies approximately 4,500 calories per day, with 460 calories arising from protein elements. This ration naturally provides the due and proper amount indicated for soldiers engaged in hard work.

"The emergency ration suggested is not liberal in character, and, in fact, materially reduces the total food required for the soldier, but this is merely for emergency purposes, and should not actually interfere to a great extent with the physical health of the consumer, provided that it is utilized merely in emergencies. It is patent that the bulk is not excessive, and that the foods suggested are cheap, generally available, palatable and resistant to deterioration."

Glass Eye Released Him.

An artificial optic so perfect that it bore critical examination of physicians, was responsible for its owner finally being discharged from the National army at Camp Travis, notes a San Antonio correspondent. The young man had been drafted from an Oklahoma town, and, appearing before the exemption board, passed the medical examination, and having otherwise qualified was accepted and came to Camp Travis for training with several thousand others from his state.

He had been enlisted and was working when the recruits were given a color test by the army doctors. When a blind was put over the good eye the owner of the perfect glass optic could not distinguish red from white, and the deception was discovered. Physically the owner of the false eye was otherwise built for a soldier, but this one blemish was sufficient to cause his release and he was sent home.

Pigeons' Mistakes.

Carrier pigeons have extensive use in the present war, despite the competition of the wireless, the telephone, the heliograph and the "wig-wagger." But the old superstition that the birds have an infallible sense of direction is pretty well upset. "We frequently have birds blunder back to us with their messages intact," remarked a French officer. "The noise and confusion of battle or the tremendous smoke pall that overhangs the battle lines for days [illegible]m to confuse them in some fashion. Frequently they will circle around for five or ten minutes before determining their proper direction. About 80 per cent of the birds achieve their objective. The rest are listed as 'missing.' They are probably prey to the hawks that have not ceased their depredations, despite the patriotic purpose of their victims."

Find Relics of Saxon Kings.

Capt. Vaughan Williams of Old Windsor has discovered what he believes to be the site of the palace of the Saxon kings and the pre-conquest town of Windsor. It is believed that there once stood at Old Windsor the palace of Edward the Confessor, but although several Saxon urns have been excavated here from time to time the actual position of the palace has never been decided.

Tighe and Davis, in their "Annals of Windsor," say that Old Windsor was probably selected by the Saxon kings as a residence for the same reason as it was subsequently repurchased by William the Conqueror, on account of its convenience for hunting in the forest. The lands of Windsor, granted by Edward the Confessor and exchanged by the abbot of Westminster with William, appear to have had reference to Old Windsor, and did not include the site of the present town or castle. King William held Old Windsor as his own demesne.

Troops Defy Tropical Heat.

Recent experiments by the British government in India with ultra-violet rays, says the Electrical Experimenter, are interesting, not only to army men but to scientists. In the experiments an under officer of the English army was completely clothed in garments which had been previously treated to withstand the ultra-violet rays. It was found that he was able to stay in the sun of midsummer for hours without feeling disturbance or inconvenience in any way. Upon this and other experiments the English government has adopted this method for the protection of its Indian troops against the ravages of tropical sunlight.

HOW COMMON WORDS ARE MISUSED.

No solecisms are more frequent than those which consist in the common misuse of "shall" and "will." A person who has not been trained to make the proper distinction between "shall" and "will," "should" and "would," never can be sure of using them correctly, but he will make few mistakes if he fixes firmly in his mind that I (or we) shall, you will, he (or they) will, express simple futurity and that I (or we) will, you shall, he (or they) shall, imply volition on the part of the speaker. Some writers hold that "shall" was the original form of the future and that whenever courtesy permits "shall" is to be preferred to "will." But at all events, the doctrine of courtesy furnishes a rough and ready rule for choice between the two.

"Should" and "would" follow the same rules as "shall" and "will," but they have, in addition, certain meanings peculiarly their own. "Should" is sometimes used in its original sense as "ought," as in "You should not do that;" sometimes in a conditional sense, as in "Should you ask me about that," and after "lest," as in "He fled lest he should be imprisoned." "Would" is sometimes used to signify habitual action, as in "The squire would sometimes fall asleep in the most pathetic part of the sermon."

Shield for Soldiers.

No single instrument of destruction is playing a more vital role in the present war than the machine gun. To deprive Germany of this weapon by offsetting its effect is the purpose of an inventor who has developed a bullet-proof fighting shield that is perhaps worthy of study. The device is a wedge-shaped shelter mounted on one front and two rear wheels and intended to accommodate ten infantrymen. The shield is designed to be folded flat and carried through the communication trenches to the firing line, where it could be assembled quickly under cover of darkness, ready to protect Sammies, Tommies or Poilu.

The Bicycle Is Coming Back Into Its Own

THE bicycle, through the agenc of war, is silently coming bac into its own, and as a resul the fighting fronts of the grea armies, relieved of their networks o trenches and the terrifying artiller and rifle fire, might well be the countryside in any nation, with cyclists, little hurried of motion possibly, goin in every direction. In fact, one migh well imagine himself in a rural community 25 years ago, when everyon not a cripple, or, worse still, unpossessed of a wheel, trundled madl about the country every hour to b snatched from his work.

The "bike" had a distinct part i the advance of troops, and this wa particularly so during the early day of the war, when the fighting was ca ried on over wider stretches of th country, and when the great armie were alternately advancing and r treating, too busy with the objective in hand to stop and "dig in."

The English troops, in particula have taken advantage of the possibilities of the bicycle for use in scoutin and messenger duty. The British hav gone so far in some cases as to convert some of the regiments of ye manry into cyclist formations.

With the British, cyclists technicall are regarded as army troops, but use as specialist corps, like the Royal E gineers and other army troops esta lishments, but signs are not wantin that, with their great increase in numbers and with the new conditions o modern warfare, the cyclists will i future take their place as a definit arm rather than as specialists.

The military [illegible] part in the early [illegible] of this struggl In their advance through France an Belgium the German armies depende largely upon their advance guards o cyclist companies of Jaegers, supported by mobile mechanical transport columns, armored machine-gun cars, an re-enforced when necessary by swif concentrations of infantry in moto omnibuses.

The old tradition of the cavalr screen and the patrols of mounted lancers were swept aside by the mor progressive "mechanical cavalry," a the cyclists have been called. A roads and villages were reconnoitere and seized by cyclist units, only th inclosed country in between the roa parallels being covered by the slowe cavalry.

HOW To Keep a House Clear of Useless Things

WHEN a piece of furniture becomes worn or broken or for any reason unfit for use, the housekeeper should determine at once whether it is worth repairing and keeping for further use. It is the same with old clothing, discarded draperies and other accumulations. If they have not sufficient value to be cleaned and repaired and put away for future use, then they are not worth the space they occupy and should either be given to somebody who can use them or sold for whatever they will bring.

For convenience, as well as for cleanliness, any piece of furniture should be thoroughly clean when put away. If it is not, stains and odors and dust will go deeper and deeper into it until in many cases articles become useless even while stored away awaiting the time when they will be needed.

A woman who has a hobby of keeping all the frills and furbelows of her girlhood has shocked some of her friends by dragging from trunks and closets for their inspection laces, gowns or linens which were put away without removing stains or in soiled condition. After being kept for years in this way the articles lost whatever beauty they originally possessed.

A careful housekeeper hit upon a clever idea to rid her house of all articles which did not justify their position in her house either because of their usefulness or their beauty. She removed to the storeroom all articles of whose value she was doubtful. She allowed them to remain in this storeroom for a month, at the end of which time she was able to determine whether any of them justified being reinstated in her home. She was surprised that so few of them were found worth retaining. Some such idea can be carried out to advantage by almost every housekeeper.

PLAY SPELL IS NECESSITY

Why All Work and No Play Makes Jack a Dull Boy.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is an old saying which has lived because of its truth. It is quite as true of the older boy as of the younger. Everyone needs recreation, a play spell. Neither mind nor body can be kept constantly under tension without exacting a heavy penalty, says a writer in the Milwaukee Journal. The vacation is needed and pays in renewed vigor of body and mind.

Keeping the spirit of play, one keeps from growing old too quickly. Many a trifling annoyance can be turned away with a merry heart that readiness to see the amusing side of a thing, if one is in good enough health and spirits to see the funny side. A happy, cheerful temper promotes good health, and good health promotes a happy, cheerful temper. Do not be forever afraid of seeming foolish when you play. It is good for you to relax, to be inconsequential, to let a spirit of play run riot for a time. Being always on one's dignity takes from the genial spirit and ages one too early. Being in merry spirit help you do your work easier. A task is lighter for the heart's being light.

The more serious your occupation, the heavier your cares, the more you need a play spell. However great you may be, however important your occupation, forget them both for a time. Let yourself loose from the tension of cares and become a child in spirit. You will live longer and do better work for it.

MAN AND BEAST NEED SLEEP

How Wild Animals Are Tamed By Being Kept Awake.

A person without sleep for nine days will die. Sufferers from insomnia sometimes maintain that they have gone for weeks without sleeping, while it has been proved that they actually sleep without being aware of it. At a certain point, sleep is inevitable, no matter what the bodily condition, the alternative being death.

A method of taming wild elephants is said to be that of depriving the animals of sleep when first caught. In a few days they become practically spiritless and harmless. The brain of the elephant is held to be more highly developed than that of any other wild animal; but, of course, as compared with a human being, can be easily fatigued by new impressions and so made dependent on sleep.

The wild elephant in his native jungle is said to sleep very little—a further point of the theory of the universal ratio of sleep to intelligence.

How Menthol Is Manufactured.

A good part of the world's peppermint comes from Japan, and it is from peppermint that we get menthol, which is so widely used as a local anesthetic in the treatment of headache.

The preliminary steps in the manufacture of menthol are carried out by the Japanese farmers themselves, with the aid of stills of a simple design. The peppermint plants are first dried in sheds, or under cover from the sun, for 30 days. Then they are placed in the stills, where they undergo a process of steaming. The resulting vapors are led off through pipes into cooling chambers, are condensed, and deposited as crude peppermint oil. The crude peppermint is shipped to Yokohama and Kobe, where factories subject it to a process of fractional distillation to obtain the full content of menthol.

Largest Snakes In Brazil.

The largest snakes known are found in Brazil and one would have to go far into the interior to find them. They are found in the immense valley of the Amazon river and its tributaries, observes a naturalist. This extensive basin, being low ground, consists partly of swamps and forest jungle, into which white men seldom penetrate. The forest and vegetation are so dense that the sun cannot get through to the ground, and being right under the equator, the continual, oppressive, moist heat makes this jungle and swamps the ideal breeding place for the big snakes and other reptiles.

However, of the 180 varieties of snakes known in Brazil, not 10 per cent are venomous, and of these very few of the big ones. Of the non-venomous ones the largest and the best-known is the boa constrictor.

We wish to extend our most grateful thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many kindnesses shown us during our late affliction, to the Eastern Star, the Tecumseh Grange, the Mens class and the Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church for their gifts of flowers and especially to the families in Jackson who so kindly sent their gifts of flowers as a token of their esteem for our beloved wife and mother.

LIBERTY BOND COUPONS

The interest coupons of Liberty Loan Bonds are payable at any Federal reserve bank or Subtreasury and at the Treasury Department in Washington and any national bank which is a general depository of Government funds is required to cash these coupons without charge.

It is believed by the Treasury Department that no bank or trust company which is a depository of the proceeds of Liberty Bonds or Treasury certificates of indebtedness will make a charge for collecting the coupons, paying cash to the holder. The service rendered by banking institutions in cashing these interest coupons is a substantial one, but it is hoped that these depositories will perform the service without charge as a patriotic duty.

NO NAME CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hay entertained the No Name club, Tuesday night. A two course dinner was served at 6:30 following which ten games of progressive pedro were played, Mrs. John Heesen and John Murphy being the lucky prize winners.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Brown will entertain the club at their next meeting.

S. S. CLASS MEETING

Wednesday, Jan. 9th, the members of Mrs. B. Hurry's class of the M. E. church met with Mrs. Emma Wilson on West Kilbuck street. Owing [illegible] clemency of the weather there was not the usual turn-out, but those who did attend had a most enjoyable time. A potluck dinner was served at noon. These meetings are very interesting and serve to bind the members and their teacher together in a loving fellowship.

Mrs. Oscar Lidke was a passenger for Toledo Wednesday called by the death of Mr. Lidke's father.

DOWN WITH AUTOCRACY

The war clouds are gathering thick in the east,
The peaceful vocations of all men have ceased.
Go forth into battle, each mother's son,
To save what our forefathers died
for, and won.
Come on to the front with your
brawn and your brains,
And the Spirit of Seventy-six in your veins.
We need you right now, and we need you bad, too,
Every day that you slack is no
credit to you.
Our honor's at stake and our country's in trouble,
So take up your arms, to the front on the double.
Each man do his bit and show he's a backer,
We all know that God, and the world, hates a slacker.
The eyes of the world are upon
you, young fellow,
Do you want it to see plain as day that you're yellow?
There's only two channels open to you,
One is the khaki and one is the blue.
Let us rise in our might to our task on the run,
With the bursting of shells and
the roaring of guns,
We know that our cause is most righteous and just,
And we won't see "Old Glory" dragged in the dust.
Hurrah for Old Glory, the Red,
White and Blue,
And remember the favors she has done for you.
Forget for a time your workbench and tools
Until Autocracy's crushed and Democracy rules.

[illegible]ROSCH ORCHESTRA AT ANN ARBOR JANUARY 16

The next concert on the Ann Arbor concert series will bring to Ann Arbor on January 16, the New York Symphony Orchestra under its distinguished leader, Mr. Walter Damrosch, an organization comprising nearly 100 men. A program of exceptional interest has been prepared for Ann Arbor music lovers.

The organization was founded by Dr. Leopold Damrosch in the early 70's [illegible] was under his conductorship until his death in 1885 when Walter Damrosch then only 23 years old became its leader. He has been its leader since that time and has won the title of "Dean of American Conductors." It is remarkable that during all these years the destinies of this distinguished organization should be guided by two members of the same family, the older and younger Damrosch.

The Ann Arbor concert management desires to call attention to the fact that in accordance with the adoption of Eastern Standard time by the University of Michigan as a military measure, all concerts, hereafter will be given on Eastern Standard time, which is one hour earlier than formerly. Accordingly this program will be given at 8:00 o'clock Eastern, or 7:00 o'clock Central.

It will be greatly appreciated if patrons will spread this information as widely as possible.

THE GRAY PRINTING CO.

Of Fostoria, O., in Their New Home

The Herald is in receipt of a very neat booklet illustrating the new home of the Gray Printing Co. of Fostoria, Ohio, which has lately been built to supply their need following the burning of their old plant.

The business is run by George Gray and his threesons and the color gray is carried throughout the building. The booklet is very interesting giving a history of the building of the plant and has fine cuts of the bulding and the Gray men themselves.

We are indebted to Friend McNeil who visited his son Leon in Fostoria during the holidays and attended the opening, he suggesting our name to those sending out the books. His son is employed in the works at this time.

"JACK AND THE BEAN STALK"

The High School Seniors are to be congratulated in having secured "Jack and the Bean Stalk," the famous Fox Kiddies Picture which they will show at the New Royal Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 21-22.

In addition to the wonder picture there will be a special musical program.

"Jack and the Bean Stalk" has played all the larger cities in Michigan and with phenomenal success When it appeared at the Washington Theatre in Detroit, hundreds of people were turned away every day. This in spite of the fact that the Washington seats comfortably some 3000 people.. Altho this picture iss acted entirely by children with the [illegible]tion of Jim Tawer, the 8½ ft. giant., it has a distinct appeal for everyone with the heart of youth. Everyone of its eight reels is full of humor and thrills.

CORPS OF ARMY NURSES MUST BE INCREASED NEARLY 1,000 PER CENT IN YEAR

According to estimates based on an Army of 1,500,000 men, 37,500 nurses will be needed. The present strength of the Army Nurse Corps of the Medical Department is about 3,800. To increase this number by nearly 1,000 per cent in a year is the task faced by the corps.

Hospitals at Army camps and cantonments still need nurses to bring the quota for each up to the minimum of 65 considered necessary, although since the urgent need for nurses was made public in December nearly 2,000 requests for application blanks have been received.

In order to get the enrollments up to the needed number some of the requirements heretofore imposed have been waived. According to estimates there are between 8,000 and 90,000 registered nurses in the country and about 200,000 other graduate and practical nurses.

HOW ESKIMOS HUNT THE SEAL

Pursuers of Rich-Furred Animals Sneak Up Close Enough to Shoot Arrow Into Their Head.

Today the Eskimo method of hunting seals is a primitive calling improved to a fine art, writes a naturalist. When a seal is discovered the direction of the wind is at once noted. Then the hunter, keeping himself to the leeward of the seal, walks up to within about a quarter of a mile of it. Beyond this he begins to crouch and advances only when the seal's head is down.

Now, as the seal is one of the most wide-awake of animals and has the habit of throwing up its head quickly every few seconds to guard against danger, it follows that the Eskimo has to be extremely alert if he would get his seal. When the seal's head is down upon the ice its eyes are shut, and it is said that in these brief intervals it takes its sleep.

The hunter, by carefully watching the seal's movements, is able without much difficulty to get within about 200 yards of it, but at closer quarters he is obliged to employ other tactics. He lies down at full length on the ice. Then the real sport begins.

When the seal's head is down the hunter, who keeps a keen eye on his prey, is able to approach still nearer by dragging himself forward on his elbows. This maneuvering continues for some time, until the distance between man and beast has been reduced to a few yards.

When near enough to make a sure shot, the Eskimo takes his bow and arrow from his side and sends a swift shaft through the head of its outwitted companion.

Shoes Worn in Early Days.

High-heeled boots were worn by ladies for three parts of the eighteenth century. They raised their fair wearers some inches, rendering walking difficult and running impossible.

But these fashions were confined to the rich. The poor wore shoes of wood, reeds and untanned leather. The Highlander made brogans out of untanned deer hide, and the southern nations wore cloth sandals and slippers. It was not until the year 1800 that an Englishman invented "rights and lefts;" previously both shoes were shaped exactly alike. So far as we can discover, the aboriginal tribes of America never went barefooted. They always made and wore moccasins, the easiest shoe ever invented.

RAIN DROPS FROZEN IN AIR

How Hail Is Formed by Action of Conflicting Currents.

Limiting the observations to such compound hail-stones as are the most destructive, and are produced during a tornado or violent thunderstorm, the following theory has been advanced as to how they are formed:

When the winds gyrate rapidly round an axis, more or less inclined to the earth, the space at and about the axis is rarified. When air charged with vapor is drawn into this rarified space it may be condensed into cloud or rain, or, at a greater elevation, into snow.

Now, supposing the rain formed in the lower region to be drawn up by the ascending current into the snowy region, and so held for a short space, the drops will be frozen, and then, if propelled beyond the gyrations, will fall to the ground as a shower of ordinary hail.

But if in the descent they are again drawn in by the inflowing current, they will be again carried up into the cold region and so acquire another coating of ice. In this way the globule may make a number of ascents and descents and acquire a fresh coating each time.

How to Learn to Do Everything Well.

When you make the most of everyday tasks it becomes second nature to do things well. That's what puts class to your work. You may imagine that because the job is common it won't make any difference whether it is done well or ill. That's how many fellows look upon plowing. They are satisfied if they can only turn the furrow. The fact is there is more monetary value in good plowing than most men think. To be sure it's just turning the earth, but the way you do it will have a lot to do with the size of the crops next year. An ordinary job carefully and neatly done shows the touch of a master and rises in dignity by comparison with common things.

Wagers.

A soldier boy from Clay county, now in training, wrote a letter to his sweetheart, and on the flap of the envelope he wrote these words:

"I'll bet a kiss you don't find this."

Whether or not the little fairy, love, whispered in the maiden's ear, telling her how to open the letter, remains a secret, but anyway she sent back this reply:

"I'll bet you this I found your kiss."

It has been said that the Commerce Club of Tecumseh was of little value to the town, inactive and that little or nothing has ever been accomplished by them.

As a matter of fact an organization of this kind in a town of our size is not overburdened with activities, although there are always plenty of things that they are constantly being called upon to do that the general public has little knowledge of and some that they can't help but acknowledge have been of great benefit to us as a town, the creating of and carrying out of our Wednesday Bargain Days, for instance.

But if they had not done one single thing since their organization down to the present time, but clear up the difference between the Village and the Quaker Oats people the organization would have many times paid for itself.

Without the Commerce Club and its speedy action in taking up this matter, our village would have probably been cut off from the improvements and extensions to the macaroni plant and possibly the removal of it entirely. They struck while the iron was hot and have won the day for Tecumseh.

What will it all amount to? No one is able to tell, but we understand that new machinery is commencing to arrive here and that without doubt the present plant is slated for improvements, which will greatly increase their present output and give employment to many additional people.

The Quaker Oats Company are a rich corporation and could spend several million dollars here if they saw fit. They have already in many other places in this country and abroad. The making and marketing of macaroni is just in its infancy wih them and we understand the Tecumseh plant is the first one taken on by them, therefore it is reasonable to believe things may be in store for us.

The Board of Commerce of any town or city is the latch string that is pulled when anyone wants to get to the inside of that town or city. You never can tell when the pull will come, the big pulls sometimes never come but that Commerce Club should be here to meet any occasion that may arise. At present the membership fee is $2.00 per year and consists of about 65 members. In a town of our size it should be 150. Doesn't the above convince you citizens that it is worth while? If it does just walk into the Lilley Bank and hand H. S. Temple the secretary your $2.00 and get your membership card and show your willingness to help boost Tecumseh whenever an opportunity comes. "Great oaks from little acorns grow." Who can tell, Tecumseh may awaken, shake herself and put on an extra thousand or two.

Help boost your town, be a booster, not a knocker and a pessimist.

"WHILE OUR TIME GOES FLEETING BY"

Written Jan. 8th, 1918

Oft we sit and think and ponder
Of those loved ones sleeping yonder,
Those memoirs make our hearts beat fonder,
As the days are fleeting by.

But the hearts that were near broken
While those mournful words were spoken
Feel that fortitude's awoken,
As the weeks go fleeting by.

So, where's the sense in nursing sadness
Since it drives one near to madness;
Cultivate the joy and gladness
As the months go fleeting by.

Never think that you're forsaken
When by sorrow you are shaken;
Mirth and joy we should awaken,
As the years go fleeting by.

Father Time is always reaping,
And our time's too short for weeping,
In Mother Earth we'll soon be sleeping,
As decades go fleeting by.

A natural youth, a damsel's wooing,
And the turtle doves are cooing,
So let us all be up and doing,
As the time goes fleeting by.

HOTELS GOOD CUSTOMERS

How Big Hostelries Get Their Supplies of Eggs.

A method of selling—which, more than any other, perhaps, is the dream of the producer—is the trade with hotels, sanatoriums, and the like. Accordingly we made a visit to one of the largest and most exclusive hotels in New York city, says a writer in Farm and Fireside. We were conducted through the kitchens of this hotel, where evidence of management efficiency was plain everywhere. The steward later talked with us about their methods of purchasing eggs and poultry.

Both white and brown eggs are used by these high-class hotels. But for every use where the shell is exposed when the egg is placed on the table—as when boiled—the white-shelled eggs are used. For cooking and baking the brown-shelled eggs are used. About 600 dozen eggs a day are required by the hotel we visited, one-fourth of these being white. From 95 to 98 per cent of all eggs used are purchased from the producers, to whom two to five cents is paid above the highest market price quoted for nearby hennery whites or browns. The remaining 2 to 5 per cent are emergency orders, and are purchased from jobbers in the city or from retailers. The hotels are steady customers, keeping the same shippers for many years.

GARDEN SPACE MAY BE SAVED

How to Blanch Celery by Use of Paper Made for Purpose.

When the plan of banking with soil is used for blanching celery, the rows must be so wide apart as to waste much valuable land in small garden areas. But by using paper sold in rolls for the purpose, and which is treated to make it tough and moisture proof, much garden space and time may be saved, says a writer in Farm and Fireside.

Celery set with the intention of using paper for blanching need be only far enough between rows to allow convenient cultivation with wheel hoe, and two rows can be set not over six or eight inches apart, with spaces 15 to 18 inches on each side of the double rows. When ready for blanching, the paper can be quickly stretched each side of the double row. The roll is unwound along one side and back the opposite side of the double rows, thus requiring no cutting of the roll. While one person stretches the paper and holds it in place, another thrusts the long wire staples, made like narrow croquet arches, over the double rows to hold the paper snugly up in place.

If the right kind of paper can be procured and is carefully rolled and saved when the crop is harvested, it can be used several seasons.

WIT GAINED HER SITUATION

Willie Collier tells a story concerning a young actress friend of his who is fast coming to the front—a story which has a moral attached for ambitious stage aspirants.

It appears that the young lady in question, becoming stage-struck, devoted almost a whole year to pulling wires and using all possible influence in order to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager.

At last her hopes were realized; she got her appointment, and she was finally ushered into the manager's private office. He received her most cordially and offered her a chair.

"Thank you," she said gratefully, "I think I will sit down. I've been just ten months getting here and I'm a bit tired."

And the manager, who is really a great man with a keen sense of humor, promptly engaged her.

FROGS AND WHAT THEY EAT

Croakers Thrive on Almost Any Form of Animal Life Small Enough to Be Seized and Swallowed.

The food of the frog consists of earthworms, insects, spiders and any form of animal life small enough to be seized and swallowed. Large frogs will often devour their smaller relatives. The big bullfrog is an especially dangerous enemy to other members of its kind. It has been known even to eat small birds. Some frogs are fond of snails and will swallow them shells and all, says Boy's Life.

It is interesting to note that frogs can eat bees and wasps notwithstanding the sting. In seizing food it usually makes use of its curious extensile tongue, which can be thrust out of the mouth with surprising rapidity. The tongue is attached to the front of the jaw, its forked rear end free so that it can be flipped out of the mouth. It is supplied with a sticky secretion that picks up the food. The frog cannot see an object near to itself. Any dangling bait should, therefore, be at a distance of from two to three feet.

Frogs may be caught by dangling small bits of red yarn before them on a hook and sometimes even without a hook. When the yarn is seized the animal may be jerked out of the water. Bullfrogs kept in captivity readily attempt to swallow one's fingers.

New Fiber Plant.

A New Costa Rican fiber plant has been developed through selection and cultivation by M. Peralta of San Jose, and is alleged to produce more and stronger fiber than henequen or sisal. A consular report states that the fiber is made into rope, twine, mats, bags, and even finer articles. The spineless leaf is 9 to 12 feet long, and each plant averages 30 leaves a year, yielding two pounds of fiber. With about 600 plants to the acre, cane, beans, potatoes, or corn can be grown on the same land. Full growth is reached in five years, but cuttings—two a year—may begin two years after planting the shoots.

LEADERS' TRAINING CONFERENCE

Held at Baptist Church Thursday Evening—Supper Served at 6:30 Was Largely Attended

A Leaders' Training Conference was held at the First Baptist church parlors Thursday night, January 10

It was composed of Sunday school teachers, Y. M. C. A. leaders and all church workers of Tecumseh and nearby towns who are interested in the training of "The Boy", and although the first one of its kind ever conducted here, it was a marked success.

The churches and 'Y' groups represented by their respective delegates were as follows:

West Adrian, Congregational—Wm. Ruesink.

North Adrian, Methodist Protestant—Mrs. Harris, Judson Harris.

Britton, Christian church—Rev Otto Halfaker, Methodist Protestant—Supt Harry Smith, Rev. Tamblyn.

Holloway, Presbyterian—J. L. Calhoun, Merle Kerr.

Ridgeway, Methodist — Rev. Sommers, Mrs W. Moon, Pearl Wood, Mrs. Ella Allison

Clinton, Messrs. Kirk, Arhens, Kimball, Olds, Hoyt Rev. Lyons, Beach (Pres 'Y.')

Tecumseh, First Baptist—Dr. Hartzog, Jay Morse, Robt Moore, sr. and Robt Moore, jr, Mrs. Ethel Waldron, Genevieve Halladay, Lillian Cole.

Methodist, Dr Balmer, Dorothy Balmer, Mrs J. O Eaton.

Presbyterian, Rev. Rex, Mrs. Paul Bowen, Miss Boyce

Friends, Rev. Linton L D Kenyon Episcopal, Perry Hayden

A sumptuous supper prepared by the Baptist ladies opened the evenings program at 6:30.

The Conference proper began at 7:30 and opened with a roll call to determine what churches were represented, and just how many boys were reached, indirectly, by their respective leaders There proved to be 46 leaders present, representing 353 boys.

Mr. Gospel, of the state department of 'Y' work, in a short but comprehensive talk on "What the temptations of leaders and how we may correct them" set forth the fundamental principles underlying the successful Christian training for boys. He mentioned after a fruitless search for the book on leadership he finally found it in "The New Testament." In his [illegible] course on how to become good leaders, Mr. Gosple said that the first requirement was to be faithful A good leader should meet his classes regularly and attend every meeting. In a few words he told why we should turn to Christ when we are tempted and hold him up continually as our example.

He, in speaking of the truth of the quaint saying that "God is the enemy of Best," pointed out the value of putting our best efforts into our work. Searching, was advisable to a certain extent, in teaching boys, but the best results would be attained by getting right down into their hearts as the Master himself did with the twelve ordinary men, and constantly concentrate our efforts on fewer boys rather than to attempt to teach a larger class. The greatest principle in Christian nurture is not how big a class, as has been commonly the idea until recently, but how MUCH good we can accomplish.

Again he showed how we must follow Christ in building up a group, not by taking the boy away from all that is interesting to him and forcing upon him new doctrines, but do as Jesus did when, in getting his first disciple, he did not ask Simon Peter to give up fishing, but to become a fisher of men. That principle, he explained, was the most important in building up a lasting group.

After this splendid talk, several short discussions were held on the following subjects:

How large should a class or group be?

What methods should one take to get a boy to confess Christ and unite with the church?

How may the leader help the boy establish the habit of reading the Bible?

What should a leader know aobut a boy's home?

Which is the best method of teaching? By lecturing or questioning?

Mr. Beach, president of the "Y" group of the Senior High School of Clinton, spoke on what preparation Clinton had made and why the annual County Conference should be held there, reading a letter signed by prominent Clinton men who were backing this splendid movement.

Before the conference broke up, the county Y. M. C. A. secretary, Mr. Johnson, who was chiefly instrumental in holding this conference here, told about the "Father's and Son's Week" which is to be held during the week of February 11th to 17th and urged everyone to be ready to co-operate and back this great nation-wide movement.

ANNUAL MEETING OF TECUMSEH COMMERCE CLUB

Held Thursday Evening, January 10 at Masonic Club Rooms

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ELECTED

Report Given by General F. B. Wood on Interview with Quaker Oats People in Regard to Matter of Taxation etc.

The annual meeting of the Tecumseh Commerce Club was held Thursday evening at the Masonic Club Rooms, some 30 or 40 business men being in attendance. In the absence of the president, Sec'y H. S. Temple called the meeting to order and called upon Gen. F. B. Wood to make his report on his recent trips to Chicago and the progress made with the Quaker Oats Company in regard to matters of increase in taxation, etc.

General Wood stated that a short time ago he and F. J. Temple made a trip to Chicago in the interests of the Commerce Club. The object of their visit was to lay before the Quaker Oats people proofs that the people of Tecumseh were in no way responsible for the increase in valuation placed upon the Tecumseh macaroni plant, nor the increase in their tax from about $570.00 to $1702.00. The State Tax Commission sent representatives into the county last summer to make a revaluaion of all property both real and personal, and these men placed the valuation on the macaroni plant at $75,000.00 real and $25,000.00 personal and thus when the tax was spread, the amount to be collected was boosted three times over what it formerly was.

This gave the impression to the Quaker Oats Co. that Tecumseh people had it in for them and had caused their taxes to be boosted to what seemed, without investigation, an unreasonable amount. In consequence certain machinery was or[illegible] to Battle Creek which [illegible] been ordered to Tecumseh and it looked as if Tecumseh [illegible]ose the prospects of a greatly [illegible]d plant which would ultimately employ many more people.

The first visit made by Gen. Wood and Mr. Temple was not encouraging as they were not able to interview the proper managing head, but had their talk with the man in charge of the department which took care of all matters pertaining to insurance and taxation. They laid the matter before him, however, but were given to understand that the order cancelling the shipment of machinery to Tecumseh would have to stand and that matters would not be cleared up until Tecumseh people had made the tax question right.

Failing here the Commerce Club sought for an interview with the managing head of the company and enlisted the aid of Mr. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons who succeeded in getting an appointment with Mr. Stewart, one of the active directors of the company and also volunteering his services as far as he was able to aid in going with Gen. Wood to Chicago for the interview. The time set for the interview was Tuesday last, but as Mr. Fitzsimmons was called unexpectedly east, Gen. Wood made the trip alone. Before going, however, General Wood wrote to Mr. Stewart setting the matter before him in its true light and stating that the people of Tecumseh were friendly toward them and were willing to aid them in any possible way.

The interview with Mr. Stewart was very satisfactory and General Wood was assured that the Quaker [illegible] people were satisfied with the new valuation and were also satisfied that the people of Tecumseh were friendly toward them.

He felt that the air had been clarified and that Tecumseh could feel assured that the plant would remian here and that it would probably be enlarged to meet the growing needs of their business.

The gentlemen who made these trips to Chicago did so without any expense to the Commerce club other than their actual expenses and in lieu of this fact General Wood was given a rising vote of thanks for the services he had rendered Tecumseh.

The annual report of the Treasurer was next read which showed a fair working balance left in the treasury after all bills had been paid.

The election of an executive committee next was taken up which resulted as follows: J. R. Nyland, F. S. Anderson, L. E. Temple, C. A. Wright, H. S. Temple.

The matter of a 10c hitch for the benefit of our farmer friends was taken up and quite freely discussed. The chair finally appointing Otto Garlinghouse chairman with power to appoint his committee to take up the matter in detail and to see if a 10c hitch could not be provided.

No further business coming before the meeting an adjournment was made.

MRS. CHAS. A. BLANCHARD

Gus Hill has Another Sensational Success in

"HANS und FRITZ"

It is known and commented upon throughout the entire theatrical world, that no cartoon musical show has ever been a genuine and lasting success, that has not been under the managerial banner of Mr. Gus Hill. There is no question about the ability of Mr. Hill to select the sort of musical show best suited to the tastes of the great masses of thearegoers and patrons of the popular form of amusement. His life's effort has been to amuse the masses and not the classes. Cartoon plays appeal to him as a showman because the children like the funny page, to select the cartoon characters best known and best liked by the kiddies, has ever been his guide. "McFadden's Flats," "Happy Hooligan," "Mutt and Jeff," "Bringing up Father," have all been made famous by their various conceptors, all four of which were selected by Mr. Hill as containing the greater merit of the numerous Funny Picture series then in vogue. The success of each one of which has been without precedent in theatredom. All four have created new and unapproachable box office records through out the country. Therefore, when R. Dirks, the originator of "The Katzenjammer Kids," desired his Brain Folks, "HANS UND FRITZ," to become actors it was quite natural for him to seek out GUS HILL. The production coming to the Bradley Opera House next Monday, January 14th will be a positive revelation in numerous ways and means, scenically and otherwise. It is designed first, last and all the time, for the promotion of hearty laughter. Fun, pretty girls and music reign supreme. Don't fail to bring the children to see "HANS UND FRITZ." The Captain, Mrs. Katzenjammer and the Inspector of course, all the friends of the family will be there just as you have seen them week after week in the NEW YORK WORLD.

"HANS UND FRITZ" is the musical comedy sensation of the year, the show where youth and beauty predominate. 22 of the latest song hits of the day are introduced during the three acts of the play by a chorus gorgeously gowned. More fun compressed into two hours than you ever saw before in your entire life. Seats at Hays commencing Saturday morning.

HOW COMMON WORDS ARE MISUSED.

No solecisms are more frequent than those which consist in the common misuse of "shall" and "will." A person who has not been trained to make the proper distinction between "shall" and "will," "should" and "would," never can be sure of using them correctly, but he will make few mistakes if he fixes firmly in his mind that I (or we) shall, you will, he (or they) will, express simple futurity and that I (or we) will, you shall, he (or they) shall, imply volition on the part of the speaker. Some writers hold that "shall" was the original form of the future and that whenever courtesy permits "shall" is to be preferred to "will." But at all events, the doctrine of courtesy furnishes a rough and ready rule for choice between the two.

"Should" and "would" follow the same rules as "shall" and "will," but they have, in addition, certain meanings peculiarly their own. "Should" is sometimes used in its original sense as "ought," as in "You should not do that;" sometimes in a conditional sense, as in "Should you ask me about that," and after "lest," as in "He fled lest he should be imprisoned." "Would" is sometimes used to signify habitual action, as in "The squire would sometimes fall asleep in the most pathetic part of the sermon."

Shield for Soldiers.

No single instrument of destruction is playing a more vital role in the present war than the machine gun. To deprive Germany of this weapon by offsetting its effect is the purpose of an inventor who has developed a bullet-proof fighting shield that is perhaps worthy of study. The device is a wedge-shaped shelter mounted on one front and two rear wheels and intended to accommodate ten infantrymen. The shield is designed to be folded flat and carried through the communication trenches to the firing line, where it could be assembled quickly under cover of darkness, ready to protect Sammies, Tommies or Poilu.

The Bicycle Is Coming Back Into Its Own

THE bicycle, through the agency of war, is silently coming back into its own, and as a result the fighting fronts of the great armies, relieved of their networks of trenches and the terrifying artillery and rifle fire, might well be the countryside in any nation, with cyclists, a little hurried of motion possibly, going in every direction. In fact, one might well imagine himself in a rural community 25 years ago, when everyone not a cripple, or, worse still, unpossessed of a wheel, trundled madly about the country every hour to be snatched from his work.

The "bike" had a distinct part in the advance of troops, and this was particularly so during the early days of the war, when the fighting was carried on over wider stretches of the country, and when the great armies were alternately advancing and retreating, too busy with the objective in hand to stop and "dig in."

The English troops, in particular have taken advantage of the possibilities of the bicycle for use in scouting and messenger duty. The British have gone so far in some cases as to convert some of the regiments of yeomanry into cyclist formations.

With the British, cyclists technically are regarded as army troops, but used as specialist corps, like the Royal Engineers and other army troops establishments, but signs are not wanting that, with their great increase in numbers and with the new conditions of modern warfare, the cyclists will in future take their place as a definite arm rather than as specialists.

The military cyclists played a great part in the early days of this struggle. In their advance through France and Belgium the German armies depended largely upon their advance guards of cyclist companies of Jaegers, supported by mobile mechanical transport columns, armored machine-gun cars, and re-enforced when necessary by swift concentrations of infantry in motor omnibuses.

The old tradition of the cavalry screen and the patrols of mounted lancers were swept aside by the more progressive "mechanical cavalry," as the cyclists have been called. All roads and villages were reconnoitered and seized by cyclist units, only the inclosed country in between the road parallels being covered by the slower cavalry.

TERMS TO END WORLD WAR PROPOSED BY PRESIDENT

Fourteen Principles, the Acceptance of Which Would Make it Possible to Conclude Peace With German Military Autocracy, named by Wilson to Congress

WOULD REMOVE CAUSE FOR FUTURE WARS

Demands Evacuation of Conquered Territory; Reparation For Alsace-Lorraine; Freedom of Seas; Reduction of Armament; Sanctity of National Treaties

Peace Conditions Outlined By President Wilson

1. Open covenants of peace without private international understandings.
2. Absolute freedom of the seas in peace or war except as they may be closed by international action.
3. Removal of all economic barriers and establishment of equality of trade conditions among nations consenting to peace and associating themselves for its maintenance.
4. Guarantees for the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point, consistent with domestic safety.
5. Impartial adjustments of all colonial claims based upon the principle that the peoples concerned have equal weight with the interests of the government.
6. Evacuation of all Russian territory and opportunity for Russia's political development.
7. Evacuation of Belgium without any attempt to limit her sovereignty.
8. All French territory to be freed and restored, and reparation for the taking of Alsace-Lorraine.
9. Readjustment of Italy's frontiers along clearly recognizable lines of nationality.
10. Freest opportunity for autonomous development of the peoples of Austro-Hungary.
11. Evacuation of Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro, with access to the sea for Serbia and, international guarantees of economic and political independence and territorial integrity of the Balkan states.
12. Secure sovereignty for Turkey's portion of the Ottoman empire, but with other nationalities under Turkish rule assured security of life and opportunity for autonomous development, with the Dardanelles permanently opened to all nations.
13. Establishment of an independent Polish state, including territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, with free access to the sea and political and economic independence and territorial integrity guaranteed by international covenant.
14. General association of nations under specific covenants for mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity of large and small states alike.

Washington—With a new statement of war aims, approving the recent declarations of the British premier, Lloyd George, President Wilson last Tuesday presented to congress and the world a specific declaration of the terms on which it would be possible to make peace with the German military autocracy. [illegible] than to war.

Coming at a moment when Germany faces the demands of her socialists for abandonment of any program of annexations and indemnities and also faces the failure of the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, the president's pronouncement develops tremendous importance.

The President's Speech.

The president opened his speech with a reference to the peace parleys conducted at Brest-Litovsk between the Bolsheviki and representatives of the central powers.

He declared that "the representatives of the central powers, on their part, presented an outline of settlement which, if much less definite, seemed susceptible of liberal interpretation until their specific program of practical terms was added. That program proposed no concessions at all either to sovereignty of Russia or to the preferences of the population with whose fortunes it dealt, but meant, in a word, that the central empires were to keep every foot of territory their armed forces had occupied—every province, every city, every point of vantage—as a permanent addition to their territories and their power."

Liberal Statesmen Understand.

He further stated that he believed that Germany's original proposal of "no annexations and no indemnities" originated with the more liberal statesmen of Germany and Austria, the men who have begun to feel the force of their own people's thought and purpose, while the concrete terms of actual settlement came from the "military leaders who have no thought but to keep what they have got."

Accepts Germany's Challenge.

With a true understanding of the reasons the peace conditions of both Teutons and Russians had been made known, the president stated, "whatever the results of the parleys at Brest-Litovsk, whatever the confusions of counsel and of purpose in the utterances of the spokesmen of the central empires, they have again attempted to acquaint the world with their objects in the war and have again challenged their adversaries to say what their objects are and what sort of settlement they would deem just and satisfactory.

"There is no good reason why that challenge should not be responded to, and responded to with the utmost candor. We did not wait for it. Not once, but again and again, we have laid our whole thought and purpose before the world, not in general terms only, but each time with sufficient definition to make it clear what sort of definitive terms of settlement must necessarily spring out of them.

Allies Agree on Terms.

"There is no confusion of counsel among the adversaries of the central powers, no uncertainty of principle, no vagueness of detail. The only secrecy of counsel, the only lack of fearless frankness, the only failure to make definite statements of the objects of the war, lies with Germany and her allies. The issues of life and death hang upon these definitions."

"It will be our wish and purpose that the processes of peace, when they are begun, shall be absolutely open and that they shall involve henceforth no secret undertakings of any kind.

Day of Conquest Past.

"The day of conquest and aggrandizement is gone by; so is also the day of secret covenants entered into in the interest of particular governments and likely at some unlooked-for moment to upset the peace of the world. [illegible]

"We entered this war [illegible] tions of right had [illegible] touched us to the [illegible] life of our own people [illegible] less they were [illegible] ly that it be made safe for every peace-loving nation which, like our own, wishes to live its own life, determine its own institutions, be assured of justice and fair dealing by the other peoples of the world as against force and selfish aggression.

The World Peace Program.

"The program of the world's peace, therefore, is our program, and that program, the only possible program as we see it, is this:

"I. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind, but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view.

"II. Absolute freedom of navigation on the seas, outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war, except as the seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for the enforcement of international covenants.

"III. The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all the nations consenting to the peace and associating themselves for its maintenance.

"IV. Adequate guarantees given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

"V. A free, open-minded and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims, based on a strict observance of the principle that in determining all such questions of sovereignty the interests of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the government whose title is to be determined.

"VI. The evacuation of all Russian territory and such a settlement of all questions affecting Russia as will secure the best and freest co-operation of the other nations of the world in obtaining for her an unhampered and unembarrassed opportunity for the independent determination of her own political development and national policy and assure her of a sincere welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing; and, more than a welcome, assistance also of every kind that she may need and may herself desire. The treatment accorded Russia by her sister nations in the months to come will be the acid test of their good will, of their comprehension of her needs as distinguished from their own interests, and of their intelligent and unselfish sympathy.

"VII. Belgium, the whole world will agree, must be evacuated and restored, without any attempt to limit the sovereignty which she enjoys in common with all other free nations. No other single act will serve as this will serve to restore confidence among the nations in the laws which they have themselves set and determined for the government of their relations with one another. Without this healing act, the whole structure and validity of international law is forever impaired.

"VIII. All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored, and the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly 50 years, should be righted, in order that peace may once more be made secure in the interest of all.

"IX. A readjustment of the frontiers of Italy should be effected along clearly recognizable lines of nationality. [illegible]

The people of Austria-Hungary, whose place among the nations we wish to see safeguarded and assured, should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous development.

XI.—Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro should be evacuated; occupied territories restored; Serbia accorded free and secure access to the sea; and the relations of the several Balkan states to one another determined by friendly counsel along historically established lines of allegiance and nationality; and international guarantees of the political and economic independence and territorial integrity of the several Balkan states should be entered into.

XII.—The Turkish portions of the present Ottoman empire should be assured a secure sovereignty, but the other nationalities which are now under Turkish rule should be assured an undoubted security of life and an absolutely unmolested opportunity of autonomous development, and the Dardanelles should be permanently opened as a free passage to the ships and commerce of all nations under international guarantees.

XIII.—An independent Polish state should be erected which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea, and whose political and economic independence and territorial integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant.

XIV.—A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike.

Fight Only For Peace.

In regard to these essential rectifications of wrong and assertions of right we feel ourselves to be intimate partners of all governments and peoples associated together against the imperialists. We cannot be separated in interest or divided in purpose. We stand together until the end.

For such arrangements and covenants we are willing to fight and to continue to fight until they are achieved; but only because we wish the right to prevail and desire a just and stable peace such as can be secured only by removing the chief provocations to war, which this program does remove. We have no jealousy of German greatness, and there is nothing in this program that impairs it. We grudge her no achievement or distinction of learning or of pacific enterprise such as have made her record very bright and very enviable. We do not wish to injure her or to block in any way her legitimate influence or power.

Wants Germany Equal, Not Master.

We do not wish to fight her either with arms or with hostile arrangements of trade, if she is willing to associate herself with us and the other peace-loving nations of the world in covenants of justice and law and fair dealing. We wish her only to accept a place of equality among the peoples of the world—the new world in which we now live—instead of a place of [illegible]

Neither do we presume to suggest [illegible] alteration or modification [illegible] we must frankly [illegible] is a preliminary to any intelligent dealings with her on our part, that we should know whom her spokesmen speak for when they speak to us, whether for the reichstag majority or for the military party, and the men whose creed is imperial domination.

Principles Are Clear.

"We have spoken now, surely, in terms too concrete to admit of any further doubt or question. An evident principle runs through the whole program I have outlined. It is the principle of justice to all peoples and nationalities, and their right to live on equal terms of liberty and safety with one another, whether they be strong or weak. Unless this principle be made its foundation no part of the structure of international justice can stand.

Protest a Happy Ending.

The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette recently reported a curious suit that should interest the readers of Flaubert's romance of Carthage. The action was brought by the niece of Gustave Flaubert against the adapters of "Salammbo" for the cinema.

Flaubert, it will be remembered, finishes his novel with the mobbing and death of Mathos before the eyes of his mistress, who seems entirely indifferent to his fate. This would not do for the film. The adapters not only save the general's life, but ring down the curtain with the marriage of the lovers, who "live happily together ever after," and have a multitude of children to grace their old age.

This platonic and commonplace ending to a "masterpiece" horrified the dilettantes, who made so much fuss about the caricaturing of the story that Flaubert's literary executor felt compelled to take the matter up, and has appealed to the courts for redress.—Kansas City Star.

Why Girl Messengers Are Failures.

With one or two exceptions, girls who have tried lately to replace messenger boys in New York have failed. Too much walking, too many display windows and the inability to stand the gibes of messengers of the other sex and dislike of a uniform are the stumbling blocks which have thinned the ranks. Because of a dearth of boys due to school starting and calls to "higher up" jobs, the telegraph companies advertised for girls. They wanted "girls over 16 for light work, steady employment." Many girls who didn't know what they were getting into answered. One office was able to persuade three to go to work, and another got five. After the first day there was one girl left in each office. Too much time lost looking into windows, the strain of walking all day and the taunts of boys working with them took the others. The employers of girl messengers are not discouraged, however, and believe by elimination they may finally get a good working force.

DRAFT LAW LEGAL, SAYS HIGH COURT

CONGRESS HAS POWER TO ACT

Court Says Solons Have Right to Raise Armies and Send Them Where Needed.

Washington. — Every contention raised against the selective draft act was swept aside by the supreme court Monday in an unanimous opinion delivered by Chief Justice White, upholding the law as constitutional.

Authority to enact the statute and to send forces to fight the enemy wherever he may be found, the court held, lies in the clauses of the constitution giving congress the power to declare war and to raise and support armies.

"As the mind cannot conceive an army without the men to compose it," said the chief justice, "on the face of the constitution the objection that it does not give power to provide for such men would seem to be too frivolous for further notice."

The opinion then proceeded to take up and definitely dispose of each of the many questions raised by counsel for the convicted persons whose appeals brought the law before the court.

No action was taken by the court in the several pending cases involving charges of conspiracy to prevent the carrying out the purposes of the law.

It is understood that these cases which include the appeals of Alexander Berkman, Emma Goldman, Louis Kramer and Morris Becker, convicted in New York later may be made the subject of a separate opinion.

JURY INDICTS CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Connolly, Sitting As Grand Jury, Issues Warrants for Several.

Detroit—Recorder Wm. F. Connolly, who for the past few weeks has been sitting as a grand jury, startled the city Monday and Tuesday by issuing complaints and warrants against city officials.

The most prominent men indicted are Sheriff Edward F. Stein and Undersheriff John F. W. Vergouw charged with negligence in permitting Anthony Kloka to embezzle state and county funds. Kloka is now serving a sentence in Jackson for his crime.

Another indictment is against Robert Oakman, president of the Detroit Water Board, charged with tapping city water mains without authority, to supply water in subdivisions promoted by him. Oakman is a brother and one of the chief backers of Milton Oakman, county clerk.

AUTO SUPPLANTS [illegible]

Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago Linked By New Truck Line.

Cleveland—One hundred auto trucks will begin carrying freight between Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and Chicago in 30 days.

A $1,500,000 corporation made up of representatives from the four cities has been formed to operate the motor truck line.

The trucks will operate in trains of five. Each train will carry 10 drivers and two mechanics.

Scores of business houses have signed contracts for transportation on the new line.

SUB CAPTAIN SINKS 15 SHIPS

U. S. Destroyer and 14 Merchantmen Bagged On One Cruise.

Amsterdam—Emperor William has conferred the Order Pour Le Merite on a submarine commander, Kophamel, on his return from a cruise to the Cape Verde islands.

On the cruise, Kophamel asserts, he sank an American destroyer and 14 merchantmen, most of them bound from the United States for Italy or France.

He is said to have brought back 22 tons of copper as loot.

U-BOAT SINKS AMERICAN SHIP

The state tax commission will hold its seventh annual conference in Bay City January 27 and 28. It is expected between 200 and 250 assessing officers will attend.

Fine horses which two or three years ago brought from $100 to $300 each were sold at auction in Bay City at $25, $30 and $40. The highest price secured was $60.

Albion factories are co-operating with the United States government by taking a census of enemy aliens. The work is being done through the foremen at the factories.

Marquette will observe two lightless nights each week because the scarcity of water in the dam basin of the water works has made it necessary to use coal to operate the generating plant.

WHEAT DAMAGED BY SEVERE WEATHER

CROP REPORT SHOWS MOST PARTS OF STATE HAVE SUFFERED.

CORN CROP 5,000,000 BUSHELS

Estimated That 50 Per Cent of Crop Put in Silos or Left in Fields Was Not Worth Husking.

Lansing—December's corn crop report shows that 289 correspondents report damage to winter wheat and 203 say there was none. Sixty-seven mills report no wheat marketed and the total of other mills was 209,352 bushels.

The average price of products in the state January 1 is given as follows: Wheat, $2.02; rye, $1.68; corn, $1.05; oats, 75 cents; hay, $20.09; fat cattle, $8.40; fat hogs, $15.11; dressed pork, $19.51.

Farm products are higher than last year by the following margin: Wheat, 43 cents; rye, 42 cents; corn, 96 cents; oats, 21 cents.

Average condition of live stock: Horses, 94 per cent; cattle, 93; sheep, 98; swine, 91.

It is estimated that 50 per cent of the corn has been put in silos or left in fields as not worth husking. Of the remainder, about 5,000,000 bushels only is thought to be marketable.

Sugar beet acreage was 94,589 acres, with a crop of 835,221 tons.

WOMEN ARE TO BE REGISTERED

State Organization Will Classify Them in Various Callings.

Lansing—For the purpose of ascertaining just what are the community assets and liabilities of Michigan, with particular reference to the needs and possibilities for women's war service, the Woman's committee (Michigan division) Council of National Defense, with headquarters at Kalamazoo, has begun the making of a complete community survey of the state.

This undertaking is to preface the registration of Michigan women for war service, now set by the Woman's Committee for the week of March 18.

Specifically this proposed survey has a seven-fold purpose which is as follows: To place volunteers and paid workers; fit all workers better to fill community needs; find what actual call there may be for women to take the places of men selected for fighting service; ascertain what courses of in [illegible] munity for those wishing to make themselves more efficient; discover the social and philanthropic forces with a view to maintaining, or increasing their efficiency and bring forcibly to the minds of patriotic women their duty to their own community, and to help them find a place in this service.

To secure necessary information, five distinct questionnaires have been worked out, which are sent to county and local chairmen.

WAR ROADS ONLY ONES BUILT

State Told to Improve Only Those of Military Value.

Lansing.—"War time" roads and no others are to be built in Michigan this year.

Commissioner of State Highways Rogers has sent out letters to each county commissioner asking for the plans of the counties for the year. The letter was sent at the suggestion of the government which has requested that only "war time" roads of military or commercial value, be constructed.

It means in Michigan that the roads leading from the automobile manufacturing cities into Detroit, and from those cities to the Lincoln highway in Indiana will get most of the road-building this year.

The government plans big movements of munitions out of this state next summer by truck, and it is absolutely necessary that the roads leading to the gateways at the southern edge of the state be kept in tip-top shape.

With governmental control of railroads, the government can dictate where the roads shall be built.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

Artillery sergeants have a lyceum and club in which they can meet for study. A vacant farm house has been turned over to them by Col. Cloke.

Hereafter worn shoes will be half soled and otherwise repaired for the men.

Attention is called by division officers to provisions of a law, on the statute books for many years, but which has not been recently enforced, referring to trespassers on military reservations. This law provides that when any one who is prohibited from entering a reservation or who has been ordered off and returns, is arrested, he may be fined not more than $500 nor imprisoned for more than six months.

Mr. and Mrs. Burpham Nash, an aged couple residing on a Chester township farm, just outside of the city of Charlotte, were burned to death. Neighbors saw the house afire and broke into the kitchen and bedroom but could not find the occupants before being driven out by gas and smoke. The house was destroyed and the charred bodies were found near a window in a sitting room.

Mrs. Robert Lunberner of Harbor Beach died when she received a letter from her son, Robert Lunden, at Waco, to the effect that his command would soon leave for France.

Alfred Jacobson, 35 years old, was killed, and two other miners, Richard Mars and Jacob Paylin, were injured in a fall of ground at the Calumet & Hecla mines at Calumet.

PLAY SPELL IS NECESSITY

Why All Work and No Play Makes Jack a Dull Boy.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is an old saying which has lived because of its truth. It is quite as true of the older boy as of the younger. Everyone needs recreation, a play spell. Neither mind nor body can be kept constantly under tension without exacting a heavy penalty, says a writer in the Milwaukee Journal. The vacation is needed and pays in renewed vigor of body and mind.

Keeping the spirit of play, one keeps from growing old too quickly. Many a trifling annoyance can be turned away with a merry heart that has readiness to see the amusing side of a thing, if one is in good enough health and spirits to see the funny side. A happy, cheerful temper promotes good health, and good health promotes a happy, cheerful temper. Do not be forever afraid of seeming foolish when you play. It is good for you to relax, to be inconsequential, to let a spirit of play run riot for a time. Being always on one's dignity takes from the genial spirit and ages one too early. Being in merry spirit help you do your work easier. A task is lighter for the heart's being light.

The more serious your occupation, the heavier your cares, the more you need a play spell. However great you may be, however important your occupation, forget them both for a time. Let yourself loose from the tension of cares and become a child in spirit. You will live longer and do better work for it.

MAN AND BEAST NEED SLEEP

How Wild Animals Are Tamed By Being Kept Awake.

A person without sleep for nine days will die. Sufferers from insomnia sometimes maintain that they have gone for weeks without sleeping, while it has been proved that they actually sleep without being aware of it. At a certain point, sleep is inevitable, no matter what the bodily condition, the alternative being death.

A method of taming wild elephants is said to be that of depriving the animals of sleep when first caught. In a few days they become practically spiritless and harmless. The brain of the elephant is held to be more highly developed than that of any other wild animal; but, of course, as compared with a human being, can be easily fatigued by new impressions and so made dependent on sleep.

The wild elephant in his native jungle is said to sleep very little—a further point of the theory of the universal ratio of sleep to intelligence.

How Menthol Is Manufactured.

A good part of the world's peppermint comes from Japan, and it is from peppermint that we get menthol, which is so widely used as a local anesthetic in the treatment of headache.

The preliminary steps in the manufacture of menthol are carried out by the Japanese farmers themselves, with the aid of stills of a simple design. The peppermint plants are first [illegible] the sun, for 30 days. Then they are placed in the stills, where they undergo a process of steaming. The resulting vapors are led off through pipes into cooling chambers, are condensed, and deposited as crude peppermint oil. The crude peppermint is shipped to Yokohama and Kobe, where factories subject it to a process of fractional distillation to obtain the full content of menthol.

Recommendations calling for complete unification of the service of the five steam railroads entering Saginaw and Bay City were drafted at a conference of officials at Bay City.

The Superior Coal Co., of St. Charles, is suing the Ann Arbor railroad. The company claims the railroad has failed to furnish sufficient cars for their needs to transport coal from the New Haven mines.

Torsten Williams, of Manistique, 8 years old, is dead from poisoning received when he ate popcorn balls left over from Christmas a year ago. It is believed the balls had become mixed with poison kept in the same room.

Thousands of grape growers of Van Buren county sent to Senator Charles E. Townsend at Washington a petition, which he presented to the senate, against the rumored intention of the federal food administration to class grape juice among the non-essentials.

State headquarters have been opened in Grand Rapids for recruiting for the United States Naval Reserves, with branch offices in Jackson, Muskegon, Manistee, Holland and Kalamazoo. Lists from Camp Logan, Ill., show that 350 of the 405 men stationed there are from Michigan. Five hundred more men from this state are being sought to act as rifle instructors for service in the United States.

The aviation and quartermaster's departments have been temporarily closed to drafted men, according to notice being served on all local boards.

President Wilson's address to congress Dec. 4 will be used as a text for the reading examination in the eighth grade examinations to be held throughout the state in May. In this way every child will learn the aims of the United States in the war, as the language used is simple enough to be understood by eighth grade pupils. The message with notes will be distributed February 15.

HOW GRUBSTAKE BECAME FORTUNE.

Probably the largest fortune that ever came from a very small grubstake was that at Tombstone mines, when Richard Gird got about $2,000,000 from a grubstake of a few hundred dollars and some scientific work. In 1873, Gird, who had been vainly seeking riches in mines for a dozen years in South America, and all over the Pacific coast, went down to southwestern Arizona. The Apaches were raiding and murdering at that time, and the territory was deserted by white settlers. Gird was told that he would get a tombstone rather than a fortune there. Hence the name Tombstone for the mines.

He found no trace of pay ore where he expected it, and was about to come back to southern California.

One morning he fell in with other prospectors, the Scheffelin brothers. They said they believed they had found rich ore, but they wanted to have it assayed before they would risk their lives in that Apache country digging for something that would not pay them. Gird was an assayer. He agreed to do the assaying at Tuscon for the brothers free and to give several hundred dollars' worth of food and clothing for a third interest in the mines, providing the assay proved what he believed it would be. That was in May, 1879. Mr. Gird sold his third interest in the Tombstone mines in the following October, after the memorable stampede there of 10,000 miners from all parts of the Union, for $2,140,000.

FOUR FACTORS IN GREATNESS

Why Certain Men Are Raised High Above the Crowd.

The merits by which men of action rise to greatness are four—intellect, energy, courage and independence—says James Bryce in the Youth's Companion. When these four are united in the same person, and in a quite exceptional measure, they raise him high above the crowd. Other men defer to his opinion, trust his predictions, repeat his phrases, rely on his firmness, take him as their chief. If he succeeds in what he undertakes, each success confirms his authority and surrounds him with a halo of prestige. He becomes a power.

Of the four qualities enumerated, that which impresses others is independence, because it is so rare. The man who, perceiving difficulties and dangers, will face them alone, in reliance on his own judgment and force, is the natural and inevitable leader. If he is large of soul, true to his principles and to his friends, he will win affection and an even fuller measure of confidence. But the impression of that indefinable thing we call greatness depends after all chiefly on the impression that he makes of the power of initiative, of an unshakable resolution. The mass of mankind want someone to follow, someone in whose hands they can feel themselves safe, as crew and passengers do when they see their captain cool and dauntless in the wildest storm.

BERRY PATCH FROM BARREL

How One Man Had Garden Despite His Small Back Yard.

A Los Angeles man whose back yard was too small for growing strawberries conceived a clever idea, which is described in Popular Mechanics. He made a strawberry patch out of a barrel. Holes about 12 inches apart were bored in rows in its sides. Several tin cans with perforated bottoms were piled one on the other in the center of the barrel and enough dirt was thrown about them to fill the receptacle up to the first row of holes.

After the dirt had settled sufficiently strawberry vines were planted in the holes and allowed to hang outside. This process was repeated until the barrel was full and vines had been set in all the holes and on the top. As the soil was added, cans were piled up through the center to provide an irrigation passageway. A hole was bored in the side near the bottom to allow water to drain off.

How Automatic Machines Benefit Mankind.

Automatic machines cut out the labor of three men, say. These men are permitted to go into a field where automatic machines haven't appeared yet. It is all good, declares Charles M. Horton in Industrial Management. The machine has let loose these men in order to let them work elsewhere toward keeping the big storehouse up to demands. And so on, forever, without end. When all work is done by machinery, all mankind will have leisure to pursue arts and the like to their own heart's desire. But get this: Automatic machinery is man's friend and not his enemy.

How to Eradicate Consumption.

At the annual conference of the National Union of Railway Men in Manchester, England, it was declared that "the most effective way of eradicating the fearful scourge of consumption is to insure that the citizens are not lacking in nourishing food, healthy homes, and reasonable facilities for leisure and open-air life."

FLYERS GUARD PADUA

Enemy Airmen Driven Back by Italians.

Teutons Drop Bombs on Other Cities When Forced Back by Daring Aviators—Artillery Quiet.

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Jan. 7.—Padua was spared another air raid, largely through the daring of Italian aviators, who went into the air an hour before moonrise and formed an aerial cordon around the city, meeting enemy machines as they advanced.

The enemy aviators, seeing the heavy concentration, diverted their course, going to Mestre, Bassano and Castel Franco. They caused some casualties and considerable loss at the last place.

British aviators are doing especially good work. Their latest exploit was the destruction of an enemy balloon at Susegana and the bringing down of an enemy airplane by gunfire.

The artillery action along the mountain and Piave fronts is intermittent, and no longer shows the intensity of a big offensive. Along the upper Piave enemy batteries have been virtually silent for a week, indicating either a shortage of ammunition or a possible movement of forces westward to other fronts.

Rome, Jan. 7.—Austro-German and Italian big guns maintained a vigorous fire along the entire Italian front, says the war office announcement, and there was great aerial activity. Enemy patrol attempts between the Brenta and Piave rivers were easily repulsed.

RAIN DROPS FROZEN IN AIR

How Hail Is Formed by Action of Conflicting Currents.

Limiting the observations to such compound hail-stones as are the most destructive, and are produced during a tornado or violent thunderstorm, the following theory has been advanced as to how they are formed:

When the winds gyrate rapidly round an axis, more or less inclined to the earth, the space at and about the axis is rarified. When air charged with vapor is drawn into this rarified space it may be condensed into cloud or rain, or, at a greater elevation, into snow.

Now, supposing the rain formed in the lower region to be drawn up by the ascending current into the snowy region, and so held for a short space, the drops will be frozen, and then, if propelled beyond the gyrations, will fall to the ground as a shower of ordinary hail.

But if in the descent they are again drawn in by the inflowing current, they will be again carried up into the cold region and so acquire another coating of ice. In this way the globule may make a number of ascents and descents and acquire a fresh coating each time.

How to Learn to Do Everything Well.

When you make the most of everyday tasks it becomes second nature to do things well. That's what puts class to your work. You may imagine that because the job is common it won't make any difference whether it is done well or ill. That's how many fellows look upon plowing. They are satisfied if they can only turn the furrow. The fact is there is more monetary value in good plowing than most men think. To be sure it's just turning the earth, but the way you do it will have a lot to do with the [illegible] the crops next year. An ordinary job carefully and neatly done shows the touch of a master and rises in dignity by comparison with common things.

Loving a Child.

Loving a child is key
To Heaven's mystery.
Loving a child, and giving
It knowledge this is living.
Loving a child brings gain,
And is life's greatest gain.

Loving a child is knowing
The fierce joy of a sowing
That shall cause mighty reaping.
Loving a child is weeping,
And fearing, too, and praying;
This, there is no gainsaying.

Loving a child is being
A part of God, and seeing
The world beneath one's hand
Enlarge, expand,
Be different, and grow
To one's thought. Even so

Loving a child is key
To every mystery.
Loving a child is laughter
And heartache after.
—Heartache and grief and pain
But always joy again.

FIERCE BLIZZARD SWEEPS TECUMSEH FRIDAY NIGHT AND SUNDAY

Storm Extends from Rocky Mts. to Alleghanies and from Canada to the Gulf

Temperature Drops to 40 Below in Some Places while the Gulf States Get Freezing Weather

Early Friday afternoon the county commenced to feel the effects of the storm, which swept the country Friday night and Saturday, and by evening the wind was blowing at a terrific gale from the southwest with the temperature below zero. The storm was the worst recorded in years and few people remember one worse. It covered a wide area of territory, from the Rockies as far east as the Alleghanies and from Canada to the Gulf States, with the temperature falling as low as 38 to 40 degrees in some localities. Great suffering is being reported from all sections and many lives were lost. The north with its scant supply of coal came in for a great amount of suffering. Railway traffic was out of the question and the main roads were reporting their through trains hours behind schedule. Business was paralyzed Saturday and the larger cities could not get in supplies of food stuffs.

In Tecumseh the storm had its own way Friday night and Saturday. No one ventured from their homes unless forced to because of business. Snow piled up everywhere and the mercury stood 18 to 20 below all day Saturday. Not a train came into town from Friday night until Monday morning. The city carriers made a desperate attempt to cover their route Saturday morning but gave it up in the afternoon. The rural routes were out of commission; only a few deliveries from the stores were made and business was practically at a stand still. The banks kept open during the day but made only a few entries on their books and did not open in the evening at all. There piled up in huge drifts all over town was simply nothing doing. Snow and the country roads leading into town were piled high. Banks of snow from 15 to 18 ft. high are reported in some sections of town.

The McNeil sisters living in the west end of town, were practically snowed under, huge banks of snow all about their home, and their chicken coop buried under a pile of snow 15 ft. high.

Sunday morning the storm had spent its fury and people commenced to dig out. The churches were all closed, people were simply unable to get to them until the walks were shoveled out. Monday morning farmers were routed out by the highway commissioners and were set to work clearing the principal highways for traffic and by night many of the main roads were open and farmers commenced to come into town.

Everyone is wondering when we had experienced another such a storm. Turning to our files of 1893 Jan. 12, just 25 years ago, items read like this:

"Michigan is covered with snow from one end to the other. At Muske[illegible] and many factory laborers were unable to go to work. The road bed between Petoskey and Traverse City was so blocked that the Chicago and Western Michigan has been unable to run a train since Saturday. At a train since last Saturday. At Grand Rapids snow lays two feet on the level."

"The big blizzard of the first of the week extended over the entire northern states."

"We had a heavy snow-storm last night, which ought to insure good sleighing for a month or more."

"HANS UND FRITZ"

[illegible] Hill's production of "Hans U[illegible]" was presented to a Te[illegible] audience Monday evening. A fa[illegible] turned out to see the fun[illegible] large proportion of the audi[illegible] was made up of the young Americans, which goes to show that the [illegible] are being followed from week to week by the youngsters.

There were eleven people in the cast [illegible] principal characters of course [illegible] the Captain, the Inspector, Mrs. Katzenjammer and Katzenjammer kids, Hans and Fritz, the parts of Hans und Fritz being taken care of by the two little fellows of the company, Paul Paulus and Ernest Rum[illegible]lle, who pulled off many interesting antics.

The balance of the company was made up of a chorus of girls 12 in number with 17 musical numbers. The scenery and costumes were very attractive.

Our schools were closed today to allow the teachers to attend the Teachers' Insitute in Adrian, but, owing to the lateness of the train, they were unable to reach there on time and so have an extra vacation.

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Tecumseh Agricultural Works.

The origin of this establishment dates far back in the history of our town and its character at the beginning was but a faint foreshowing of its ultimate character. As long ago as 1833, as near as we can learn, Mr. J. N. Chandler purchased the ground or southeast corner lot of Chicago and Pearl street (where now 1917 is located Brown & Company) on which the main building now stands, and erected upon it a two story building for a wagon shop. He occupied it for several years for that purpose. In 1835 or 6, Messrs. T. T. Kneeland and Walker Welch purchased the adjoining lot on the east and established there an iron foundry. Their principal object was the manufacture of plows, but they also made other castings. In 1837-8 they furnished castings for the Globe Mill which were very large and heavy and from this circumstance the concern after [illegible] became one of the more imp[illegible] consideration.

In 1836 or 37 Mr. Chas. Hewitt purchased a one third interest in the concern and became a silent partner. In 1842 or near that time, Mr. Welch sold his one-third interest to Mr. J. B. Taylor, the style of the firm was Kneeland & Hewitt, Taylor not recognized, and after one year Taylor sold his one third interest to Mr. Henry L. Hewitt who, at the end of the following year sold his undivided one third interest to Kneeland and his brother Charles.

About this time the lot on the southeast corner of Chicago and Pearl St., together with the building thereon, formerly owned by J. N. Chandler came into possession of the furnace company and became a part of the establishment. Kneeland & Hewitt (Charles) carried on the work until 1859, when Kneeland sold his one half of the concern to Chas Hewitt and Solomon H. Wheeler. About 1850 Hewett sold out to Richard Manning, and, very soon thereafter, Manning sold his interest to Mr. John Farleman, in 1851 or 2 Farleman sold his undivided one half to H. J. Snell. Wheeler & Snell ran the concern a year and then sold the works to Messrs. Morris Hyde and Isaac H. Ketchem, Ketchem shortly after sold his one half to Hudson N. Conklin and John Hall. Conklin soon sold his inerest to E. D. Burlingame.

In about one year from that time Hall sold his interest to Burlingame and about one year later, C. A. Stacy esq., purchased the interest of Mr. Hyde. Messrs. Burlingame and Stacy very soon sold one third interest to Mr. Luke M. Mooney. Burlingame & Moony, Stacy silent partner, ran the works about four years.

During this time the building was burned and what is quite worthy of notice in thirty days from the time the fire was out the works were rebuilt, the edifice of brick and in active operation. Mr. Stacy then bought out Mr. Moony, and the furnace was run by Burlingame & Yawger, Yawger renting Stacy's share of the works till the time of his death.

In the month of December, 1865, Messrs. Burlingame and Stacy sold the entire establishment, together with the good will of he business to Messrs. John Richard, Horace Brewer George Curtis, William Parsons and Richard McConnell, they worked the concern under the style of J. Richard & Company until the spring of 1868 when Richard sold his interest to Hiram Raymond Esq. Soon after Mr. Raymond became connected with the firm, they erected a fine new front, containing on the first floor, an office and sales room, and the two upper stories for the general purposes of the company.

These works are now in good operative condition, and are alike creditable to the owners and to the place They manufacture threshing machines, plows and various other agricultural implements, castings in general, and, in the best style of workmanship. They have also a planing machine connected with the establishment. Thus from small beginnings this institution has grown to one of great importance to he community and as at present conducted, can not fail, we think and as truly hope a source of satisfactory income to the worthy proprietors and of general good to the community

History of the Press in Tecumseh

It is not a little singular that, the Art of printing which registers and commemorates all other inventions which gives to posterity the current event of all modern times, which imparts a kind of immortality to the noble acts of great and good men, which contributes more than all other instrumentality to circulate general intelligence and the saving truth of the gospel all over the earth [illegible] entirely failed to recover its own origin. Nevertheless such appears to be a fact but our ignorance of the suns first shining impairs neither its intrinsic beauty, nor its ineffable importance and as the king of the day sheds over all the world, the beams of natural light, so the art of printing or the press, is ever, and everywhere imparting a moral radiance to the darkened minds of men. The best hopes of human enlightment local and universal are inseparably identified with the workings of the press. And a primal glory of our country is that the press is free. Its history, therefore, in every town where it has obtained adoption and weekly, or oftener, imparts intelligance to the people, is of especial interest, we proceed therefore to give an outline of it history in Tecumseh.

As early as 1834 or 35, the citizens of our village, circulated a subscription, raised funds and purchased a press, and a fount of type. Twas a Ramage press, similar to the one first used by our venerable countrymen, Dr. Benjamin Franklin. The ink was laid upon the type by old fashioned "HandBalls" and the plate was brought down, to make the impression by a lever, and worked with the hand. The principal object which induced the establishment of this press was to print a weekly paper and for general advertising.

To work the press the citizens employed Mr. Beriah Brown, a young printer from Western New York. The paper which was immediately issued was called "The Tecumseh Democrat." This was the first public journel published in Lenawee Co. It was soon followed by one in the village of Adrian styled the "Gazette."

Not long after the paper went into circulation the Hon. Peter Morey, a young lawyer from Madison County, New York, settled in Tecumseh and in 1837 was appointed Attorney General of the State. He and Mr. Brown purchased the paper and continued to publish it until 1837, when Mr. John A. Brown purchased Mr. Moreys interest and the two Browns published the paper until 1840 when they sold the concern to Daniel S. Curtis, who was then a young man from Genese Co., New York, and a practical printer.

Mr. Curtis published the Democrat until about 1844 when he sold out to Henry [illegible] Hewitt, Esq., and Hewitt soon sold to James L. and David Smith who worked the press some [illegible] or four years, having changed the name of the paper, styled it "The Village Record". The press and type were then sold to someone who conveyed it to parts unknown.

An interrognum of printing followed until 1850, when on the first day of October James H. Perry Esq., an Englishman by birth and a practical printer, issued a new paper under the name of "The Tecumseh Herald." The press and appliances were procured, as were those of which we have already given account, by contributions from friendly citizens of the village, Cybrant VanWest Esq., being one of the leading actors in the enterprise.

Perry proved to be a John Bull or better, a Bull with the John left out. Hence the Herald was right away in limbo and the first year underwent several vicissitudes, in the course of a twelve month being more than once sold.

On February 20th, 1851, L. G. Sholes & Company published the paper until the 11th of September following when it was purchased by W. H. Stout. Mr. Stout ran the concern until Novebmer 8th, 1851, and sold to John Shepard on March 25, December 25th following. Richard sold to John Shepard on March 25, 1852. On April 29, Shepard failed to fulfill his engagements so Richard sold to Shepard & Benedict. In October, 1852, two years having transpired since the establishment of the paper, Richard, Baxter and DeMott purchased the concern of John Shepard, Benedict having abandoned the institution at the close of the year 1853 when DeMott retired and Richard & Baxter published the paper until December 13, 1855 when Baxter also retired, leaving it in the hands of and under the control of William Richard who managed the paper for about 11 years at a loss of $1500 over and above all receipts.

During this time Mr. Richard rented the concern one year to R. T. Stocking, two years to Messrs. Geo. and C. K. Spafford, one year to a Mr. Nimmocks and one year to a Mr. Castle. Finally, January 1st, 1866, he sold the establishment to Mr. C. M. Burlingame, the present proprietor.

Raisin Valley Record About September 20, 1867, Peter R. Adams Esq., purchased a new printing press and types and started in the village of Tecumseh a new weekly paper styled "The Raisin Valley Record," which he continued to edit and publish until the fall of 1867, when he sold the concern to Messrs. Geo. and C. K. Spafford who continued the paper and printing business generally for about one year, but failing of success, the press and appliances reverted to Mr. Adams who in October, 1868, sold it to Messrs. Chapin & Page, the present proprietors. This paper is now in more flourishing condition than ever before. It is the only Republican paper in Northern Lenawee and with its growing popularity and increasing patronage, will soon have a subscription list equal to that of any newspaper published in the county.

THEY THINK THUS

Various Tecumseh people have seen "Jack and the Beanstalk." Here are the opinion of a few. The cities in parenthesis indicate where they saw it.

Mrs. Fred Wood, (Detroit), "A bewitching fairy story, wonderfully told."

Mrs. Faron Anderson (Adrian) "A picture that I advise everyone to see exceptionally good."

F. B. Wood, "The setting was magnificent the acting by the children very fine."

Search has been made in the records for an instance where a city actually was built for children previous to the erection of the one in California for the making of the "Jack and the Beanstalk" picture for William Fox. There have been many things created for amusement and edification of children, but this appears to be the first time when a complete city — homes, churches stores, shops and schools—was constructed for the juveniles. The walled city in the Fox fantasy is therefore a distinct novelty for screen use.

Nothing Doing.

"I know who has the lost money," stated the visitor.

"Then why come to me?" demanded Sherlock Holmes.

"I want you to get it back for me."

"Who has it?"

"My wife has it."

"Watson, kindly show the gentleman out," responded the astute Sherlock with a yawn.

However, it had no oppressing effect on the ladies as they saw the funny side of the situation and tell the story with good effect.

There is little or nothing in the Highway fund to take care of the expense of clearing the roads at this time, so people will have to donate their labor and time. Shoulder your shovel, men, you are drafted.

Miss Anna Schreder was at her post in the Rosacrans store Monday morning, ready for the season's work. She has quite recovered her health and is feeling much better than before her operation.

Whatever short comings may appear in our paper today will have to be laid to the weather, owing to the railroad conditions we have no correspondence and business of all kinds has been effected.

Dr. Charles Waldron attended the Gleaners Convention in Kalamazoo last week. He was marooned in Jackson on his return trip until Monday forenoon. He has quite a story to tell of his adventures.

Mrs. M. V. Bangs of Oil City, Pa., a sister of the late Sam J. McClure, started for Michigan Saturday but owing to the blockade on the railroads was unable to proceed and returned to her home, sending a telegram announcing the impossibility of her coming for the funeral.

Guy Belding who was called to Macon last night by the death of Chas. Collins reports the condition of the road as almost impassable. He carried two lanterns one on the dash board of his sleigh and one with which he went ahead of the team to decide which way to go next. He said the trip was much worse than his trip to Tipton in the afternoon.

The Seniors to the number of twenty had a jolly session out at Frank Pratt's Friday night, as guests of Miss Esther Pratt. They played games and had a splendid lunch and got home before the terrible storm began. They vote that the best place ever to go and only await another invitation to go again. As the drifts are some 15 to 20 ft. high up toward Sand lake, Mr. Boyd could not come for them and they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Service.

Another bad fire occurred at Ridgeway, Saturday night, burning another family out of home. This time the misfortune befell Gordon Berry and family. About nine o'clock Mr. Berry found fire raging near the chimney in the chamber. The alarm was given over the telephone and it was not long before, a company of the men of the neighborhood were on hand, but the storm was raging so frightfully that they could do nothing but throw snow on the barn and other out buildings which they saved. Mrs. Berry who was ill, was carried to the home of Mr. Gray and the nine children cared for by other neighbors. Two of the little ones could not be found and the frantic father of course imagined they had been burned to death, but they were later found at the home of some good neighbor who had taken them in out of the cold.

Only a few articles of furniture were saved. The house, which belonged to Linna Pocklington, was insured but no insurance was carried on the contents.

Sunday afternoon there was a meeting of Ridgeway people at the Red Cross rooms to plan some relief for the [illegible]erent liberal people made fine donations of money, furniture and provisions and the Kelley house was rented for their occupancy. Neighbor women went Monday and made the house ready and the family will soon be together again. It pays to have good friends but those Ridgeway people sure have the best hearts as they have proved in these two fires during the past two weeks.

Mother (to Frank)—How is it that you're late home nearly every afternoon?

Frank—Well, no wonder; we've got such a big clock in our school.

Mother—Why, what has the clock to do with it?

Frank—'Cause it's so big it takes the hands an awful long time to get round it. If we had a clock like papa's little one I'd get home a great deal quicker.—Pearson's Weekly.

Reciprocity in Forbearance.

"Come go on a fishing party with us," urged a friend to a man prominently in the eye of the public.

"I don't want to go fishing," replied the other.

"Why not?" asked his friend.

"Why should I go fishing?" demanded the conscientious one. "The fish never did anything to me."

Little Pitchers.

"Pa, was that a Christmas present you brought home last night?"

"I didn't bring anything home last night, Tommy."

"Well, I heard Mr. Smith next door tell Mr. Jones as I was passing them on my way to school, that he saw you go in last night with a large-sized package."

One's Life Task.

"Let each one accept his task, a task which should fill his life. It may be very humble; it will not be the less useful. Never mind what it is so long as it exists and keeps you erect! When you have regulated it without excess—just the quantity you are able to accomplish each day—it will cause you to live in health and in joy.—Emile Zola.

Wagers.

A soldier boy from Clay county, now in training, wrote a letter to his sweetheart, and on the flap of the envelope he wrote these words:

"I'll bet a kiss you don't find this."

Whether or not the little fairy, love, whispered in the maiden's ear, telling her how to open the letter, remains a secret, but anyway she sent back this reply:

"I'll bet you this I found your kiss."—Indianapolis News.

HOTELS GOOD CUSTOMERS

How Big Hostelries Get Their Supplies of Eggs.

A method of selling—which, more than any other, perhaps, is the dream of the producer—is the trade with hotels, sanatoriums, and the like. Accordingly we made a visit to one of the largest and most exclusive hotels in New York city, says a writer in Farm and Fireside. We were conducted through the kitchens of this hotel, where evidence of management efficiency was plain everywhere. The steward later talked with us about their methods of purchasing eggs and poultry.

Both white and brown eggs are used by these high-class hotels. But for every use where the shell is exposed when the egg is placed on the table—as when boiled—the white-shelled eggs are used. For cooking and baking the brown-shelled eggs are used. About 600 dozen eggs a day are required by the hotel we visited, one-fourth of these being white. From 95 to 98 per cent of all eggs used are purchased from the producers, to whom two to five cents is paid above the highest market price quoted for nearby hennery whites or browns. The remaining 2 to 5 per cent are emergency orders, and are purchased from jobbers in the city or from retailers. The hotels are steady customers, keeping the same shippers for many years.

GARDEN SPACE MAY BE SAVED

How to Blanch Celery by Use of Paper Made for Purpose.

When the plan of banking with soil is used for blanching celery, the rows must be so wide apart as to waste much valuable land in small garden areas. But by using paper sold in rolls for the purpose, and which is treated to make it tough and moisture proof, much garden space and time may be saved, says a writer in Farm and Fireside.

Celery set with the intention of using paper for blanching need be only far enough between rows to allow convenient cultivation with wheel hoe, and two rows can be set not over six or eight inches apart, with spaces 15 to 18 inches on each side of the double rows. When ready for blanching, the paper can be quickly stretched each side of the double row. The roll is unwound along one side and back the opposite side of the double rows, thus requiring no cutting of the roll. While one person stretches the paper and holds it in place, another thrusts the long wire staples, made like narrow croquet arches, over the double rows to hold the paper snugly up in place.

If the right kind of paper can be procured and is carefully rolled and saved when the crop is harvested, it can be used several seasons.

WIT GAINED HER SITUATION

Willie Collier tells a story concerning a young actress friend of his who is fast coming to the front—a story which has a moral attached for ambitious stage aspirants.

It appears that the young lady in question, becoming stage-struck, devoted almost a whole year to pulling wires and using all possible influence in order to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager.

At last her hopes were realized; she got her appointment, and she was finally ushered into the manager's private office. He received her most cordially and offered her a chair.

"Thank you," she said gratefully, "I think I will sit down. I've been just ten months getting here and I'm a bit tired."

And the manager, who is really a great man with a keen sense of humor, promptly engaged her.

FROGS AND WHAT THEY EAT

The food of the frog consists of earthworms, insects, spiders and any form of animal life small enough to be seized and swallowed. Large frogs will often devour their smaller relatives. The big bullfrog is an especially dangerous enemy to other members of its kind. It has been known even to eat small birds. Some frogs are fond of snails and will swallow them shells and all, says Boy's Life.

It is interesting to note that frogs can eat bees and wasps notwithstanding the sting. In seizing food it usually makes use of its curious extensile tongue, which can be thrust out of the mouth with surprising rapidity. The tongue is attached to the front of the jaw, its forked rear end free so that it can be flipped out of the mouth. It is supplied with a sticky secretion that picks up the food. The frog cannot see an object near to itself. Any dangling bait should, therefore, be at a distance of from two to three feet.

Frogs may be caught by dangling small bits of red yarn before them on a hook and sometimes even without a hook. When the yarn is seized the animal may be jerked out of the water. Bullfrogs kept in captivity readily attempt to swallow one's fingers.

New Fiber Plant.

A New Costa Rican fiber plant has been developed through selection and cultivation by M. Peralta of San Jose, and is alleged to produce more and stronger fiber than henequen or sisal. A consular report states that the fiber is made into rope, twine, mats, bags, and even finer articles. The spineless leaf is 9 to 12 feet long, and each plant averages 30 leaves a year, yielding two pounds of fiber. With about 600 plants to the acre, cane, beans, potatoes, or corn can be grown on the same land. Full growth is reached in five years, but cuttings—two a year—may begin two years after planting the shoots.

Catty Comment.

Nell—I have a perfectly killing costume of electric blue.

Belle—Yes, with your complexion I should think the shock would be fatal.

Naturally.

"A seamen's strike is always serious, isn't it?"

"It must be, for vessels cannot start on their cruise when the crews will not first start on their vessels."

The Scrap Book

Puzzled Musician.

Sir Frederick Bridge, the veteran organist at Westminster Abbey, recently told a good story of a musical party he attended a short while ago.

"I could not make head nor tail of one piece of music that was being played," he said. "It sounded very abstruse, and, to me, quite incomprehensible for the most part, yet here and there I seemed to recognize a bar or two.

"Presently, consumed by curiosity, I leaned over and asked my hostess the name of the piece.

"She looked at me in surprise for some seconds; then said, somewhat stiffly, 'It's Bach's fugue in D minor, Sir Frederick.'

"'That it most certainly is not,' I thought, but I kept my opinion to myself.

"I found out later, however, on making an investigation, that the lady was right. Only the perforated music roll had been put in upside down, with the result that the piano had played the fugue backwards."

Wireless to Detect U-Boats.

To assist naval airmen in detecting the presence, and then determining the position of enemy submarines, a delicate instrument of considerable ingenuity has been produced, observes a writer. An adequate conception of its character is afforded without necessarily discussing its technical details, which for obvious reasons are withheld. Roughly, it consists of a compact buoy that carries a receiver which converts the sound waves from a submarine's propeller into electrical energy. When thrown overboard by an airman, it floats on the surface of the water. Upon the approach of a submarine within a certain radius of it, the antenna attached to the buoy sends out wireless signals which are in turn picked up by receiving instruments installed on the aircraft. The presence of a boat within this area is thus announced. Its general position in relation to the buoy, as well as its movements are indicated by the intensity of the signals.

Lightning Breaks Dish.

During a thunderstorm in New York state surprise and wonder was caused in a certain home by an unusual accident that accompanied a sharp bolt of lightning. The latter struck very close to the house in question, causing the telephone to "snap" so that those in the room heard it distinctly. Following this report a glass dish containing some steel beads, standing on a table about twelve feet from the telephone, broke into pieces, scattering the beads on the floor. The apparent explanation for the phenomenon is that when the lightning caused the spark at the telephone there was a discharge of electricity into the room and that the beads, being of polished steel with numerous sharp edges, offered a path of least resistance to the discharge, which, seeking a ground, burst the dish.

A Brussels Joke.

What amounted to a practical joke was played on the Germans by the Belgians in Brussels. The Germans announced a grand concert of German music at the opera house. A syndicate of Belgian bankers and brokers bought all the seats except one and the royal box. General Baron von Bissing was delighted at this evidence that the Belgians were not averse in times of foreign occupation to listen to a German concert. But on the night of the concert not a single Belgian used his ticket. When Von Bissing arrived at the opera house it was empty save for one solitary auditor, a German landsturm soldier.

Love.

If love were the only Heaven we shall know,
I could not ask a fairer Paradise.
Nor forth with sunny laughter gladlier go,
Beneath whatever dark or perfect skies.

For marble mansions of eternal light,
And golden streets and cities tourmaline,
With all their glossy beauty burning bright,
Have not the lure of love's immortal sheen.

And thus I toss the golden ladders down,
Turn from the gates, and take my way with thee,
Oh, Love, that makes a heaven of the town,
And brings the pale moon trembling o'er the sea.

—Folger McKinsey, in Baltimore Sun.

A Father's Ambition.

"I kind o' wish I was in the army," said Farmer Corntossel. "I'd like to be along in the company with my boy Josh."

"So as to cheer him up?"

"No. Josh is always cheerful. But I'd like to be a corporal or something, so that for once in my life I could make him stand around and do exactly as I tell him."

A Proxy.

"Glithersby is always talking about 'my soldier.'"

"So he is."

"I didn't know he had a son at the front."

"He hasn't. Glithersby sent his chauffeur and, just confidentially, I think he takes too much credit upon himself."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

TIMES AND PLACE FOR SLEEP

Churches and Street Cars Are Favored But the Cozy Bed Affords a Most Delightful Pastime.

There are lots of people who say they don't sleep well at night. But there are many who regularly go to sleep in the street car. Of course, those who go to sleep in church are not counted. That might be construed as libel, observes the Milwaukee News.

But why do perfectly healthy folks want to sleep in street cars? Is it a protest against the wistful-eyed straphanger who gazes at their large and apathetic laps? Is it mere whim, desiring to shut out the events of the day and snatch a quiet moment of dreaming as a respite?

It is often mere pie, just a rampant indigestion. It is also the bad air due to offices that devitalize the worker compelled to breathe it eight hours. It is also due to the terrible habit of shutting all available car windows in dread of that fresh air which is the best friend a workingman has.

Going to sleep is a delightful pastime—at night, in bed with the proper accompaniment of pillows and paraphernalia. It is exotic in the daytime, save as a mere relaxation for a few minutes after luncheon, which is a good habit, and seldom, therefore, followed.

BRITISH PEACE TERMS

The principles which were announced by Premier Lloyd-George, which may be taken as the attitude of the British empire on war aims and peace terms, may be summed up as follows:

GERMANY.

The entente is not fighting to disrupt the German nation or to dictate its form of government. The battle against Germany is made in self-defense to end the menace of junkerism and militarism. The German people themselves could bring peace at once by the adoption of a democratic government.

AUSTRIA AND THE BALKANS.

Unless genuine self-government is granted to those Austro-Hungarian nationalities who long have desired it, general peace cannot be assured. Justice must be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech. Serbia and Montenegro must be restored.

BELGIUM.

Belgium must be restored in full and reparation made for all damage.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

"We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand for the reconsideration of the wrong done in '71 when Alsace-Lorraine was torn away." All occupied French territory must be restored.

ITALIA IRREDENTA.

"We regard as vital the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue."

POLAND.

"An independent Poland comprising all the genuinely Polish elements who desire to participate, is an urgent necessity for the stability of western Europe."

RUSSIA.

The entente would be glad to fight side by side with the new Russia, but if the present rulers of Russia act independently, Russia must be saved by her own people.

TURKEY.

Britain would not deprive Turkey of its capital or of the lands in Thrace and Asia Minor, which are predominantly Turkish, but Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine are entitled to separate nationalities. The Dardanelles must be neutralized and internationalized.

GERMAN COLONIES.

They will be dealt with by a conference which must take primary regard to their native inhabitants and placed under an administration acceptable to them. All exploiting of these regions by European governments or capitalists must cease.

SEA OUTRAGES.

"There must be reparation for injuries in violation of international law. The peace conference must not forget our seamen and the services they have done."

MAKING A MAN OF THE BOY

Schoolmaster Has the Great Task in Hand, and on Him Depends the Final Important Outcome.

The sum of all admonitions is that the schoolboy must pay attention. That is precisely what he is doing, writes S. M. Crothers, in the Atlantic. He is paying attention to a variety of things that escape the adult mind. As he wriggles on the bench in the schoolroom he pays attention to all that is going on. He attends to what is going on out-of-doors; he sees the weak points of his fellow pupils against whom he is planning punitive expeditions; and he is delightfully conscious of the idiosyncrasies of the teacher. Moreover, he is a youthful artist and his sketches from life give acute joy to his contemporaries when they are furtively passed around.

But the schoolmaster says sternly: "My boy, you must learn to pay attention; that is to say, you must not pay attention to so many things, but you must pay attention to one thing, namely the second declension."

Now the second declension is the least interesting thing in the room, but unless he confines his attention to it he will never learn it. Education demands narrowing of attention in the interest of efficiency.

A man may, by dint of application to a particular subject, become a successful merchant or real estate man or chemist or overseer of the poor. But he cannot be all these things at the same time. He must make his choice. Having in the presence of witnesses taken himself for better or for worse, he must, forsaking all others, cleave to that alone. The consequence is that by the time he is forty he has become one kind of a man and is able to do one kind of work.

HAS CHURCH BUILT ON PIER

Ilfrancombe, England, Possesses Historic Edifice, Where the Sailors Offered Prayer Before Going to Sea.

Ilfrancombe, England, has a church on a pier, and is the only seaside place in the world that has such a distinction. Indeed, Ilfrancombe would not possess the honor were it not for the fact that Lanterin Hill forms a part of the pier. Those who argue about the matter are always silenced by the plea that you have to go on the the pier in order to enter the church, observes a writer.

The curious old building to be seen on the top of the hill has had many strange adventures. It is dedicated to St. Nicholas, the patron saint of seafaring folk, and in that connection it is interesting to learn that at one time the old church was used as a lighthouse. In bygone days the sailors used to trudge up the hill to pray before going to sea, and many were the regrets when the little edifice ceased to hold its services. It is now used by the pier authorities for storing purposes, but the day may come when it will be restored, and form one of many attractive "sights" Ilfrancombe already possesses.

Arrived Safely in France.

Two newspaper artists have been occupying a studio in Gramercy Park for five years. They came to New York together and were a sort of Damon and Pythias combination, says a New York correspondent.

One went into the naval reserves and the other tried for aviation but failed on account of his eyesight. The other week the sailor boy dropped in before breakfast. He said he was going out for a little cruise and the handclasp was a bit firmer than usual as he said good-by.

A few mornings ago the artist at home received this cablegram from France: "Arrived. Safe." His friend on the other side. And when I saw the artist at home he turned his head and shook some suspicious drops from his eyes. But he was mighty proud.

WHY

The Soldier Must Have An Emergency Ration

AMERICAN MEDICINE comments on the soldier's ration, and more particularly on the emergency ration of hardtack and sweet chocolate suggested by Doctor Vedder. It weighs only one pound, but gives the soldier the proper amount of food on which to carry on the work required of him. The writer says:

"The problem of rationing the soldier is of the utmost importance, not merely for the purpose of preserving his physical health, but of conserving his military effectiveness. Regardless of what the civil population subsists upon, the rationing of the soldier must not be reduced so as to curtail the food requirements.

"It oftentimes becomes necessary to send in advance scouting parties for whom adequate food supplies cannot be prepared to be carried by them. To meet such military exigencies an emergency ration is essential.

"As Vedder has pointed out in the Military Surgeon, an emergency ration must be balanced and possess a reasonable energy value and tissue-building power. Palatability must not be sacrificed. Its bulk must be minimal in order to prevent the ration from serving as a drag upon the soldier, already weighed down by his essential military appurtenances. The food must be of such a character that it will not readily deteriorate, while at the same time it must be cheap and readily purchasable.

"Vedder has suggested as an emergency ration ten ounces of hardtack and six ounces of sweet chocolate. The total weight of the ration is one pound, while it supplies approximately 2,100 calories, of which 180 calories arise from protein sources.

"A man resting in bed requires 1,800 calories per day to satisfy the normal heat and energy requirements of bodily function. According to Chittenden, on a low protein diet, 250 calories from protein are provided with a total of 2,854 calories for the 24 hours. The haversack ration as at present constituted supplies approximately 4,500 calories per day, with 460 calories arising from protein elements. This ration naturally provides the due and proper amount indicated for soldiers engaged in hard work.

"The emergency ration suggested is not liberal in character, and, in fact, materially reduces the total food required for the soldier, but this is merely for emergency purposes, and should not actually interfere to a great extent with the physical health of the consumer, provided that it is utilized merely in emergencies. It is patent that the bulk is not excessive, and that the foods suggested are cheap, generally available, palatable and resistant to deterioration."

The Scrap Book

Glass Eye Released Him.

An artificial optic so perfect that it bore critical examination of physicians, was responsible for its owner finally being discharged from the National army at Camp Travis, notes a San Antonio correspondent. The young man had been drafted from an Oklahoma town, and, appearing before the exemption board, passed the medical examination, and having otherwise qualified was accepted and came to Camp Travis for training with several thousand others from his state.

He had been enlisted and was working when the recruits were given a color test by the army doctors. When a blind was put over the good eye the owner of the perfect glass optic could not distinguish red from white, and the deception was discovered. Physically the owner of the false eye was otherwise built for a soldier, but this one blemish was sufficient to cause his release and he was sent home.

Pigeons' Mistakes.

Carrier pigeons have extensive use in the present war, despite the competition of the wireless, the telephone, the heliograph and the "wig-wagger." But the old superstition that the birds have an infallible sense of direction is pretty well upset. "We frequently have birds blunder back to us with their messages intact," remarked a French officer. "The noise and confusion of battle or the tremendous smoke pall that overhangs the battle lines for days seem to confuse them in some fashion. Frequently they will circle around for five or ten minutes before determining their proper direction. About 80 per cent of the birds achieve their objective. The rest are listed as 'missing.' They are probably prey to the hawks that have not ceased their depredations, despite the patriotic purpose of their victims."

Find Relics of Saxon Kings.

Capt. Vaughan Williams of Old Windsor has discovered what he believes to be the site of the palace of the Saxon kings and the pre-conquest town of Windsor. It is believed that there once stood at Old Windsor the palace of Edward the Confessor, but although several Saxon urns have been excavated here from time to time the actual position of the palace has never been decided.

Tighe and Davis, in their "Annals of Windsor," say that Old Windsor was probably selected by the Saxon kings as a residence for the same reason as it was subsequently repurchased by William the Conqueror, on account of its convenience for hunting in the forest. The lands of Windsor, granted by Edward the Confessor and exchanged by the abbot of Westminster with William, appear to have had reference to Old Windsor, and did not include the site of the present town or castle. King William held Old Windsor as his own demesne.

Troops Defy Tropical Heat.

Recent experiments by the British government in India with ultra-violet rays, says the Electrical Experimenter, are interesting, not only to army men but to scientists. In the experiments an under officer of the English army was completely clothed in garments which had been previously treated to withstand the ultra-violet rays. It was found that he was able to stay in the sun of midsummer for hours without feeling disturbance or inconvenience in any way. Upon this and other experiments the English government has adopted this method for the protection of its Indian troops against the ravages of tropical sunlight.

SUICIDE SHOWS CAPTAIN SLAYER

Officer Ends Life After Killing Four With an Ax at Camp Funston Bank.

NOTE TELLS OF INTENTION

Kearney Wornall of Kansas City, Who Was Injured, Identifies Whisler as Murderer—Sought $476,000.

Camp Funston, Kan., Jan. 15.—With the finding of the body of Capt. Lewis R. Whisler of Salina, Kan., in his tiny office at the National army cantonment here, the last chapter was written in the story of the looting of the army bank and the subsequent murder of four men and serious wounding of a fifth. The murders were committed with a hand ax.

Captain Whisler killed himself, firing two shots from a regulation army service rifle into his head. The first bullet glanced downward through one cheek, but the other went true and lodged in his brain. The suicide followed a general order from headquarters instructing all captains at the cantonment to report and have their finger prints taken.

Note Tells of Intention.

A note was left by the army officer addressed to a woman whose name the authorities so far have declined to divulge. The note said:

"I have been thinking of committing suicide for a long time, but I never have had a good reason. Yesterday I went out and made myself a reason."

The room in which Captain Whisler's body was found was smeared with blood spots. Where he had washed himself apparently after the murders there was much blood.

Captain Whisler borrowed four hatchets from a supply company, according to officials.

The suicide was the climax of a day of investigation by the army authorities, who were confident as the day progressed that the murderer had not left the reservation and that his detection was assured. Their most definite information was furnished by Kearney Wornall of Kansas City, the fifth man attacked by the robber and whose condition was said to be serious.

Wornall, who recovered consciousness, told the authorities that the murderer was an army captain, whose face he recognized.

Wornall identified Captain Whisler as the man who committed the murders, it was announced by army officials, who said that his identification would be taken as conclusive, and that the case would be regarded as closed.

Tells of Murders.

Wornall, in describing the murders, said a man came to the door of the bank about 8:30 o'clock at night and rapped insistently. He was admitted and, covering the five men with his revolver, forced Wornall to tie the hands of the four men, after which he tied Wornall's hands. The man then proceeded to loot the bank safe, and had reached the door, when Winters said to Wornall:

"You recognize him, don't you?"

Wornall answered that he did.

The murderer turned to Winters and said:

"You know me, do you?"

"I sure do, you black scoundrel," was Winters' reply.

Wornall says at this point the man hesitated, and then suddenly leaped at them, swinging his hand ax. He struck the helpless men down, one by one.

The murders were accomplished by means of a hand ax.

NAVY ORDNANCE BUREAU O. K.

Congressional Investigators Express Their Full Satisfaction After Thorough Quiz.

CONFISCATE HARDEN'S PAPER

Amsterdam, Jan. 15.—The issue of Dr. Maximilian Harden's progressive newspaper, Die Zukunft, which contained an article praising President Wilson's war aims speech and declaring that "the road to peace lies through Washington," has been confiscated by the German government, said a dispatch from Berlin.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

All officers have been instructed to familiarize themselves with the metric system of weights and measures, which is standard in Europe. Gun sights, it is ordered, shall hereafter be graduated by the metric system.

Because somebody blundered each company in camp was forced to accept nearly a half ton of onions for its mess. As that quantity will last about a year, Custer has vast quantities of onions for sale.

Owing to the fact that a number of enlisted men have made a practice of writing for publication for pay, despite army regulations to the contrary, orders have been issued which strictly forbid a continuance of the practice. Even letters which are intended for publication must hereafter be submitted to the division censor.

RUSSIANS REJECT JUNKERS' TERMS

Correspondents of the London Newspapers Say Indications Point to Final Rupture.

TURKEY BREAKS ARMISTICE?

Dispatch From Kuban Says That Turks Landed 20,000 Troops From Black Sea Transports Near Trebizond—Fighting in Armenia.

London, Jan. 15.—Efforts by the German envoys at Brest-Litovsk to impose militaristic peace terms upon Russia threatened to bring the negotiations to an end.

The Turks, whose terms were rejected by the Bolsheviki delegates, are reported to have broken the armistice on the Armenian front, and fighting is believed to have been resumed there.

A dispatch from Kuban said that the Turks had landed 20,000 troops from Black sea transports near Trebizond, and that a submarine which was with the transports had sunk a big Russian transport. Both acts were in direct violation of the terms of the armistice.

A report was in circulation at Petrograd that the parley might be removed from Brest-Litovsk to Warsaw, but there was no official confirmation from the Bolsheviki or German governments at the time this dispatch was written.

Final Rupture Near.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily News takes the attitude that the negotiations will be broken off. A cablegram from this writer, published in the Daily News, said:

"The final rupture of the Russo-German peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk may be expected at any hour. It is now apparent that the German militarists continue to impose their policy upon their delegates, and if this is kept up it probably will end the conference."

No matter what fate awaits the peace negotiations, Russia has finished her role as an active power in the war, according to Sir George Buchanan, the retiring British ambassador, at Petrograd.

Sir George has reached Stockholm on his way to London, and a dispatch from that city quoted him as saying:

Cannot Overthrow Bolsheviki.

"The Bolsheviki government has attained such a position that there is little likelihood of its being overthrown, although it cannot be regarded as representative of all Russia.

"The constituent assembly has been summoned, but in my opinion the Soviet (Bolsheviki) will still be the real holders of power. Trotzky, the foreign minister, is trying hard for a separate peace, but at the same time he is fighting the Germans with their own weapons."

Austrian newspapers are now taking the attitude that Russia, being split up into small states, will be soon as full of danger as the Balkans. Racial hatred between the Balkan states is held by some to be one of the contributing causes of the world war.

MEAT QUIZ ON AT ST. PAUL

Federal Commissioners Arrive in Spite of Rail Delays—Heney Last to Get In.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 15.—The federal trade commission's inquiry into the meat industry of St. Paul was begun here, despite delayed trains, which made it appear for a time as if the investigation would have to be postponed for a second time. Joseph Davies, the member of the commission who will preside, reached here after a hard journey from Chicago by way of Ashland, Wis. N. M. Barrett, an investigator for the commission, received a telegram from F. J. Heney, special investigator, saying that he had left Chicago and would arrive in St. Paul in time to begin the investigation.

MUST BE TREATED WHEN ILL

Soldiers Refusing Medical Attention Will Be Punished, Says Army Orders.

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 15.—Select men at Camp Custer cantonment who refused to submit to operations or medical treatment when injured or ill will face court-martial. This troublesome subject has been cleared by specific orders from the war department at Washington. Notices have been posted in the various barracks.

Men who decline to receive medical attention when commanding officers believe treatment is necessary will be examined by a board of three surgeons. If the board finds that medical treatment is imperative the patient must submit or be tried by court-martial.

TO CURTAIL MANY INDUSTRIES

Work Not Essential to the Prosecution of the War Affected by Order.

Washington, Jan. 15.—All industries not essential to the prosecution of the war are to be temporarily curtailed. Fuel Administrator Garfield is at work drawing up one of the most drastic orders that has yet gone into effect.

An anonymous letter has been received by the Manistee draft board threatening assassination of two members unless they resign. Federal officials are investigating.

Quarantine for smallpox has been lifted from the home of Mrs. Chauncey Potts, of Muskegon Heights. During quarantine twins were born to Mrs. Potts. The father died a few weeks ago.

The Tuscola County Farmers Telephone Co. has asked the state railroad commission for permission to increase its rental rates on all telephones $1 a year because of advancing costs.

FIGHTING SOLON, GARDNER, IS DEAD

CONGRESSMAN, PREPAREDNESS LEADER, SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA.

WAS ILL ONLY A FEW DAYS

Resigned Seat in House Soon After Outbreak of War to Accept Commission in Army.

Macon, Ga.—Major Augustus Peabody Gardner, of the One Hundred and Twenty-first (Second Georgia) infantry, for many years congressman from the Sixth Massachusetts district, died in the base hospital in Camp Wheeler last Monday of pneumonia. He had been ill only a few days.

When Major Gardner resigned his seat in congress soon after the outbreak of the war to offer his services in the nation's fighting forces, he was commissioned a colonel and assigned to staff duty, but several weeks ago he applied to the war department for a place in the line with reduction in rank so that he might see actual service among the men.

His request for an appointment as major in the One Hundred and Twenty-first infantry was granted. Before being given that assignment Major Gardner was adjutant of the Thirty-first (Dixie) division in Camp Wheeler.

MAJOR AUGUSTUS P. GARDNER.

Major Gardner was a veteran of the Spanish-American war and was the pioneer advocate of preparedness in congress.

Mr. Gardner was in England when the European war broke out in 1914, and volunteered his services to the embassy in London to look after Americans.

Death Stirs Congress.

Washington—Aroused by the death of pneumonia of Major Augustus P. Gardner, formerly one of their number, members of the house Tuesday agitated congressional investigation of camp and hospital conditions, not only in Camp Wheeler, where the former congressman died, but generally throughout the country.

COAL SHIPMENTS ARE STALLED

Blizzard Ties Up Relief Shipments, Conditions Serious.

Lansing.—Cautioning everybody to refrain from becoming "panicky," State Fuel Administrator Prudden Monday announced that fuel conditions were worse than ever in Michigan. In addition, there is very little relief in sight. Coal in plenty is on the rails on its way here, but is storm-bound.

Word from Flint Tuesday was that everything, industrial plants included, had been shut down there because of shortage of coal. People in the homes were suffering and the little coal available was being used to tide them over.

From Plymouth on the east and from almost every city and small town in the central and western part of the state came urgent calls for help. Wherever the storm had left a telephone or telegraph wire up there seemed to be somebody crying for coal.

From West Virginia mines which are now supposed to be turning all of their output over to Michigan and Ohio under the combined priority order of Messrs. Garfield and McAdoo, came word of a shortage of cars.

EPLER CASE TO CIRCUIT COURT

Three Suspects in Alma Murder Trial Bound Over Without Bail.

Ithaca, Mich.—The Epler murder hearings, the most sensational in the history of crime in Gratiot county, closed Monday and as a result Albert Eichorn, of Ithaca; John Brennan, of Flint, and Mrs. Inez Johnson, of Alma, were bound over without bail for appearance at the February term of court to answer the charge of first degree murder in connection with the killing of Bernice Epler, 17 years old in Alma, September 4.

Mrs. Patrick Walsh, of Sault Ste. Marie, was seriously burned when an oil stove with which she was heating her bedroom exploded.

Names of 200 high school boys have been furnished Port Huron pool room proprietors who have been ordered to deny them admission.

Rev. W. H. Bishop, Baptist clergyman of Flint, has enlisted as a private in the Canadian army. He expects later to take up work with the chaplains.

John Brink, of Alma, 35 years old, decorator and painter, is dead after falling from a ladder and fracturing his neck. He slipped on a piece of ice.

Sweeping authority was given by the state fuel administrator to the mayor of Flint to tap coal piles in anybody's cellar and use what he wanted to relieve suffering.

COUNTY LEADERS ARE NAMED

Food Adm'r. Prescott and Dean White of M. A. C. Complete Follow up Organization.

State Wide Drive to Enlist Every Family in Hoover Pledge Card Campaign

Mrs. J. D. Shull Chairman for Lenawee County.

(Special to the Herald)

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 14—Upon his return from the national capital today Food Administrator George A. Prescott directed his assistants to speed up the preparations for the Follow Up food pledge card campaign which drive will be made within the next month, probably the first week in February. Dean Georgia L. White of the M. A. C., who will be in direct charge has nearly completed her organization for the handling of this important work. Some of the best known women leaders in Michigan have accepted county chairmanships for this drive which is expected to clean up all the territory overlooked during the initial canvass made last October.

Mrs. J. D. Shull has accepted the chairmanship for Lenawee county and will take charge of the drive.

Prescott Talks of New Food Cards.

"In order that the housewives may know the facts the U. S. Food Administration will issue shortly a new home card carrying a message from Herbert Hoover that puts the situation squarely before the members of the Administration. They are thus taken into the confidence of Mr. Hoover, which is their due as a member," said Mr. Prescott.

"He is not offering advice, but giving the facts of the food situation, believing our women have the courage to face the truth and adjust their household to new war sacrifices. The message gives the cold plain facts the direction on the old food card and the new directions tells us what to do. The new card asks for a porkless Saturday a wheatless meal each day, as well as wheatless Wednesday, a meatless meal each day as well as meatless Tuesday and a reduction of sugar to a monthly allowance of three pounds per person.

"Uncle Sam is today the quarter master of a hungry world. He is playing the game squarely and counts on us to do the same. The American people cannot expect more than their share of the food supply which for 1918 does not measure up to expectations. It is now time for every American to get these facts by heart, and make a frontal attack on the situation.

"More than ten million families have pledged themselves to help make the food go around—this pledge, unless we interpret patriotism as mere lip loyality and sincere affectation, is a pledge to service as real as that of the soldier. The pledge card is not a mere scrap of paper, but the pledge of the American women to stand by the declaration of war."

Complying with the sweeping order issued by National Fuel Administrator Garfield, all of our local manufacturing plants closed down this morning and will remain closed for the five days peroid stated in his order, they will also close down each Monday for the next ten weeks, unless the order is revoked during that time, comforming with the terms of the order.

Each Monday has been declared a holliday and all business houses must remain closed. Some of the exceptions are given below:

All factories east of the Mississippi river working on war contracts and those manufacturing perishable goods.

Railroads, householders, hospitals, charitable institutions, army and navy cantonments, public utilities, strictly government enterprises, public buildings and food manufacturies.

Stores which can operate without the use of coal for heating purposes may remain open. Grocery stores are not affected by the order as they handle perishable goods.

This order covers all territory east of the Mississippi river and the next ten Mondays will be virtual holidays when all industries and amusements must close. The order is compulsory and carries a fine of $5,000 or one year's imprisonment for violation. It will be enforced by state fuel administrators.

The scarcity of fuel combined with congestion of shipments, due to the recent storms, forced the fuel administration to take this sudden and far-reaching step.

This order coming from Fuel Administrator Garfield does not in any way effect the order issued by State Fuel Administrator Prudden. His order will also stand and will be enforced.

Protests are flooding Washington from every quarter on the grounds that the closing down of our industries, which are employing thousands of men and women will throw them out of employment and thus cut their earning power also that it will greatly hinder the work of production as most factories are struggling to keep pace with the orders on hand to fill.

It looks like a question of "After the horses are stolen, the door is locked." Without doubt the conditions throughout the country warrant the sweeping orders that have been issued, but never the less the horses have been stolen and our Fuel Department is now trying to lock the doors.

The conditions which the American people now and have been forced to submit to this winter are no more or less than a tragedy. They have been deceived, robbed and held up. No professional robber could have done a better job and what has been done by our Fuel Adminstrators to bring these robbers to justice?

A grocery man has a supply of provisions on hand to take care of the wants of his trade. He knows what that demand is and is able to plan ahead. He orders and buys enough to keep his stock always up to the demands made upon him. Of course there comes a time when provisions are scarce and he is unable to get a stock sufficient to meet the needs, but in most cases the public are supplied with everything they require.

The coal operators last summer knew how much coal was needed to supply the country this present winter, they know that coal must be shipped to the dealers all over the country, during the summer months so that the bins of the people could be filled. Well was that coal shipped and how about the bins of the people?

There was no shortage in their supply of coal, it lay in the ground ready to be dug out and we believe huge quantities of it were already at the surface, piled up at the mines.

The coal operators knew also how much coal was needed to fill Government contracts and must have known how much coal they should brng to the surface and load on cars for delivery.

Why was it shipped [illegible] anada and to the Northwest via [illegible] the lakes at the expense of the Eastern and Central States? We were told that when navigation closed shipments would be diverted and plenty of coal could be on hand for the people's needs. Well how about it?

There may be some ground for the excuse that railroads were unable to care for the coal traffic but this condition could and ought to have been anticipated months ago.

It certainly looks to us as if the Fuel Administration has been asleep on the job. One of the reasons why England is a great power in the present war is because she has learned that she must have experts to run the different heads of her Government departments. She has learned her lesson, turned out the politician and put in business men, men trained for the work they are called upon to do and she has been able to accomplish the maximum of efficiency.

Our Government it would seem has that yet to learn especially in regard to the department handling fuel.

The men who are responsible for this fuel shortage are traitors to their country, are unpatriotic and should be brought to justice, just as much as a German spy who has been caught in the act of spying.

In America the people are the Government and our law makers are the servants. When the people get their eyes open in regard to these abuses and acts of disloyalty there may be a bunch of public men dancing the can-can. At least, they ought to be made to dance. There is no question about the American people in regard to their loyalty, they are standing back of this government and are ready to sacrifice in every way possible that we may win this war, but they are entitled to the necessities of life such as sufficient clothing, enough food to eat and fuel to keep from freezing.

When slack coal worth from $1.00 to $1.50 per ton is sold to the people at a price anywhere from $8.00 to $10.00 per ton and steam coal which has always sold at from $3.00 to $3.50 per ton is sold for the same figure anyone with an ounce of brains can readily see that robbers have been having a hand in the coal business. The public have been willing to pay the price because they have been forced to pay it or go without, but it is like taking a dose of castor oil, they don't like the taste of it but take it because they must.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage (whereby the power of sale therein contained has become operative, and on installment of interest upon the debt thereby secured yet remaining unpaid for more than the period of thirty days, by virtue of the terms of said mortgage, I hereby declare the entire amount of said indebtedness to be forthwith due and payable), dated the 9th day of March, A. D. 1912, executed and delivered by Mary E. Herbison, Charles J. Richardson and Ollie H. Richardson to the undersigned, John Jones; and which mortgage was duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1912, in Liber 189 of Mortgages, on page 354; and there being claimed to be due at the date hereof, upon the indebtedness secured by such mortgage, the sum of six thousand four hundred forty-nine and 03-100 ($6449.03) dollars; and no proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted for the collection of said indebtedness or the enforcement of said mortgage security;

Notice is therefore hereby given that, for the purpose of realizing the moneys so claimed to be due, and interest thereon to accrue, and costs of this proceeding (including a lawful attorney fee), I will, on the 16th day of April, A. D. 1918, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the east front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan (that being the place where the Circuit Court for said County of Lenawee is holden), sell, at public vendue, to the highest bidder, all that parcel of land situate in the Township of Franklin, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, described as follows, to-wit: The northeast quarter of section twenty-three, Town five south, Range three east, excepting the east sixty acres thereof, containing [illegible] so to be sold one hundred acres more or less.

PLENTY OF COAL IN MICHIGAN MINES

60,000,000 TONS UNTOUCHED

Veins However Are Thin and Cannot Operate Profitably In Competition With Richer Coal Fields.

Lansing—With an undeveloped coal supply sufficient to last the state 40 years at the present rate of consumption, Michigan is suffering from an acute fuel famine. Schools, churches and factories all over the state are closed yet more than 60,000,000 tons of coal are lying untouched under the central portion of the lower peninsula.

Despite her vast deposits of coal Michigan has never produced any considerable portion of the coal she annually consumes. This has been due to the fact that the veins are too thin to be operated profitably in open competition with the richer mines of other states.

The cost of production here has been practically twice that in Ohio and Pennsylvania mines, according to the reports of the state geologist.

The danger that federal control of mines and coal shipments might be renounced at the close of the war has prevented private interests from undertaking extended operations in the undeveloped region, but a guarantee of continued protection might result in early action by mining interests.

Only three out of the several hundred boys at the Saginaw high school volunteered to enter a military training course which the board of education offered to establish under the act of the last legislature requiring such a course where 25 or more boys desire it.

Charlevoix has just lost the last link of the pioneer lumbering industries with the junking of the Charlevoix Lumber company mill, and the shipping of the machinery to Grand Rapids. The mill was erected in 1870 and has been in almost constant operation.

A quarantine has been raised against all cattle entering Michigan from New York state by the state live stock and sanitary commission. New York cattle are now suffering from tuberculosis. The quarantine order requires all New York cattle to be held 60 days before entering this state.

GUSTS FROM THE BLIZZARD

Unusual Happenings Reported From Several Sections.

Lansing—Many unusual incidents, occasioned by the recent blizzard which swept the state, have come to light.

At Monroe, a Michigan Central train was stalled for 23 hours as a result of the Engine freezing to the tracks at the watertank. It finally proceeded on its way with the aid of a snow plow and three locomotives.

A party of 24 high school students from Adrian were marooned for two days in a farm house, the roads being impassable.

Two sleighing parties, comprised of 50 young people, mostly employes of the Michigan Railway company, were snow bound for several days at a farm house near Minard Mills, Jackson county.

"The most careful and obliging barber I know," relates a friend, "works at—" (We hate to omit the name of the shop, but the rules against free advertising are strict.) "The other day I decided to have my mustache shaved off. I told the barber, and he started in on it. When he had shaved one side off, he wiped my face carefully and straightened me up in the chair.

"What's this for?" I said. "Aren't you going to finish the job?"

"'Sure, if you like,' said he. 'But I didn't want to go any further till you looked at yourself and saw how you liked it.'

"I told him to go ahead—it looked fine."

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK"—WILLIAM FOX PRODUCTION.

FACTS ABOUT THE SENIORS' PLAY

The huge spectacular production was eight months in the making amidst the vast reaches of the California mountains and forests, and in Old and New Mexico and Hawaii. It cost over $500,000.

Over 1300 children, boys and girls, took part in the Fairy Village, as villagers and King's retainers. It is the most wonderful aggregation of juvenile performers ever gathered together before in any motion picture. The average age of the children is five years.

Special trains were run from Los Angeles to a point 50 miles away, in the mountains, every day for many weeks, carrying the child performers.

J. M. Tarver, who plays the "Giant," is the biggest man in the world. He is eight feet six inches high, and weighs proportionately. When he was carried across the continent to California, a large box car was made over especially for his traveling home. A special bed was prepared for him, and he had a special staff of chefs and valets.

The Giant is so big he frightened and the Beanstalk" practically destroys an entire village by the simple expedient of overturning the houses by a push of his hand.

The Giant is so big he frghtened the child performers and he had to tell them fairy tales of giants and pigmies to get their confidence.

Special sets of scenery, far apart in proportion, had to be made for the new production. A bed scarcely four feet long, chairs about a foot high, with tiny tables, were made for the kiddies. The "Giant's" table is five feet high, and his chair requires a step-ladder to enable the juveniles to reach the seat.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" is the biggest and most stupendous picture spectacle of modern times. It will be shown by the Seniors of our High School at the New Royal next Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 21 and 22. If you have not already bought your tickets of them, do so by all means. This will be a much talked of picture and you will want to know about it with all the rest. The Seniors deserve your suppor; give it to them. adv

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS OF THE PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

Contrary reports notwithstanding practically every subscriber to the Patriotic League in Tecumseh Township has been paying promptly. The Red Cros ladies of the county, and most of the money goes for supplies for them, have been working faster than the men have been pledging money.

As a result, the Patriotic League finds the treasury short of funds to keep the Red Cross in supplies for many women workers, a good many of whom are right in our own town.

As far as pledging funds for the Patriotic League, Tecumseh, as usual has gone "Over the Top." We were assessed $9,100.00. We have pledged over $11,000.00. Up to date, we have paid over to the treasurer of the County considerable over $3,000.

If you do not happen to be paid up to date, will you please attend to the payment at once. Your pledge card is either at the Lilley State Bank or Tecumseh State Savings Gank.

Ifyou are paid up to date and convenienlty can pay more on your pledge at this time, it would help and would be appreciated.

The effect was quite laughable.

HISTORICAL DAY AT MONDAY CLUB

At the next meeting of the Monday Club January 21st Mrs Marie B. Ferrey of Lansing, our state librarian and curator, will address the club. Her talk will be illustrated by six young ladies in costume suitable to different historical periods, who will sing, recite and dance the minuet

This is a social day of the club but at the request of Mrs Ferrey, an open invitation is extended to all who may care to come, especially to teachers and High School pupils. If time permits Mrs Ferrey will speak in the different schools.

Those who braved the inclement weather last Monday were rewarded by an exceptionally interesting program. Mrs. Alfred James told the sad history of the Jew in Russia, which was most suitably followed by the story of Zangwill's "The Melting Pot" by Miss Marian Rosacrans.

Mrs. Dualne Service reported a total to date of $175 from Red Cross seals, $65.00 of this was sold in Tecumseh Clinton and Hudson had not as yet reported.

A letter was read from the Michigan Children's Home society, thanking the club for the box of new clothing sent before Christmas. This box contained six pairs of 4 year-old rompers, seven baby dresses, two night gowns and new underwear for boys of ten years.

The club feels proud of its charitable record for the year.

Mother (to Frank)—How is it tha you're late home nearly every afternoon?

Frank—Well, no wonder; we've got such a big clock in our school.

Mother—Why, what has the clock to do with it?

Frank—'Cause it's so big it takes the hands an awful long time to get round it. If we had a clock like papa's little one I'd get home a great deal quicker.—Pearson's Weekly.

Reciprocity in Forbearance.

"Come go on a fishing party with us," urged a friend to a man prominently in the eye of the public.

"I don't want to go fishing," replied the other.

"Why not?" asked his friend.

"Why should I go fishing?" demanded the conscientious one. "The fish never did anything to me."

Little Pitchers.

"Pa, was that a Christmas present you brought home last night?"

"I didn't bring anything home last night, Tommy."

"Well, I heard Mr. Smith next door tell Mr. Jones as I was passing them on my way to school, that he saw you go in last night with a large-sized package."

One's Life Task.

"Let each one accept his task, a task which should fill his life. It may be very humble; it will not be the less useful. Never mind what it is so long as it exists and keeps you erect! When you have regulated it without excess—just the quantity you are able to accomplish each day—it will cause you to live in health and in joy.—Emile Zola.

Allies Agree on Terms

"There is no confusion of counsel among the adversaries of the central powers, no uncertainty of principle, no vagueness of detail. The only secrecy of counsel, the only lack of fearless frankness, the only failure to make definite statements of the objects of the war, lies with Germany and her allies. The issues of life and death hang upon these definitions."

"It will be our wish and purpose that the processes of peace, when they are begun, shall be absolutely open and that they shall involve henceforth no secret undertakings of any kind

Day of Conquest Past

"The day of conquest and aggrandizement is gone by; so is also the day of secret covenants entered into in the interest of particular governments and likely at some unlooked-for moment to upset the peace of the world.

Loving a Child.

Loving a child is key
To Heaven's mystery.
Loving a child, and giving
It knowledge this is living.
Loving a child brings pain,
And is life's greatest gain.

Loving a child is knowing
The fierce joy of a sowing
That shall cause mighty reaping.
Loving a child is weeping,
And fearing, too, and praying;
This, there is no gainsaying.

Loving a child is being
A part of God, and seeing
The world beneath one's hand
Enlarge, expand,
Be different, and grow
To one's thought. Even so.

Loving a child is key
To every mystery.
Loving a child is laughter
And heartache after.
—Heartache and grief and pain
But always joy again.

Nothing Doing.

"I know who has the lost money," stated the visitor.

"I want you to get it back for me."

"Who has it?"

"My wife has it."

"Watson, kindly show the gentleman out," responded the astute Sherlock with a yawn.

Why Girl Messengers Are Failures.

With one or two exceptions, girls who have tried lately to replace messenger boys in New York have failed. Too much walking, too many display windows and the inability to stand the gibes of messengers of the other sex, and dislike of a uniform are the stumbling blocks which have thinned the ranks. Because of a dearth of boys due to school starting and calls to "higher up" jobs, the telegraph companies advertised for girls. They wanted "girls over 16 for light work, steady employment." Many girls who didn't know what they were getting into answered. One office was able to persuade three to go to work, and another got five. After the first day there was one girl left in each office. Too much time lost looking into windows, the strain of walking all day and the taunts of boys working with them took the others. The employers of girl messengers are not discouraged, however, and believe by elimination they may finally get a good working force.

WIT GAINED HER SITUATION

Willie Collier tells a story concerning a young actress friend of his who is fast coming to the front—a story which has a moral attached for ambitious stage aspirants.

It appears that the young lady in question, becoming stage-struck, devoted almost a whole year to pulling wires and using all possible influence in order to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager.

At last her hopes were realized; she got her appointment, and she was finally ushered into the manager's private office. He received her most cordially and offered her a chair.

"Thank you," she said gratefully, "I think I will sit down. I've been just ten months getting here and I'm a bit tired."

And the manager, who is really a great man with a keen sense of humor, promptly engaged her.

GARDEN SPACE MAY BE SAVED

How to Blanch Celery by Use of Paper Made for Purpose.

When the plan of banking with soil is used for blanching celery, the rows must be so wide apart as to waste much valuable land in small garden areas. But by using paper sold in rolls for the purpose, and which is treated to make it tough and moisture proof, much garden space and time may be saved, says a writer in Farm and Fireside.

Celery set with the intention of using paper for blanching need be only far enough between rows to allow convenient cultivation with wheel hoe, and two rows can be set not over six or eight inches apart, with spaces 15 to 18 inches on each side of the double rows. When ready for blanching, the paper can be quickly stretched each side of the double row. The roll is unwound along one side and back the opposite side of the double rows, thus requiring no cutting of the roll. While one person stretches the paper and holds it in place, another thrusts the long wire staples, made like narrow croquet arches, over the double rows to hold the paper snugly up in place.

If the right kind of paper can be procured and is carefully rolled and saved when the crop is harvested, it can be used several seasons.

FROGS AND WHAT THEY EAT

The food of the frog consists of earthworms, insects, spiders and any form of animal life small enough to be seized and swallowed. Large frogs will often devour their smaller relatives. The big bullfrog is an especially dangerous enemy to other members of its kind. It has been known even to eat small birds. Some frogs are fond of snails and will swallow them shells and all, says Boy's Life.

It is interesting to note that frogs can eat bees and wasps notwithstanding the sting. In seizing food it usually makes use of its curious extensile tongue, which can be thrust out of the mouth with surprising rapidity. The tongue is attached to the front of the jaw, its forked rear end free so that it can be flipped out of the mouth. It is supplied with a sticky secretion that picks up the food. The frog cannot see an object near to itself. Any dangling bait should, therefore, be at a distance of from two to three feet.

Frogs may be caught by dangling small bits of red yarn before them on a hook and sometimes even without a hook. When the yarn is seized the animal may be jerked out of the water. Bullfrogs kept in captivity readily attempt to swallow one's fingers.

New Fiber Plant.

A New Costa Rican fiber plant has been developed through selection and cultivation by M. Peralta of San Jose, and is alleged to produce more and stronger fiber than henequen or sisal. A consular report states that the fiber is made into rope, twine, mats, bags, and even finer articles. The spineless leaf is 9 to 12 feet long, and each plant averages 30 leaves a year, yielding two pounds of fiber. With about 600 plants to the acre, cane, beans, potatoes, or corn can be grown on the same land. Full growth is reached in five years, but cuttings--two a year--may begin two years after planting the shoots.

Wagers.

A soldier boy from Clay county, now in training, wrote a letter to his sweetheart, and on the flap of the envelope he wrote these words:

"I'll bet a kiss you don't find this."

Whether or not the little fairy, love, whispered in the maiden's ear, telling her how to open the letter, remains a secret, but anyway she sent back this reply:

"I'll bet you this I found your kiss."

HOTELS GOOD CUSTOMERS

How Big Hostelries Get Their Supplies of Eggs.

A method of selling—which, more than any other, perhaps, is the dream of the producer—is the trade with hotels, sanatoriums, and the like. Accordingly we made a visit to one of the largest and most exclusive hotels in New York city, says a writer in Farm and Fireside. We were conducted through the kitchens of this hotel, where evidence of management efficiency was plain everywhere. The steward later talked with us about their methods of purchasing eggs and poultry.

Both white and brown eggs are used by these high-class hotels. But for every use where the shell is exposed when the egg is placed on the table—as when boiled—the white-shelled eggs are used. For cooking and baking the brown-shelled eggs are used. About 600 dozen eggs a day are required by the hotel we visited, one-fourth of these being white. From 95 to 98 per cent of all eggs used are purchased from the producers, to whom two to five cents is paid above the highest market price quoted for nearby hennery whites or browns. The remaining 2 to 5 per cent are emergency orders, and are purchased from jobbers in the city or from retailers. The hotels are steady customers, keeping the same shippers for many years.

The Bicycle Is Coming Back Into Its Own

THE bicycle, through the agency of war, is silently coming back into its own, and as a result the fighting fronts of the great armies, relieved of their networks of trenches and the terrifying artillery and rifle fire, might well be the countryside in any nation, with cyclists, a little hurried of motion possibly, going in every direction. In fact, one might well imagine himself in a rural community 25 years ago, when everyone, not a cripple, or worse still, unpossessed of a wheel, trundled madly about the country every hour to be snatched from his work.

The "bike" had a distinct part in the advance of troops, and this was particularly so during the early days of the war, when the fighting was carried on over wider stretches of the country, and when the great armies were alternately advancing and retreating, too busy with the objective in hand to stop and "dig in."

The English troops, in particular have taken advantage of the possibilities of the bicycle for use in scouting and messenger duty. The British have gone so far in some cases as to convert some of the regiments of yeomanry into cyclist formations.

With the British, cyclists technically are regarded as army troops, but used as specialist corps, like the Royal Engineers and other army troops establishments, but signs are not wanting that, with their great increase in numbers and with the new conditions of modern warfare, the cyclists will in future take their place as a definite arm rather than as specialists.

The military cyclists played a great part in the early days of this struggle. In their advance through France and Belgium the German armies depended largely upon their advance guards of cyclist companies of Jaegers, supported by mobile mechanical transport columns, armored machine-gun cars, and re-enforced when necessary by swift concentrations of infantry in motor omnibuses.

The old tradition of the cavalry screen and the patrols of mounted lancers were swept aside by the more progressive "mechanical cavalry," as the cyclists have been called. All roads and villages were reconnoitered and seized by cyclist units, only the inclosed country in between the road parallels being covered by the slower cavalry.

HOW COMMON WORDS ARE MISUSED.

No solecisms are more frequent than those which consist in the common misuse of "shall" and "will." A person who has not been trained to make the proper distinction between "shall" and "will," "should" and "would," never can be sure of using them correctly, but he will make few mistakes if he fixes firmly in his mind that I (or we) shall, you will, he (or they) will, express simple futurity and that I (or we) will, you shall, he (or they) shall, imply volition on the part of the speaker. Some writers hold that "shall" was the original form of the future and that whenever courtesy permits "shall" is to be preferred to "will." But at all events, the doctrine of courtesy furnishes a rough and ready rule for choice between the two.

"Should" and "would" follow the same rules as "shall" and "will," but they have, in addition, certain meanings peculiar to themselves. "Should" is sometimes used in its original sense as "ought," as in "You should not do that;" sometimes in a conditional sense, as in "Should you ask me about that," and after "lest," as in "He fled lest he should be imprisoned." "Would" is sometimes used to signify habitual action, as in "The squire would sometimes fall asleep in the most pathetic part of the sermon."

TIMES AND PLACE FOR SLEEP

Churches and Street Cars Are Favored But the Cozy Bed Affords a Most Delightful Pastime.

There are lots of people who say they don't sleep well at night. But there are many who regularly go to sleep in the street car. Of course, those who go to sleep in church are not counted. That might be construed as libel, observes the Milwaukee News.

But why do perfectly healthy folks want to sleep in street cars? Is it a protest against the wistful-eyed straphanger who gazes at their large and apathetic laps? Is it mere whim, desiring to shut out the events of the day and snatch a quiet moment of dreaming as a respite?

It is often mere pie, just a rampant indigestion. It is also the bad air due to offices that devitalize the worker compelled to breathe it eight hours. It is also due to the terrible habit of shutting all available car windows in dread of that fresh air which is the best friend a workingman has.

Going to sleep is a delightful pastime—at night, in bed with the proper accompaniment of pillows and paraphernalia. It is exotic in the daytime, save as a mere relaxation for a few minutes after luncheon, which is a good habit, and seldom, therefore, followed.

Protest a Happy Ending.

The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette recently reported a curious suit that should interest the readers of Flaubert's romance of Carthage. The action was brought by the niece of Gustave Flaubert against the adapters of "Salammbo" for the cinema.

Flaubert, it will be remembered, finishes his novel with the mobbing and death of Mathos before the eyes of his mistress, who seems entirely indifferent to his fate. This would not do for the film. The adapters not only save the general's life, but ring down the curtain with the marriage of the lovers, who "live happily together ever after," and have a multitude of children to grace their old age.

This platonic and commonplace ending to a "masterpiece" horrified the dilettantes, who made so much fuss about the caricaturing of the story that Flaubert's literary executor felt compelled to take the matter up, and has appealed to the courts for redress.—Kansas City Star.

RATIONS WORTH MILLION BURN

Quartermaster's Warehouse at Washington Is Gutted and Other Army Buildings Damaged.

AMMUNITION IS REMOVED

Flames Fed by Gasoline Explosions Sweep the Structure—Police Are Barred Out by the Soldiers—Big Blaze at Indianapolis.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Quantities of army supplies, including $1,000,000 worth of food was destroyed, the quartermaster's warehouse ruined and several other buildings damaged by a fire at the Washington barracks, occupied by engineer troops.

A large part of the city's fire apparatus was called upon to fight the flames, which were given impetus by the explosion of a quantity of gasoline stored in one part of the big warehouse.

After a hard fight of an hour and a half, the fire was extinguished. An ordnance building containing a quantity of small arms ammunition was endangered, but soldiers removed what was stored there. The origin of the fire has not been disclosed by officials at the post. A limited quantity of clothing and shoes was destroyed.

The buildings are located on the United States arsenal grounds along the river front at Four and a Half street, southwest. Buildings on the grounds include the United States army college, far removed from the other structures and barracks and officers' quarters occupied by men of the engineer corps.

The office buildings of the quartermaster department and the warehouse were the first to catch, in the warehouse, which occupied about a city block, was stored a quantity of gasoline. This soon exploded and intensified and spread the blaze.

Warehouse Appears Doomed

The fire burned fiercely and the firemen had difficulty in keeping it from spreading to nearby buildings. In the warehouse was stored clothing, shoes and other supplies for the army.

After almost an hour's fight the firemen were gaining headway against the flames, but it appeared that the warehouse would be entirely consumed. Soldiers stationed at the barracks hastily removed ammunition stored in the ordnance building near by and assisted the firemen in fighting the flames.

Police sent to aid were barred from the grounds by soldiers and no other than firemen and army officers was permitted to go within the inclosure.

$1,000,000 Indianapolis Fire.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 15.—Indianapolis suffered a $1,000,000 fire Sunday night when flames in the Industrial building, Tenth street and the canal, destroyed more than a city block.

The brick structure, occupying the block from Tenth to Eleventh street and from Fayette street to the canal, housed about thirty manufacturing establishments, a majority of which were making machines and supplies which are being used by the United States government in its war work. Fire Chief Loucks declared it was his belief that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Grand Rapids Block Burns.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 15.—Fire of an unknown origin destroyed the Vandenberg block, a five-story structure in the business section, and damaged two adjoining buildings. The loss is estimated at $150,000. Because of snow-blocked streets the fire for a time threatened to get beyond control of the fire department.

Canton, O., Jan. 15.—Fire of an unknown origin entirely destroyed the plant of the Miller Pasteurizing Machinery company here, with a loss estimated at $200,000.

Fire Razes $150,000 Hotel.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 15.—The Stratford Springs hotel, a fashionable resort hostelry on the National pike, east of Wheeling, was destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $150,000. It is believed all of the 100 guests escaped uninjured.

$100,000 Fire at Little Rock.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 15.—Fire destroyed practically an entire block in the principal business section of North Little Rock Sunday, causing a loss estimated at $100,000. Nine retail stores were destroyed. It is believed the fire originated from a gas jet.

RESUME FIGHTING IN CHINA

Hankow and Wuchang in Danger of Capture by Southern Army.

Peking, Jan. 15.—The southern leaders intend to reconvoke at Nanking the parliament dissolved by presidential mandate in June last. Fighting is expected to break out in that vicinity, as one division of the northern army is separated from the southern force by only ten miles.

Acting Premier Wang Chin-Chen has tendered his resignation verbally, but the president has refused to accept it.

The province of Hupeh is threatened by the advancing army of the southwestern provinces, which already has captured Ichang, thus threatening Hankow and Wuchang. These latter places are in danger of capture unless reinforcements are rushed there.

Naturally.

"It must be, for vessels cannot start on their cruise when the crews will not first start on their vessels."

Shield for Soldiers.

No single instrument of destruction is playing a more vital role in the present war than the machine gun. To deprive Germany of this weapon by offsetting its effect is the purpose of an inventor who has developed a bullet-proof fighting shield that is perhaps worthy of study. The device is a wedge-shaped shelter mounted on one front and two rear wheels and intended to accommodate ten infantrymen. The shield is designed to be folded flat and carried through the communication trenches to the firing line, where it could be assembled quickly under cover of darkness, ready to protect Sammies, Tommies or Poilus.

OSTEND SHELLED BY ALLIES

Belgian City Being Bombarded by Naval Forces, Says Report From Berlin.

Berlin, via London, Jan. 21.—Ostend, on the Belgian coast, has been bombarded by naval forces, it was announced in the army headquarter's report.

Considerable artillery fighting occurred at various points along the western front, the British fire being especially intense south of the Scarpe, while on the French front there were bursts of activity in the Verdun sector and on both sides of the Rhine-Marne canal.

The text of the statement reads:

"Ostend has been bombarded from the sea.

"Violent artillery duels continued in the salient northeast of Ypres until late in the night. On both sides of the Lys and at La Bassee canal, as well as between Lens and St. Quentin, the fighting activity increased. The British fire was directed with especial intensity throughout the day on our positions south of the Scarpe.

"The French artillery was lively in its activity in only a few sectors. At times there was an increase in the fighting activity in the Meuse region, as well as north and south of the Rhine-Marne canal."

NEED BIG HERDS

Europe's Meat Supply Must Come From America.

Warring Nations Have Depleted Live Stock at Enormous Rate, Even Killing Dairy Cattle For Food.

American stock breeders are being asked to conserve their flocks and herds in order to meet Europe's tremendous demands for meats during the war and probably for many years afterward.

The United States food administration reports that American stock raisers have shown a disposition to co-operate with the government in increasing the nation's supply of live stock.

Germany today is probably better supplied with live stock than any other European nation. When the German armies made their big advance into France and then retreated virtually all the cattle in the invaded territory — approximately 1,800,000 head—were driven behind the German lines.

But in England—where 2,400,000 acres of pasture lands have been turned into grain fields—the cattle herds are decreasing rapidly. One of the reasons apparently is the declining maximum price scale adopted by the English as follows: For September, $17.76 per 100 pounds; October, $17.28; November and December, $16.08; January, $14.40. The effect of these prices was to drive beef animals on the market as soon as possible.

In France the number of cattle as well as the quality have shown an enormous decline during the war. Where France had 14,807,000 head of cattle in 1913, she now has only 12,341,900, a decrease of 16.6 per cent. And France is today producing only one gallon of milk compared to two and one-half gallons before the war.

Denmark and Holland have been forced to sacrifice dairy herds for beef because of the lack of necessary feed.

Close study of the European meat situation has convinced the Food Administration that the future problem of America lies largely in the production of meat producing animals and dairy products rather than in the production of cereals for export when the war will have ceased.

AMERICAN SUGAR SENT TO FRANCE

American Price Rigidly Regulated by United States Food Administration.

CONSUMERS HERE PAY 9c.

Sugar Cost 35 Cents a Pound During Civil War—Refiners' Profits Now Curtailed.

Sugar is selling today throughout America at from 8½ to 9 cents a pound to the consumer, even though there is a world shortage which has reduced this nation's sugar allotment to 70 per cent. of normal.

Through the efforts of the United States food administration the sugar market has been regulated as far as the producer, refiner and wholesaler is concerned. The food administration has no power to regulate retail prices except by public opinion. Even though more than 85,000 tons of sugar have been shipped to France in the last four months the retail grocer's sugar price is around 8 to 8½ cents. He should sell this sugar at 8½ to 9 cents, the food administration believes, and asks the American housewife to pay no more than this amount.

Last August when the food administration was organized the price of sugar rose suddenly to 11 cents a pound. During the Civil War sugar cost the consumer 35 cents a pound. By regulation of the sugar market and reducing the price to 8½ and 9 cents and keeping it from advancing to 20 cents the food administration has saved the American public at least $180,000,000 in four months, according to a statement made by Herbert Hoover the other day.

"It is our stern duty to feed the allies, to maintain their health and strength at any cost to ourselves," Mr. Hoover declared. "There has not been, nor will be as we see it, enough sugar for even their present meagre and depressing ration unless they send ships to remote markets for it. If we in our greed and gluttony force them either to further reduce their ration or to send these ships we will have done damage to our abilities to win this war.

"If we send the ships to Java for 250,000 tons of sugar next year we will have necessitated the employment of eleven extra ships for one year. These ships—if used in transporting troops—would take 150,000 to 200,000 men to France."

Reason for World Shortage.

As Mr. Hoover pointed out, the United States, Canada and England were sugar importing countries before the war, while France and Italy were very nearly self-supporting. [illegible] sources of the world's sugar supply was Germany and neighboring powers, the West Indies and the East Indies.

German sugar is no longer available, as it is used entirely in Germany, which also absorbs sugar of surrounding countries.

England can no longer buy 1,400,000 long tons of sugar from Germany. The French sugar production has dropped from 750,000 to 210,000 tons. The Italian production has fallen from 210,000 tons to 75,000 tons. Thus three countries were thrown upon East and West Indian sources for 1,925,000 tons annually to maintain their normal consumption.

Because of the world's shipping shortage the allied nations started drawing on the West Indies for sugar; East Indian sugar took three times the number of ships, since the distance was three times as great. Suddenly the west was called on to furnish and did furnish 1,420,000 tons of sugar to Europe when 300,000 tons a year was the pre-war demand. The allies had drawn from Java 400,000 tons before the shipping situation became acute.

"In spite of these shipments," Mr. Hoover stated the other day, "the English government in August reduced the household sugar ration to a basis of 24 pounds per annum per capita. And in September the French government reduced their household ration to 13 2-10 pounds a year, or a bit over 1 pound of sugar a month. Even this meagre ration could not be filled by the French government it was found early in the fall. America was then asked for 100,000 tons of sugar and succeeded in sending 85,000 tons by December 1. The French request was granted because the American household consumption was then at least 55 pounds per person, and it was considered the duty of maintaining the French morale made our course clear."

Today the sugar situation may be summarized by stating that if America will reduce its sugar consumption 10 to 15 per cent. this nation will be able to send 200,000 more soldiers to France.

Sugar today sells at seaboard refineries at $7.25 a hundred pounds. The wholesale grocer has agreed to limit his profit to 25 cents a hundred plus freight, and the retail grocer is supposed to take no more than 50 cents a hundred pounds profit. This regulation was made by the food administration, which now asks the housewife to reduce sugar consumption as much as possible, using other sweeteners, and also reminds her that she should pay no more than 9 cents a pound for sugar.

Control of Cane Refiners' Profits.

"Immediately upon the establishment of the food administration," Mr. Hoover said, "an examination was made of the costs and profits of refining and it was finally determined that the spread between the cost of raw and the sale of refined cane sugar should be limited to $1.30 per hundred pounds. The pre-war differential had averaged about 85 cents and increased costs were found to have been imposed by the war in increased cost of refining, losses, cost of bags, labor, insurance, interest and other things, rather more than cover the difference. After prolonged negotiations the refiners were placed under agreement establishing these limits on October 1, and anything over this amount to be agreed extortionate under the law.

"In the course of these investigations it was found by canvass of the Cuban producers that their sugar had, during the first nine months of the past year sold for an average of about $4.24 per hundred f. o. b. Cuba, to which duty and freight added to the refiners' cost amount to about $5.66 per hundred. The average sale price of granulated by various refineries, according to our investigation, was about $7.50 per hundred, or a differential of $1.84.

"In reducing the differential to $1.30 there was a saving to the public of 54 cents per hundred. Had such a differential been in use from the 1st of January, 1917, the public would have saved in the first nine months of the year about $24,800,000."

Next Year.

With a view to more efficient organization of the trade in imported sugars next year two committees have been formed by the food administration:

1. A committee comprising representatives of all of the elements of American cane refining groups. The principal duty of this committee is to divide the sugar imports pro rata to their various capacities and see that absolute justice is done to every refiner.

2. A committee comprising three representatives of the English, French and Italian governments; two representatives of the American refiners, with a member of the food administration. Only two of the committee have arrived from Europe, but they represent the allied governments. The duties of this committee are to determine the most economical sources from a transport point of view of all the allies to arrange transport at uniform rates, to distribute the foreign sugar between the United States and allies, subject to the approval of the American, English, French and Italian governments.

This committee, while holding strong views as to the price to be paid for Cuban sugar, has not had the final voice. This voice has rested in the governments concerned, together with the Cuban government, and I wish to state emphatically that all of the gentlemen concerned as good commercial men have endeavored with the utmost patience and skill to secure a lower price, and their persistence has reduced Cuban demands by 15 cents per hundred. The price agreed upon is about $4.60 per hundred pounds, f. o. b. Cuba, or equal to about $6 duty paid New York.

"This price should eventuate," Mr. Hoover said, "to about $7.30 per hundred for refined sugar from the refiners at seaboard points or should place sugar in the hands of the consumer at from 8½ to 9 cents per pound, depending upon locality and conditions of trade, or at from 1 to 2 cents below the prices of August last and from one-half to a cent per pound cheaper than today.

"There is now an elimination of speculation, extortionate profits, and in the refining alone the American people will save over $25,000,000 of the refining charges last year. A part of these savings goes to the Cuban, Hawaiian, Porto Rican and Louisianian producer and part to the consumer.

"Appeals to prejudice against the [illegible] above that of 1917. It is said in effect that the Cubans are at our mercy; that we could get sugar a cent lower. We made exhaustive study of the cost of producing sugar in Cuba last year through our own agents in Cuba, and we find it averages $3.30, while many [illegible] are at a higher level. We found that an average profit of at least a cent per pound was necessary in order to maintain and stimulate production or that a minimum price of $4.37 was necessary, and even this would stifle some producers.

"The price ultimately agreed was 23 cents above these figures, or about one-fifth of a cent per pound to the American consumer, and more than this amount has been saved by our reduction in refiners' profits. If we wish to stifle production in Cuba we could take that course just at the time of all times in our history when we want production for ourselves and the allies. Further than that, the state department will assure you that such a course would produce disturbances in Cuba and destroy even our present supplies, but beyond all these material reasons is one of human justice. This great country has no right by the might of its position to strangle Cuba.

"Therefore there is no imposition upon the American public. Charges have been made before this committee that Mr. Rolph endeavored to benefit the California refinery of which he was manager by this 34 cent increase in Cuban price. Mr. Rolph did not fix the price. It does raise the price to the Hawaiian farmer about that amount. It does not raise the profit of the California refinery, because their charge for refining is, like all other refiners, limited to $1.30 per hundred pounds, plus the freight differential on the established custom of the trade.

"Mr. Rolph has not one penny of interest in that refinery."

GARFIELD WANTS STORES CLOSED

Appeals to Department Store Owners to Observe "Fuelless Day" Today.

FOOD STORES REMAIN OPEN

Drug Stores Will Stay Open as Usual —Theaters Can Run Today, But Will Have to Close Tuesday— New Cold Wave Due.

Today is the day, and fuelless Monday will be observed after the following fashion:

In no office buildings can there be heat above the 45-degree mark.

If persons do any business they must do so under the prevailing temperature of the great out-of-doors.

Nobody may buy a drink in a hotel, and the same condition applies to clubs.

Public meetings, even for patriotic purposes, are forbidden.

Drug stores may remain open throughout the day. Stores selling foodstuffs will be open. Department stores and lesser stores not selling foodstuffs must remain closed.

Amusement places may remain open today, but close Tuesday.

Federal, municipal or county offices are exempted.

Restaurants and cafes may remain open, but will not be allowed to sell liquor.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Within the grip of another cold wave, Fuel Administrator Garfield issued an appeal to department stores of the country to close today.

Reports from various sections indicate that through misinterpretation of the original order, proprietors of large stores intend to open today as usual.

This would violate the order, and the fuel administration makes an urgent request that all stores avoid the use of coal or other fuel for heat, light and power.

Text of Request.

Doctor Garfield's request reads:

"It is the desire of the United States fuel administration that department stores and all other retail establishments close on Mondays, food stores and drug stores excepted only.

"The United States fuel administration has not issued any special order dealing with department stores."

Food Stores Open All Day.

A special ruling was made by Doctor Garfield with reference to the food distributing stores, suspending operation of the order today.

The following telegram was sent to all fuel administrators:

"[illegible] United States food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons, the order of the United States fuel administration dated January 17 has been suspended insofar as it provides for closing such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open for the entire day of January 21."

Draw Specific Order.

An amended order will be issued within a few days specifically prohibiting the opening of department stores on Mondays.

Department stores form one of the largest industries of the country. They consume hundreds of thousands of tons of coal daily. The fuel administration intended to close them on Mondays, with all the other industries.

However, the word "and light" were omitted inadvertently from the original order. This caused confusion. Many owners thought they could keep open, using light and power for elevators, but dispensing with heat.

Can Open Without Light.

The forthcoming amended order will forbid the use of fuel in department stores on Monday for any purpose whatever, whether for heating, lighting or power.

The stores, of course, will be allowed to keep such heat on as is necessary to preclude damage.

There is no restriction against a store remaining open without heat, light or power.

Small storekeepers likewise will be allowed to keep open if they do not use coal for heat, light or power.

Coal Shipments Exhausted.

The fuel administration exerted its utmost to insure prompt movement of fuel for domestic consumers and for bunkering ships held up at Atlantic ports.

MAKING MEATLESS DAYS PERMANENT.

In the meatless menu there is a fertile field for developing new and nourishing dishes, according to E. H. Niles, writing in the Hotel Gazette, who believes that the present shortage of meat and fats will not end with the coming of peace, but may grow more acute, and continue for five or six years, thus making it worth while to develop menus of grain, vegetables and fish on a more or less permanent basis. Meat can be replaced by cereals and other protein foods, or may be served in very small portions as a flavoring for other food. In making up meatless menus this author finds our American Creole and southern cuisine a broad field for investigation.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT HELPS PAY FOR BREAD

There has been much misunderstanding about the bread program in England. It is true that the Englishman buys a loaf of bread for less than an American can, but it is poorer bread, and the British government is paying $200,000,000 a year toward the cost of it.

All the grain grown in Great Britain is taken over by the government at an arbitrary price and the imported wheat purchased on the markets at the prevailing market price. This is turned over to the mills by the government at a price that allows the adulterated war bread loaf of four pounds to sell at 18 cents, the two pound loaf at 9 cents and the one pound loaf at 5 cents.

In France, under conditions somewhat similar, but with a larger extraction, the four pound loaf sells for 16 cents.

WHEATLESS BISCUITS.

Parched cornmeal is the feature of these excellent wheatless biscuits. First, the cornmeal—one-half a cup—is put in a shallow pan placed in the oven and stirred frequently until it is a delicate brown. The other ingredients are a teaspoon of salt, a cup of peanut butter and one and a half cups of water. Mix the peanut butter, water and salt and heat. While this mixture is hot stir in the meal which should also be hot. Beat thoroughly. The dough should be of such consistency that it can be dropped from a spoon. Bake in small cakes in an ungreased pan. This makes 16 biscuits, each of which contains one-sixth of an ounce of protein.

DELICIOUS CORN MUFFINS.

Here's an old fashioned recipe for corn muffins that has recently been revived and used with unusual success in several of the larger New York hotels: To make three and a half dozen muffins take one quart milk, six ounces butter substitute, twelve ounces of light syrup or honey, four eggs, pinch of salt, two ounces baking powder, one and a half pounds cornmeal and one and a half pounds rye flour. The butter and syrup should be thoroughly mixed; then add the eggs gradually. Pour in the milk and add the rye flour mixed with cornmeal and baking powder.

FACE the FACTS

LET us face the facts. The war situation is critical. Unless the Allies fight as they never yet have fought, defeat threatens. Hungry men cannot fight at their best; nor hungry nations. France, England, and Italy are going hungry unless we feed them.

Wheat Savings—They must have wheat. It is the best food to fight on. It is the easiest to ship. We alone can spare it to them. By saving just a little—less than a quarter of what we ate last year—we can support those who are fighting our battles. And we can do it without stinting ourselves. We have only to substitute another food just as good.

The Corn of Plenty—Corn is that food. There's a surplus of it. Providence has been generous in the hour of our need. It has given us corn in such bounty as was never known before. Tons of corn. Trainloads of corn. Five hundred million bushels over and above our regular needs. All we have to do is to learn to appreciate it. Was ever patriotic duty made so easy? And so clear?

America's Own Food—Corn! It is the true American food. The Indians, hardiest of races, lived on it. Our forefathers adopted the diet and conquered a continent. For a great section of our country it has blong een the staff of life. How well the South fought on it, history tells. Now it can help America win a world war.

Learn Something—Corn! It isn't one food. It's a dozen. It's a cereal. It's a vegetable. It's a bread. It's a dessert. It's nutritious; more food value in it, dollar for dollar, than meat or eggs or most other vegetables. It's good to eat; how good you don't know until you've had corn-bread properly cooked. Best of all, it's plentiful and it's patriotic.

Corn's Infinite Variety—How much do you know about corn? About how good it is? About the many delicious ways of cooking it? And what you miss by not knowing more about it? Here are a few of its uses:

There are at least fifty ways to use corn meal to make good dishes for dinner, supper, lunch or breakfast. Here are some suggestions:

HOT BREADS	DESSERTS
Boston brown bread.	Corn-meal molasses cake.
Hoecake.	Apple corn bread.
Muffins.	Dumplings.
Biscuits.	Gingerbread.
Griddle cakes.	Fruit gems.
Waffles.

HEARTY DISHES

Corn-meal croquettes.
Corn-meal fish balls.
Meat and corn-meal dumplings.
Italian polenta.
Tamales.

Telephone Number 36.

A week ago Monday morning our Highway Commissioner Perry Van Valkenburg was about the busiest man in the township. He might have wished that the fierce storm of the preceding Saturday had put his phone out of commission but it didn't and he was kept busy answering trouble calls from all over the township.

The roads were drifted full of snow in some places from 10 to 15 feet deep and everyone was impatient to get the roads opened up so that milk could be hauled, mail delivered, etc. The commissioner called as many as possible to take their shovels and go to work with their neighbors. The men, in most cases, responded nobly and as a result the main roads were soon put in shape for travel.

Previous winters have brought cold weather and snow but for many years back no such winter as the present has been recorded and, while the highway fund has always taken care of the expense of clearing the highways and will in this case if necessary, still it is for the benefit and convenience of every farmer living in the township that the roads should be opened up as speedily as possible so that he could get his milk taken care of, his mail delivered and make his necessary trips to town and other points. Many farmers, realizing this, have been most willing to donate to the township their services, for in so doing, they knew that the fund would not be impaired and would be protected for spring and summer work. If everyone had demanded his pay for work done it would have cut into the fund and left a smaller amount than usual for road work in the spring.

The services donated in this emergency show conclusively what a loyal bunch of farmers we have in Tecumseh township and the speed with which they tackled the job of shoveling out was quite wonderful for by Monday night most of the principal highways were clear and ready for traffic.

You have to take your hat off to Tecumseh township every time.

PLENTY OF COAL IN MICHIGAN MINES

60,000,000 TONS UNTOUCHED

Veins However Are Thin and Cannot Operate Profitably in Competition With Richer Coal Fields.

Lansing—With an undeveloped coal supply sufficient to last the state 40 years at the present rate of consumption, Michigan is suffering from an acute fuel famine. Schools, churches and factories all over the state are closed yet more than 60,000,000 tons of coal are lying untouched under the central portion of the lower peninsula.

Despite her vast deposits of coal Michigan has never produced any considerable portion of the coal she annually consumes. This has been due to the fact that the veins are too thin to be operated profitably in open competition with the richer mines of other states.

The cost of production here has been practically twice that in Ohio and Pennsylvania mines, according to the reports of the state geologist.

The danger that federal control of mines and coal shipments might be renounced at the close of the war has prevented private interests from undertaking extended operations in the undeveloped region, but a guarantee of continued protection might result in early action by mining interests.

This Is Our Winter of Test

SERVING food is a local problem for each community. Prices and definite rules for every one cannot be formulated. It is a duty for each one to eat only so much as is necessary to maintain the human body healthy and strong. This winter of 1918 is the period when is to be tested here in America whether our people are capable of voluntary individual sacrifice to save the world. That is the purpose of the organization of the United States Food Administration—by voluntary effort to provide the food that the world needs.

COUNTY WAR BOARDS NAMED

Michigan's Civilian War Activities Being Co-ordinated.

Lansing—With the appointment by Governor Sleeper of county war preparedness boards for every county of Michigan the first steps were taken to co-ordinate and combine all Michigan's civilian war actvities.

It makes permanent, for the duration of the war, all organized bodies supporting the military forces of the United States.

The county war preparedness boards will constitute a war preparedness division, with Governor Sleeper as chairman, and Mark T. McKee, of Detroit, as secretary. Mr. McKee being already secretary of the state Red Cross and of the state Liberty Loan commission.

In addition to their functions as part of a general controlling division, the county boards will be the local representatives of the state war preparedness board.

GUSTS FROM THE BLIZZARD

Unusual Happenings Reported From Several Sections.

Lansing—Many unusual incidents, occasioned by the recent blizzard which swept the state, have come to light.

At Ann Arbor, two little girls carrying a suit case of laundry were overcome by the intense cold. The hand of one of the children was frozen stiff around the handle of the suit case. The children were taken to a nearby store.

State agencies obtained employment for 8,704 persons in December.

Elaine Frost, of Bad Axe, aged 9, has broken her right arm for the third time.

Vivian Conklin, infant daughter of Bert Conklin, of Battle Creek, was seriously injured when a coal stove exploded.

Eight passenger coaches of the Wabash Detroit-St. Louis flier left the rails at Adrian but failed to turn over, no one being hurt.

The Ionia gas plant shut down for a day owing to lack of coal and residents were forced to use candles or lamps for lighting.

The Bicycle Is Coming Back Into Its Own

THE bicycle, through the agency of war, is silently coming back into its own, and as a result the fighting fronts of the great armies, relieved of their networks of trenches and the terrifying artillery and rifle fire, might well be the countryside in any nation, with cyclists, a little hurried of motion possibly, going in every direction. In fact, one might well imagine himself in a rural community 25 years ago, when everyone not a cripple, or, worse still, unpossessed of a wheel, trundled madly about the country every hour to be snatched from his work.

The "bike" had a distinct part in the advance of troops, and this was particularly so during the early days of the war, when the fighting was carried on over wider stretches of the country, and when the great armies were alternately advancing and retreating, too busy with the objectives in hand to stop and "dig in."

The English troops, in particular have taken advantage of the possibilities of the bicycle for use in scouting and messenger duty. The British have gone so far in some cases as to convert some of the regiments of yeomanry into cyclist formations.

With the British, cyclists technically are regarded as army troops, but used as specialist corps, like the Royal Engineers and other army troops establishments, but signs are not wanting that, with their great increase in numbers and with the new conditions of modern warfare, the cyclists will in future take their place as a definite arm rather than as specialists.

The military cyclists played a great part in the early days of this struggle. In their advance through France and Belgium the German armies depended largely upon their advance guards of cyclist companies of Jaegers, supported by mobile mechanical transport columns, armored machine-gun cars, and re-enforced when necessary by swift concentrations of infantry in motor omnibuses.

The [illegible] cers were swept aside by the more progressive "mechanical cavalry," as the cyclists have been called. All roads and villages were reconnoitered and seized by cyclist units, only the inclosed country in between the road parallels being covered by the slower cavalry.

"Tanks" Have Them Guessing.

Nothing in the war since the German guns of 1914 that smashed the Belgian forts and were to drop shells in Dover has so captured the general imagination of the amateur as the death crawlers known as "tanks." The airplanes are more vivid, but they lack the mystery of the tanks. Nobody knows how many England has, but nobody guesses under a thousand now in service. Doubtless the Germans will provide some device for putting them out of service—something corresponding to the depth bombs which have scandalized the submarines they have met. Probably the tank will pass before the war is over from the limelight. But they hold the center of the stage at present, masked, grim and mysterious, like the old actors of Greece.

Overhasty.

John Murphy had secured a license to marry Mary Manning, but the intended bride "rued," and six weeks later John made his second appearance in the clerk's office.

"Misther Johnson," said he, "In February I got a license from you to marry Mary Manning; an' I didn't marry her; an' now, plaze yer honor, wud yer be so good as to alther it so it wud fit Honora Moriarrity?"

"No," replied the clerk. "You must get a new license to 'fit' Honora."

"And pay for it?"

"Certainly; it will cost you a dollar, the same as the first one."

"Och, indade! Thin I'm ruined intirely, intirely, fur I jist coorted Honora to save the dollar."

With a Chuckle.

As Mr. Jones unlaced his boots he remarked casually to his wife: "Have you heard about the catastrophe which happened at the Smiths' house tonight?"

"No. What was it?" asked Mrs. Jones.

Jones paused for an aggravating moment to pull on his slippers before he replied: "Why, Mrs. Smith gave the baby a bottle to play with, and while she was out of the room it fell from the cradle and broke its neck."

"What! The poor little baby?" shrieked his wife.

"No; the bottle!" replied Mr. Jones with a fiendish chuckle.

FROGS AND WHAT THEY EAT

The food of the frog consists of earthworms, insects, spiders and any form of animal life small enough to be seized and swallowed. Large frogs will often devour their smaller relatives. The big bullfrog is an especially dangerous enemy to other members of its kind. It has been known even to eat small birds. Some frogs are fond of snails and will swallow them shells and all, says Boy's Life.

It is interesting to note that frogs can eat bees and wasps notwithstanding the sting. In seizing food it usually makes use of its curious extensile tongue, which can be thrust out of the mouth with surprising rapidity. The tongue is attached to the front of the jaw, its forked rear end free so that it can be flipped out of the mouth. It is supplied with a sticky secretion that picks up the food. The frog cannot see an object near to itself. Any dangling bait should, therefore, be at a distance of from two to three feet.

Frogs may be caught by dangling small bits of red yarn before them on a hook and sometimes even without a hook. When the yarn is seized the animal may be jerked out of the water. Bullfrogs kept in captivity readily attempt to swallow one's fingers.

Due to the inability of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman's Suffrage association, to get a train out of Washington, D. HOTELS GOOD CUSTOMERS

How Big Hostelries Get Their Supplies of Eggs.

A method of selling—which, more than any other, perhaps, is the dream of the producer—is the trade with hotels, sanatoriums, and the like. Accordingly we made a visit to one of the largest and most exclusive hotels in New York city, says a writer in Farm and Fireside. We were conducted through the kitchens of this hotel, where evidence of management efficiency was plain everywhere. The steward later talked with us about their methods of purchasing eggs and poultry.

Both white and brown eggs are used by these high-class hotels. But for every use where the shell is exposed when the egg is placed on the table—as when boiled—the white-shelled eggs are used. For cooking and baking the brown-shelled eggs are used. About 600 dozen eggs a day are required by the hotel we visited, one-fourth of these being white. From 95 to 98 per cent of all eggs used are purchased from the producers, to whom two to five cents is paid above the highest market price quoted for nearby hennery whites or browns. The remaining 2 to 5 per cent are emergency orders, and are purchased from jobbers in the city or from retailers. The hotels are steady customers, keeping the same shippers for many years.

GARDEN SPACE MAY BE SAVED

How to Blanch Celery by Use of Paper Made for Purpose.

When the plan of banking with soil is used for blanching celery, the rows must be so wide apart as to waste much valuable land in small garden areas. But by using paper sold in rolls for the purpose, and which is treated to make it tough and moisture proof, much garden space and time may be saved, says a writer in Farm and Fireside.

Celery set with the intention of using paper for blanching need be only far enough between rows to allow convenient cultivation with wheel hoe, and two rows can be set not over six or eight inches apart, with spaces 15 to 18 inches on each side of the double rows. When ready for blanching, the paper can be quickly stretched each side of the double row. The roll is unwound along one side and back the opposite side of the double rows, thus requiring no cutting of the roll. While one person stretches the paper and holds it in place, another thrusts the long wire staples, made like narrow croquet arches, over the double rows to hold the paper snugly up in place.

If the right kind of paper can be procured and is carefully rolled and saved when the crop is harvested, it can be used several seasons.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

All officers have been instructed to familiarize themselves with the metric system of weights and measures, which is standard in Europe. Gun sights, it is ordered, shall hereafter be graduated by the metric system.

Because somebody blundered each company in camp was forced to accept nearly a half ton of onions for its mess. As that quantity will last about a year, Custer has vast quantities of onions for sale.

Owing to the fact that a number of enlisted men have made a practice of writing for publication for pay, despite army regulations to the contrary, orders have been issued which strictly forbid a continuance of the practice. Even letters which are intended for publication must hereafter be submitted to the division censor and first aid administered.

West of Port Huron, five engines tried to pull one train through the drifts but had to give it up.

A train on the Pere Marquette was 16 hours going from Saginaw to Milford, a distance of about 65 miles.

A trainload of soldiers from Camp Custer, homeward bound on short leaves of absence, became stalled in a 15-foot drift east of Battle Creek and spent their leaves of absence on the train instead of home.

JUDGE H. WIRT NEWKIRK OF ANN ARBOR WILL SEEK NOMINATION FOR CONGRESS IN SECOND DISTRICT

His Friends Believe He Has Good Chance to Win.

Judge H. Wirt Newkirk of Ann Arbor will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress from the second district comprising the counties of Washtenaw, Jackson, Lenawee, Monroe and part of Wayne. Judge Newkirk is widely known throughout the district and State. He has served four terms in the State Legislature and for several years was stationed in Washington, where he became well acquainted with departmental work and secured a valuable education in legislative matters.

Just who will oppose him for the republican nomination is not known but it is being reported that Charles DeLand of Jackson and possibly Mark R. Bacon of Wyandotte will be mixed up in the race.

Friends of the Judge feel sure that he has a good chance to win and the educational city is prepared to back him to the limit.

WORLD'S BIGGEST MOTION PICTURE!

The picture par excellence, the supreme offering of filmdom, is "The Whip," the screen version of the famous play that ran for three years in London and for over two seasons in New York City, when it was produced by William A. Brady.

Afterward the play had a run of two years in Australia and a career with out precedent in every part of the English speaking world. It was translated into French, Russian, German and other tongues and always with enormous success.

It was so vast in its equipment of scenes and effects that it could be produced in only three or four theatres in all America—such as the Manhattan Opera House, New York, the Auditorium, Chicago, etc. For this reason it has been seen by less than ten per cent. of the theatre patrons of the United States.

This vastness has been immeasurably increased by the resources of motion picture art. Given such advantages of original magnitude, "The Whip" offered a rarely inviting subject for picturization at the hands of Maurice Tourneur. Tremendous effects have been secured, as, for instance, the gigantic train wreck in which a whole train was smashed to bits at a huge cost for the sole purpose of securing one scene for his picture.

The story is of the race track and the intrigue revolving around a famous race horse named "The Whip." This intrigue involves an impecunious partner, a handsome young man in of the horse-loving Judge who owns "The Whip," the jockey who rides and idolizes the horse, and the unsophisticated and pretty sister of the jockey.

Big race scenes, wonderful hunting scenes, the best train wreck and the most thrilling automobile accident ever seen in pictures, startling scenes in the old Eden Musee filled with wax figures—all these combined with a powerful and attention-riveting story make this the world's biggest screen play.

"The Whip" will be presented at the Bradley Opera House next week Wednesday.

RED CROSS NEWS

Mrs. Crane reports thirteen suits of pajamas finished and sent to Adrian this week.

Mrs. Leon Rosacrans has volunteered to press all finished suits.

If some one has a sewing machine which they could donate for use at Headquarters, kindly notify Miss Phelps or Mrs. Theo. Crane.

To the Knitters

Among the many foundationless rumors which are being circulated throughout the country, no doubt by enemy agents, is one to the effect that the Red Cross does not need the knitted articles that our women are making, that the soldiers and sailors do not want them. The following statement, issued by Harvey D. Gibson, general manager of the American Red Cross, may help set matters right for our readers:

"As it is well known, it is the policy of the Red Cross to supplement, so far as it has power, the efforts of the Army and Navy, in conserving the health and comfort of our soldiers and sailors, either in this country or abroad. Sweaters and other knitted articles are designed primarily for warmth. They certainly are not ornamental. Therefore it must follow that, when there is an almost universal demand on the part of our soldiers and sailors for sweaters and other knitted articles, the demand is a real one. Such articles can only be classed as equipment, though supplementary to that furnished by the Army and Navy. And they undoubtedly constitute equipment that will add greatly to hhe healt and comfort of our men. The Red Cross knows that the soldiers and sailors want sweaters and other knitted articles. These goods can be obtained from the Red Cross in single garments only upon individual request or upon request of a commanding officer. How great the need is, is best evidenced by the fact that in addition to the hundreds of thousands of knitted articles produced by our Red Cross chapter in the last few months we have been compelled to purchase 550,000 extra sweaters alone to meet the insistent demand made upon us by our men. We are sorry that we had to do any purchasing at all because, we know how much the soldiers and sailors of this country prefer the articles knitted by the women of this country.

I may be understood further that in addition to the demands of our Army and Navy we have very urgent demands from commissions abroad for knitted articles for destitute civilian populations, men, women and children who if not actually homeless, are very scantily clad and usually without fuel, in this cold weather to warm their homes. It is hoped that this general statement will satisfy the women of this country who have been devoting all their possible time to knitting for men.

Mrs. F. G. Lewis and Mrs. B. J. Pulver will have charge of the Surgical Dressing classes on Thursday afternoon and they will be pleased to meet all ladies who would volunteer their assistance at this time. It is NOT necessary to be a member of the Wednesday evening Surgical Dressing class to render your assistance on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday afternoon.

Any ladies who will volunteer their services to help the Surgical Dressings class on THURSDAY afternoon will please phone Dr. Bredow, 330 2r. All ardent workers will be welcome.

Mrs. Margaret Beamish of North Union St. has the distinction of being the oldest Red Cross worker in Tecumseh. At the age of 87 years she has knit 16 pairs of socks, 1 pair wristlets and two sweaters for the local chapter. She takes great interest of surgical dressings for the centinue doing "her bit."

Friday evening, the Westerminster Guild met at Headquarters. 230-2x2 gauze wipes and 40 4x4 gauze wipes were made during the evening. On account of a severe attack of larngitus, Dr. Bredow was unable to attend

On account of the severe cold weather during the past two weeks, the attendance at Headquarters has not been as good as usual. The rooms are always kept warm and comfortable so please make an effort to come and assist with the urgent needs which MUST be accomplished. From Mrs. John Glass, superintendent of surgical dressings fro the central division, a very urgent appeal is made for MORE help in this line of work, as the demand far exceeds the supply.

Mrs. Frank Nyland and committee have finished 30 surgical shirts.

The Eastern Star meeting having been posponed, the Baptist young people will meet as usual on Thursday evening, Jan. 24th, at Headquarters.

Mrs. W. B. Hartzog and committee have finished and sent to Headquarters 12 pairs knitted socks the past week.

HISTORICAL DAY AT THE MONDAY CLUB

Mrs. Marie Ferrey of Lansing Guest of the Club.

It was Historical day, at the Monday club and a program of unusual interest was given. The meeting was held in the M. E. church and was largely attended.

Mrs. B. J. Pulver chairman of the historical committee introduced the speaker of the afternoon Mrs. Marie Ferrey of Lansing.

Mrs. Ferrey is chairman of State Historical committee and because of her intimate knowledge of Michigan history was able to give to the club members a most interesting and instructive address on early Michigan hstory and costumes. Illustrating the different periods, different ladies appeared in costumes furnished by Mrs. Ferrey.

1st Indian Maid—Mrs. R. S. Moore who sang an Indian Song.

2nd. Early Pioneer Days—Mrs. Chas. Burridge.

3rd Educational, Aunt Laura Haviland—Mrs. Duaine Service.

5h, Sojourner Truth—Miss Margaret VanWinkle.

6th, Topsy—Miss Edna Taylor, who sang a darkey melody.

7th, Wedding Gown of Mrs. Governor Bliss—Miss Ethel Garlinghouse.

Other relics and early wearing apparel were exhibited.

Mrs. Ferrey urged that people give more thought to early Michigan history and to learn from the elderly people incidents of their early life and things of historical value pertaining to our community.

Afternoon tea was served by Mrs. F. G. Lewis' committee.

FORMER TECUMSEH BOY MAKES GOOD

In recent Ohio corporations we find the Universal Sales & Service Co. with exclusive Sales and Service Rights for Ford Automobiles and trucks in the City of Sandusky Ohio, and extensive surrounding territory. Mr. Griswold, who was a former Tecumseh boy, was previously assistant director of education of the Ford Motor Co. at Detroit. The Sandusky district is one of the most promising in this section and it was due to Mr. Griswold's remarkable record with the Ford Motor Co. that his new company was given the rights of the territory.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom club were entertained at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Brown on South Evans St. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Waldron were to have entertained the club at their home west of town but because of the cold weather and uncertain sleighing the evening was spent in town with the Browns. The Waldron bobs, however, came in and gathered up most of the club members so that they would not be disappointed in their sleighride.

A very interesting program was given under the leadership of Mrs. Wilfred Waldron, which was as follows:

Matches—A. O. Howard.

History and manufacture of Paper—Mrs. W. J. Balmer read by Dr. Balmer.

Pins and Needles—Prof. W. L. Reed.

Current events was the subject for roll call, nearly every member responding showing that they were keeping posted on things that are happening.

After the program light refreshments were served. Then followed a peace conference, the members being divided into groups representing United States, England, France, Italy and Russia. Each group stating on what terms they were willing to conclude fighting and lay down their arms. This action on the clubs part brought some valuable points and we suggest that copies be mailed to the various Allied Governments that they may be more fully posted and guided and for reference when needed.

BUY A BUICK

Why should we have chosen to represent the Buick line in preference to all other makes of cars?

BECAUSE in past seasons during which time we have handled no cars whatever, an excellent opportunity has been offered us to compare any and all makes of cars and to pass an unbiased opinion both from a user's and dealer's view point.

By so doing we have learned that the majority of cars are what the garage man term a one year or one season car and forever afterwards a REPAIR SHOP DELIGHT. The dealer is obliged to be continually offering apologies and making adjustments. The agency eventually disappears and the car is left without a home.

The BUICK however, one of the oldest agencies in Tecumseh has survived them all. There is surely some good reason for this.

FINALLY we have chosen to represent the BUICK line because it has proven to us conclusively time and again, in comparison with all other makes of cars, that a BUICK, month to month, year in and year out, mile for mile, requires less service, will outlast and outwear, and out-distance with less upkeep, less expense, and with far less yearly depreciation, dollar for dollar, any and all other make of automobile.

A BUICK owner is invariably an enthusiastic BUICK BOOSTER.

Moral—BUY A BUICK.

TO CORRECT A WRONG IMPRESSION

In last Tuesday's issue we printed an article headed Notice to the Public in which we stated that help was needed to assist in opening the roads and also that there was little or nothing in the highway fund to take care of the expenses of clearing the roads of snow. This item was phoned to the Publisher early Monday morning by Mr. VanValkenburg the highway Commissioner but because of a poor connection we received the wrong impression.

As a matter of fact there is as much money in the highway fund at this time as usual. The real object of the notice was to get the farmers to work at once so that the roads could be opened up as soon as possible to traffic. The terrific storm made it impossible for a few to accomplish the work of clearing the roads. The roads are now about clear due to the loyal efforts of the Commissioners appael.

GARAGES GO TO CASH BASIS FEBRUARY 1st.

Effective on and after February 1st the Garlinghouse Garage, the Big Chief Garage and the Clintonian Garage at Clinton will go on a cash basis. Due to the present unusual and extraordinary conditions under which business in general is being transacted at the present time, this move seems necessary in order to maintain its most efficient service and keep it up to the highest standard demanded by the public and this can only be successfully accomplished by going on a strictly cash basis.

The above garage owners believe that this adjustment will work out to the mutual advantage of both garages and the public. Further announcement will appear in Friday's issue covering every detail.

Frank—Well, no wonder; we've got such a big clock in our school.

Reciprocity in Forbearance.

"Come go on a fishing party with us," urged a friend to a man prominently in the eye of the public.

Allies Agree on Terms.

"There is no confusion of counsel among the adversaries of the central powers, no uncertainty of principle, no vagueness of detail. The only secrecy of counsel, the only lack of fearless frankness, the only failure to make definite statements of the objects of the war, lies with Germany and her allies. Loving a Child.

Loving a child is key
To Heaven's mystery.
Loving a child, and giving
It knowledge, this is living.
Loving a child brings pain,
And is life's greatest gain.

Loving a child is knowing
The fierce joy of a sowing
That shall cause mighty reaping.
Loving a child is weeping,
And fearing, too, and praying;
This, there is no gainsaying.

Loving a child is being
A part of God, and seeing
The world beneath one's hand
Enlarge, expand,
Be different, and grow
To one's thought. Even so.

Loving a child is key
To every mystery.
Loving a child is laughter
And heartache after.
—Heartache and grief and pain
But always joy again.

Nothing Doing.

"I know who has the lost money," stated the visitor.

Why Girl Messengers Are Failures.

With one or two exceptions, girls who have tried lately to replace messenger boys in New York have failed. Too much walking, too many display windows and the inability to stand the gibes of messengers of the other sex, and dislike of a uniform are the stumbling blocks which have thinned the ranks. Because of a dearth of boys due to school starting and calls to "higher up" jobs, the telegraph companies advertised for girls. They wanted "girls over 16 for light work, steady employment." Many girls who didn't know what they were getting into answered. One office was able to persuade three to go to work, and another got five. After the first day there was one girl left in each office. Too much time lost looking into windows, the strain of walking all day and the taunts of boys working with them took the others. The employers of girl messengers are not discouraged, however, and believe by elimination they may finally get a good working force.

RUSS ASSEMBLY IS DISSOLVED

MANY ARE KILLED AT MOSCOW

Red Guards Fire on Demonstrators in Favor of the Constituent Assembly —Czernin Tells of Peace Efforts.

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—The constituent assembly has been dissolved by the bolsheviki authorities, it is officially announced. Sailor guards closed the assembly at four o'clock in the morning and a decree of dissolution will be issued, the official statement says. The text reads:

"When the constituent assembly voted against the declaration made by the president of the central executive committee after an hour's deliberation, the bolsheviki left the hall and were followed by the social revolutionists of the left on the assembly's showing its unwillingness to approve the manner in which the peace pourparlers were being conducted. At four o'clock the constituent assembly was dissolved by sailors. A decree dissolving the assembly will be published."

Tauride Palace Closed.

The first hint the newspaper men received that extreme measures were contemplated was at six o'clock, when they were informed that the Tauride palace, where the assembly began its sessions, would be closed to the members of the assembly, to the newspaper men and to everyone else.

Meanwhile, the all-Russian railwaymen's congress has adopted, by a vote of 273 to 61, a resolution supporting the constituent assembly and calling upon the people's commissioners to agree with the majority with a view to the formation of a government responsible to the assembly.

Many Are Killed.

From Moscow it is reported that many persons were wounded and others killed as the result of the red guard firing on demonstrators there in favor of the constituent assembly.

The Japanese embassy here in an official statement made denial of the reports that Japanese forces had been landed at Vladivostok.

"Japan is a sincere friend of Russia," says the embassy statement, "and does not entertain the least intention of interfering in the internal affairs of the Russian people. The presence of a Japanese cruiser at Vladivostok has no connection whatever with the present situation in Russia."

Czernin's Statement.

Regarding the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, is quoted here in an interview as declaring that if peace did not result from the negotiations it would not be "because of any intention of ours in regard to conquests.

"I am not going back upon what I have already stated to be the dual monarchy's peace program," added Count Czernin. "We want nothing from Russia, neither cessions of territory nor war indemnities. We only desire to see friendly, neighborly relations established on safe principles —relations which will be both lasting and based upon mutual confidence."

GEN. DUFF IS FOUND DEAD

Commander of British Forces in India From 1913 to 1916 Dies in Bed.

London, Jan. 21.—Gen. Sir Beauchamp Duff, commander in chief of the British forces in India from 1913 to 1916, was found dead in his bed in a West End club.

[General Duff, who had had a long and distinguished army career, was in his sixty-third year. In August, 1916, he was succeeded in the Indian command by General Monro, and was summoned to Great Britain to testify before the committee investigating the Mesopotamian expedition, which resulted in the loss of Kut-el-Amara and General Townshend's force to the Turks. The report of this commission, presented in June last, mentioned many as sharing responsibility for the result, the list including Gen. Sir John Eccles Nixon, former commander in Mesopotamia; Baron Hardinge, former viceroy of India, and General Duff, commander in chief at the time.]

New Fiber Plant.

A New Costa Rican fiber plant has been developed through selection and cultivation by M. Peralta of San Jose, and is alleged to produce more and stronger fiber than henequen or sisal. A consular report states that the fiber is made into rope, twine, mats, bags, and even finer articles. The spineless leaf is 9 to 12 feet long, and each plant averages 80 leaves a year, yielding two pounds of fiber. With about 600 plants to the acre, cane, beans, potatoes, or corn can be grown on the same land. Full growth is reached in five years, but cuttings—two a year—may begin two years after planting the shoots.

Wagers.

A soldier boy from Clay county, now in training, wrote a letter to his sweetheart, and on the flap of the envelope he wrote these words:

"I'll bet a kiss you don't find this."

Whether or not the little fairy, love, whispered in the maiden's ear, telling her how to open the letter, remains a secret, but anyway she sent back this reply:

"I'll bet you this I found your kiss." [illegible]

TORPEDOED SHIP SAFE

U. S. Steamer Armenia Makes Port With Hole in Side

Cargo of Flour in the Hold Forms Bulkhead and Prevents Flooding of Vessel.

Washington, Jan. 21.—With a great hole blown in her side by a torpedo, with crews at their guns and on watch for another torpedo, and with flour in the hold forming a bulkhead, the steamship Armenia, in a midnight attack, made way to a point of safety and saved all her men and the greater part of her cargo.

Incidents of the attack were made public by Secretary Daniels from the report of the commander of the vessel. Chief Boatswain's Mate Stief Homiak, U. S. N., in charge of the gun crew, is commended by the secretary for devotion to duty.

The Armenia, under convoy, was proceeding through the war zone when, at midnight, the wirless brought news of the torpedoing of another vessel in the zone.

"With my binocular," the commander of the guard reports, "I picked up a light on the port beam. I sang out to the mate, but got no answer.

"Then I saw a large stream of water shoot into the air about 150 feet and then a shot came forward.

"The gun crews were told to stick to their guns and watch for a second torpedo and not to wait for orders to fire.

"It was my intention then to go down into the engine room when I noticed spotlights blinking about the decks and a scramble for the boats. I shouted to keep the spotlights off or we would get a second torpedo. I also told them not to mind the boats, but save the ship.

"Going back to the bridge we saw that the men from some of the lookout posts were getting ready the boats and that the armed guards were standing by their guns. Orders were given to lower the boats and to cast off.

"After making an inspection of the damage I went to the captain and again told him I thought we could make it if there was no second torpedo.

"The boats by this time had put off from the ship. A destroyer came alongside and picked up the men.

"A collision mat with weights and canvas had been placed over the torpedoed hole. Flour in the hold had formed a skin that kept the water from going forward. The explosion knocked down three of the lookouts on the gun platform.

"Keeping ahead the Armenia was gotten to safety and her cargo unloaded."

GENERAL STRIKE ON IN AUSTRIA; 100,000 ARE OUT

Strikers Are Openly Anti-German —Movement Is Aimed at Securing Peace.

BIG DEMONSTRATIONS HELD

Disorders Occur at Alicante—Three Persons Killed When Mob Attacks Factories and Shops.

London, Jan. 21.—A general strike is on throughout Austria, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Paris, which reports that 100,000 men have quit work in Vienna and Neustadt, closing down all the war factories.

The strikers are described as openly anti-German and the movement as both political and economic and especially aimed at securing peace.

Public demonstrations, it is added, have been held in many places at which hostility was voiced toward Berlin for trying to force the Austrians to continue the war.

Three Rioters Killed.

Madrid, Jan. 21.—Disorders occurred on Saturday at Alicante, the chief seaport of Valencia.

They are reported in an official telegram from Alicante, which states that a mob forced the factories to cease work and attacked shops and private houses. Women of the middle class were compelled by the remonstrators to join them, it is declared.

The civil guard fired on the rioters, killing three persons, and seriously wounding four others.

CORN WILL WIN DEMOCRACY'S WAR

America's Greatest Cereal Crop Is Now Moving to Market.

MAINSTAY IN NATION'S CRISIS.

Surplus Wheat of the United States Has Been Sent to Famine Threatened Europe.

America's great corn crop, exceeding 3,000,000,000 bushels, will save the world's food situation, officials of the United States food administration believe.

Corn is the nation's best food cereal, housewives are beginning to realize. It contains all the elements needed to keep the body in a state of health and when used according to the scores of tried recipes, especially when combined with an added portion of oil or fat, will sustain life indefinitely. Indian warriors in colonial days lived on parched corn alone for many days at a time, and at Valley Forge parched corn was at times the sole ration of the Continental soldiers.

Owing to transportation difficulties caused by the war the corn crop moved more slowly to market this year than ever before. Now, however, the cereal is reaching the millers and consumers. In the meantime the nation's surplus wheat has been sent to Europe.

Today there are approximately 30 bushels of corn for every American. This quantity is greater by five bushels than in former years.

Corn has become the nation's mainstay in the crisis of war.

Just as this cereal saved the first American colonists from famine on many occasions, just as it served as a staple food during the War of the Revolution and during the Civil War, King Corn has again come to the front in the nation's battle with autocracy.

Corn meal is finding greatly increased use in the making of ordinary white bread. Hundreds of housewives and many of the larger bakers are mixing 20 per cent. corn meal with wheat flour to make leavened bread. This kind of a mixture is worked and baked in the same recipes and with the same methods that apply to straight wheat bread.

Corn bread—using corn meal entirely—is gaining a greater popularity than ever before. Housewives are coming to realize that every pound of wheat saved in America means a pound of wheat released for shipment to the nations with which America is associated in the war.

There are a score of corn products that today possess unusual importance for Americans. Corn syrup for sweetening corn cakes and buckwheat cakes and for use in the kitchen instead of granulated sugar is one of the leading products made from corn.

Corn oil, excellent for frying and for every other purpose filled by salad oils, is appearing on the market in large quantities. It comes from the germ of the corn.

MADE-IN-GERMANY LIES CIRCULATED IN CANADA

Canada is also having trouble with Made-in-Germany lies calculated to hinder Canadian food conservation according to an official statement received from the Canadian food controller by the United States food administration.

The stories bothering Canada are of the same general character as those the United States food administrator recently denounced in this country, such as the ridiculous salt and blueing famine fakes and the report that the government would seize housewives' stocks of home canned goods.

The Canadian food controller estimates that when the people listen to and pass on such stories, each one has the power of destruction that lies in a battalion of soldiers.

"Stories without even a vestige of foundation have been scattered broadcast," said the Canadian statement. "Nor have they come to life casually. They have started simultaneously in different parts of the country and in each instance have been calculated to arouse public indignation.

"They are insidious, subtle, persistent. Bit by bit they dissipate public trust, the great essential in the work of food control.

"It lies with every individual to forbear from criticism; to refrain from passing on the vagrant and harmful story, and thus the more effectively to co-operate in work which is going to mean more than the majority of people yet realize."

THE UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION SAYS:

There is no royal road to food conservation. We can only accomplish this by the voluntary action of our whole people, each element in proportion to its means. It is a matter of equality of burden; a matter of minute saving and substitution at every point in the 20,000,000 kitchens, on the 20,000,000 dinner tables, and in the 2,000,000 manufacturing, wholesale and retail establishments of the country.

GUNS ACTIVE ON THE PIAVE

Lively Artillery Fighting in the Monte Asolone Sector Reported by Rome.

Rome, Jan. 21.—Lively artillery fighting in the Monte Asolone sector on the Italian northern front is reported in the war office statement. There also was lively artillery activity along the Piave line. No infantry operations of moment are noted in the official statement, which reads:

"Patrol engagements took place in the Daone valley, at Giudicarie. At Sano, southwest of More, one of our storming parties carried out a successful raid into the enemy line, taking prisoner an officer and ten men.

"There were brief but intense artillery duels in the Monte Asolone region. British batteries caused a large fire within the enemy's lines south of Sernagalia.

"Along the Piave our artillery effectively replied to the enemy's, the fighting being liveliest between Nervesa and Maserada, and dispersed wagon transports and enemy patrols in the neighborhood of Stabiuzzo and Le Grave."

PRESIDENT ASKS ALL TO SAVE FOOD

Proclamation Urges Loyal Americans to Cut Down on Wheat.

U. S. MUST AID THE ALLIES

Hoover Conservation Program Calls for Mixed Cereals to Save Flour—Two Porkless and Two Wheatless Days.

Washington, Jan. 28. — President Wilson issued the following proclamation calling on the country to cut down 30 per cent on its consumption of wheat and wheat products:

PROCLAMATION.

"Many causes have contributed to create the necessity for a more intensive effort on the part of our people to save food in order that we may supply our associates in the war with the sustenance vitally necessary to them in these days of privation and stress.

"The reduced productivity of Europe because of the large diversion of man power to the war, the partial failure of harvests and the elimination of the more distant markets for food stuffs through the destruction of shipping places the burden of their subsistence very largely on our shoulders.

Suggestions for Food Saving.

"The food administration has formulated suggestions which if followed will enable us to meet this great responsibility without any inconvenience on our part.

"In order that we may reduce our consumption of wheat and wheat products by 30 per cent—a reduction imperatively necessary to provide the supply for overseas—wholesalers, jobbers and retailers should purchase and resell to their customers only 70 per cent of the amounts used in 1917.

"All manufacturers of alimentary pastes, biscuits, crackers, pastry and breakfast cereals should reduce their purchases and consumption of wheat and wheat flour to 70 per cent of their 1917 requirements, and all bakers of bread and rolls to 80 per cent of their current requirements.

"Customers should reduce their purchases of wheat products for home preparation to at least 70 per cent of those of last year, or when buying bread should purchase mixed cereal breads from the bakers.

Urges Wheat Substitutes.

"To provide sufficient cereal food, homes, public eating places, dealers and manufacturers should substitute potatoes, vegetables, corn, barley, oats and rice products and the mixed cereal bread and other products of the bakers which contain an admixture of other cereals.

"In order that consumption may be restricted to this extent, Mondays and Wednesdays should be observed as wheatless days each week and one meal each day should be observed as a wheatless meal.

"In both homes and public eating places, in order to reduce the consumption of beef, pork and sheep products, Tuesday should be observed as meatless day in each week and one meatless meal should be observed each day; while, in addition, Saturday in each week should further be observed as a day upon which there should be no consumption of pork products.

Urges Economy in Use of Sugar.

"A continued economy in the use of sugar will be necessary until later in the year.

"It is imperative that all waste and unnecessary consumption of all sorts of foodstuffs should be rigidly eliminated.

"The maintenance of the health and strength of our own people is vitally necessary at this time, and there should be no dangerous restriction of the food supply, but the elimination of every sort of waste and the substitution of other commodities of which we have more abundant supplies for those which we need will in no way impair the strength of our people and will enable us to meet one of the most pressing obligations of the war.

"I, therefore, in the national interest, take the liberty of calling upon every loyal American to take fully to heart the suggestions which are being circulated by the food administration and of begging that they be followed. I am confident that the great body of our women who have labored so loyally in co-operation with the food administration for the success of food conservation will strengthen their efforts and will take it as a part of their burden in this period of national service to see that the above suggestions are observed throughout the land.

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON,
"The White House, January 18, 1918."

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Church Buildings

Baptist Church

The Baptist church was the next to move in the work of building a house of worship. It was not owing to any want of interest in the matter that had induced them to delay this enterprise, but the church was small and in general they were persons in moderate pecuniary means, hence they were for many years without a house exclusively consecrated to the service of the living God.

In the spring of 1841, however, they began to build. They were prospered and in the fall of the same year the house was complete and they entered into it with songs of praise. It was indeed but a humble structure about 30x40 feet upon the ground and one story high.

It stood upon the southeast corner of Logan and Pearl streets, here it remained until about 1849 or 50, when it was found too eccentric to be convenient and it was moved to Ottawa street about the center of the block between Chicago and Logan streets, here it was somewhat enlarged and otherwise improved. It remained here upon this site until 1865, when being no longer adequate to the purpose to which it was built, it was sold to S. Crane Esq., who converted it into a carpenter shop for which it is still used.

In 1864, the society having grown in numbers and in wealth and feeling the want of more sittings, they resolved to build a more commodious house. They purchased a location on the southeast corner of Chicago and Union streets, one of the finest in town, and in the fall of 1865 completed a very tasteful and convenient church at a cost of about $9,000. They have a quiet resting place, are growing in numbers and in influence and the devout passers by say, "We bless you in the name of the Lord."

The Methodist Church

The Methodist church as usual one of the earliest to enter into and occupy this, as yet, new field was the fourth in order, who attempted to build a church edifice. As with the Baptists so with the Methodists, the desire for a convenient sanctuary for a long time preceded its actual enjoyment. This was owing not so much to the want of members, as to the comparative small amount of wealth which it could control. While years passed rapidly and often by and quite a reputable membership, so far as members were concerned, had accumulated, yet the church scarcely furnished one individual of capital.

In 1842 however they resolved to build. A plan was adopted, sufficiently large to meet absolute necessity, but in dimensions and style very little or nothing beyond Heaven smiled on their endeavor and in the fall of the following year, 1843, the humble edifice stood up in its completeness.

It was located upon the southeast corner of Shawnee and Pearl sreets, many who attended its dedication have since gone joyfully up to the house not made with hands. 'Tis now said this man and that man not a few were born there and there are those yet living, who do not forget the tears of joy and gratitude with which they entered for the first time the First Methodist church of Tecumseh.

Here a humble and devout people from Sabbath to Sabbath and on other occassions continued to worship the most high God, till the autumn of 1864, twenty one years afterwards, the society having prepared another more ample habitation for the Lord this house was sold to S. W. Temple, Esq., who still occupies it for a carpenter and joiner's shop, etc. and adjacent grounds for a lumber yard. Thus passeth away the fashion of the world.

In the year of 1862 the former house failing any longer to afford the congregation convenient sittings, the society determined to build a new and on a broader and more commodious plan. For this purpose they procured a site on the northwest corner of Chicago and Pearl streets, a very central and in every way eligible and convenient situation. During the following winter, Mr. A. Burrows, of the city of Adrian, architect, was employed to design and draft a plan. The Rev. E. Hascall was appointed sole superintendent to raise funds and preside over the entire enterprise Messrs. Salman Crane and Alonzo [illegible] were selected and engaged as builders.

On the opening of spring, 1863, ground was broke and the work of laying the foundation commenced. During the following summer and autumn the walls, being of brick, were carried up under the direction of Mr. Cole Esq., an every way skillful and efficient workman in his time.

By early winter the edifice was closed in, and in the opening of spring, the work of finishing up the interior was entered upon.

In the autumn of 1864 the entire building was completed and ready for occupation and provision having been first made for liquidation of all the cost of the house, it was formally dedicated to the service of the one living and true God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Thus was completed an edifice, grateful, we may hope, to Him for whose services it was built, and alike creditable to the society, to the superintendent, to the craftsmen, and to the town in which it stands. As the mountains were around about Jerusaleum, so may the Lord be round about this Tabernacle in all the distant future; and may they who from generation to generation come hither to worship say, "The Lord is in His Holy Tabernacle; The Lord bless thee out of Zion."

TO PUNISH ARMY DOCTORS

Two Medical Officers Convicted of Mistreating Sick Soldiers Face Severe Penalties.

Washington, Jan. 28.—A heavier punishment than mere dismissal from the service was recommended by the war department for two army medical officers recently convicted by courts-martial of mistreating sick soldiers. After reviewing the records of the trials Secretary Baker returned them to the trial courts with the suggestion that sentences of dismissal be reconsidered and that more severe penalties be imposed.

One case was that of First Lieut. John G. Dwyer, medical corps, on hospital duty at Camp Funston. The other case was that of First Lieut. Charles W. Cole, Camp Beauregard, in charge of the base hospital.

Secretary Baker has asked Senator Chamberlain for the names of officers charged in letters to the senator with neglect of sick men that the cases may be investigated and punishment meted out, if the officers are guilty.

Thre Killed by Train.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Blinded by the driving snow, three men were instantly killed when struck by a passenger train of the New York Central while removing snow from the tracks here. Two others were injured. The dead: Frank Burkhardt, Paul Bowman, Fest Goeltewski.

Why White Corn Is Cheapest Food.

Those who have made careful study of the nutritive properties of various grains and foods, agree that white corn is the most satisfactory. It is also the cheapest. Figures quoted by the Literary Digest show that one pound of cornmeal, hominy, or grits is equal in food value to one pound of wheat flour, one pound of rice, one and one-half pounds of cheese, two and three-quarter pounds of round steak, two dozen eggs, one-half peck of potatoes, six pints of milk.

MAJ. GEN. WOOD WOUNDED IN ARM WHILE IN FRANCE

American Commander Injured by Accidental Explosion While at Front.

TWO OTHER OFFICERS HURT

Lieut. Col. C. E. Kilbourne and Maj. K. A. Joyce Among Those Injured—Five French Soldiers Are Killed.

Washington, Jan. 28.—General Pershing cabled the war department that Major General Wood had been slightly wounded in the arm by an accidental explosion in France which killed five French soldiers and slightly injured two other American officers, Lieut. Charles E. Kilbourne and Maj. Kenyon A. Joyce.

General Wood was on an observation tour.

Five Wounded in Action.

General Pershing also cabled that five infantrymen of the United States expeditionary forces were wounded in action January 21 and 22.

Secretary Baker announced the accident in this statement:

"A cable dispatch from the headquarters of General Pershing states that an accidental explosion occurring Sunday killed five French soldiers and slightly injured Major General Wood in the arm, Lieut. Col. Charles E. Kilbourne in the eye and Maj. Kenyon A. Joyce in the arm."

No Details Announced.

It is understood the message was brief and gave no further details. General Wood's tour would carry him both to the front and to the American training camps behind the lines, but there is no hint as to where the accident occurred.

All the divisional commanders have been or will be sent to Europe for brief periods.

General Wood, commanding Camp Funston, Kan., went over several weeks ago.

Once Staff Chief.

General Wood is one of the most notable officers in the American army. He was chief of staff from July 16, 1910, to April, 1913. As commander of the department of the East he had a share in the early war activities, but lately he has been assigned particularly to training part of the National army. It was for observation that he went to France.

Remarkable Career.

General Wood's career has been remarkable, in that he entered the service as an assistant surgeon. This was in 1886. Some years later congress awarded him a medal of honor "for distinguished conduct in the campaign against the Apache Indians in 1886, while serving as a medical and line officer in Captain Lawton's expedition." Wood became commanding colonel of the First United States volunteer cavalry—the "Rough Riders"—early in 1898. He was promoted to brigadier general of volunteers three months later for his service at Las Guasimas and San Juan Hill. December, 1898, he became major general of volunteers. For a time he was out of the volunteer service, then re-entered, and in 1903 he became a major general of the regular army.

Was Governor of Cuba.

General Wood was governor of Cuba from December 12, 1899, until the government was transferred to the Cuban people, in May, 1902. Next year he went on duty in the Philippines and for three years was governor of Moro province. For two years—1906-1908—he commanded the Philippines division.

Washington, Jan. 28.—President Wilson's cold showed some improvement, but he remained indoors.

HEAVY GUARD AT U. S. SHIPYARDS

Government Acts Promptly at News of Plot to Delay Shipping Program.

WORKERS TO BE IN UNIFORM

Labor Leaders Will Aid in Work of Weeding Out Enemies—12 Killed in Explosion at Naval Torpedo Station.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The government has been informed of widespread German plots to burn and destroy shipyards where the nation's fleets are being built.

Armed guards have been placed at all shipyards on order from Washington, and within the last few hours the word went out all over the country by telegraph to double them. Heroic efforts are to be made beginning today to smash the German propaganda that is corrupting the workingmen and holding back ship building.

That the situation threatens the success of the shipping board program is no longer concealed.

Hurley Takes Drastic Steps.

The shipping board is acting vigorously. Chairman Hurley has announced that Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, who has been in charge of ship production, has been made assistant general manager of the fleet corporation under Charles Piez of Chicago.

Zones are to be created around all shipyards, which from now on are to be under military law.

All workmen in the shipyards will be placed in uniform and converted into a great industrial army of patriotism, whose efforts to produce more ships will be recognized as on a plane with the fighting services of soldiers and sailors.

The shipyard workers are not to be enlisted, but the details provide for their organization along military lines by officers of the army to improve discipline, produce an esprit de corps, and make it easier to weed out the alien enemies insidiously undermining the whole industrial fabric in the shipyards.

The big labor leaders will begin this week to help dig the German spies out of their hiding places in the ranks of labor.

In connection with the new peril to the shipyards military authorities arrested two suspects in connection with the mysterious fire which on Saturday [illegible] Jersey guards.

$50,000,000 Is Spy Loss.

Fresh emphasis was placed on the spy peril by an announcement that "in the nine months of war enemy incendiaries have destroyed $50,000,000 worth of property in this country, including munitions factories, grain elevators, stock yards, oil property, marine properties and other industries vital to war efficiency."

This statement was made by Richard M. Hurd, chairman of the board of trustees of the American Defense society.

The society says it has evidence that disguised enemy insurance companies are obtaining information of great value and transmitting it to Germany.

12 Killed in Navy Blast.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 28.—Twelve men were killed in the explosion in the bomb-proof magazine of the naval torpedo station here, it was learned.

Capt. Edward L. Beach in command at Goat Island, where the explosion took place, declared the investigation will be one of the most sweeping character. He admitted the possibility of a spy plot will be thoroughly sifted.

The known dead:

William Caswell, T. E. Wyatt, John H. Connolly, David J. Sullivan, John F. Murphy, John A. Andrea, Joseph Frasier, George N. Spooner, Joseph Malooza, all of Newport, and Joseph J. Pelletier, George Giblin and Timothy Fitzgerald, all of Fall River.

Seven men were injured and are in the naval hospital. They are:

Frank Vetri, Joseph Sullivan, George Buchanan, Joseph Walth, James Mahoney, Fred Anderson, all of Newport, and Private Frederick Mills, Marine.

At least three are missing: G. H. Bailey of Newport, Charles Galleaux and an unknown Italian.

All men in bombproof No. 2, where the explosion occurred, were killed. There was no loose powder in the place, it was declared. Twenty-five thousand cartridge cases were being dried, each containing 35 grains of fulminate of mercury.

DROP BOMBS ON HOSPITALS

Allied Wounded Target of Austrian Aviators—Institution at Castel, France, Attacked.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Bombing of allied hospitals by Austrian aviators in recent raids was reported to Red Cross headquarters here in cablegrams received from Robert Perkins, chairman of the American relief commission to Italy. A hospital at Castel, France, not far from the Italian line, was damaged severely, he said, during a recent attack.

20 HURT IN SUBWAY CRASH

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 28.—Mathew Torke, thirty-eight, a German, was arrested here carrying photographs on his person of two western fortifications.

How Does a Soldier Feel in a Life-and-Death Crisis?

He was caught—like a rat in a trap—with only one chance in a million of coming out alive. He thought of——

What does a soldier think of in a life-and-death crisis? How does he feel? What does he do? What is the millionth chance that he takes to escape?

While trembling and hot from the experiences they have gone through, over two hundred men—airmen, trench raiders, submarine commanders, grenade throwers—have told what they saw, heard and felt. To read these stories of personal adventure is to get an entirely new viewpoint of the war.

A Close-Up of the War

Newspapers and magazines treat the war along broad, general lines—they speak of nations and armies. But these stories tell you about the most daring, audacious and heroic deeds of MEN—individuals. They tell of exploits which even now you think never could happen. No professional author in the history of literature could tell such stories, for no man's imagination could think them up. Yet each of these stories is true—and so startling that the mind simply stands agape at wonder. They would thrill a man with blood as cold as a fish.

LABOR DISPUTE ENDED

Packers and Men Reach Agreement at Washington.

Will Submit Questions of Hours and Wages—Thousands of Workers Affected.

Washington, Jan. 28.—An amicable settlement of the Chicago packinghouse labor dispute was reached. The packers win their contention for an open shop during the war, but the agreement provides that there shall be no discrimination against union members.

An arbitrator is to be appointed by the secretary of labor, and to this individual will be referred questions of hours and wages. The awards of the arbitrator, not yet appointed, will be effective as of January 14.

Under the agreement, grievance committees appointed by the workers will be received by the employers, whether their membership consists of union or nonunion men. It affects many thousands of workers in Chicago, East St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, St. Joseph, Omaha, Denver, St. Paul and Sioux City.

Suggestions of the union men that the government should take over the packing plants for the war are not affected in averting a strike. President Wilson still has the proposals before him, but in receiving them he said other methods of dealing with the situation would be considered first.

There were 18 questions at issue between the packers and their union employees. Those concerning the rights of union members, wages and hours were regarded as the most important. Six of the eighteen go to arbitration, including demands for $1 a day flat increase in wages, equal pay for women with men, a guaranteed number of hours' work, a basic eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime and double pay for Sundays and holidays.

It was agreed that there should be no discrimination against union members either in employment or in distribution of work, this clause taking the place of the union men's demands for preferential employment of union men. The companies agree to provide sanitary lunchrooms, lavatories and other improved working conditions.

Differences between the packers and their union employees reached a crisis just before Christmas, after a strike vote had been taken which was said to have resulted 98 per cent in favor of a cessation of work if necessary to force betterment of wages and working conditions.

We are all soldiers serving Uncle Sam's great army. True we have not been called to arms, but we are all members of that great army, just as much as the boys who have left us for actual service, for we are doing work for the Red Cross, paying our money into the war funds, conserving food that our Allies may have enough to keep their organization up at home and at the front, etc.

Now comes the order from our Commander-in-Chief that we must cut our wheat consumption one-third. The food administration card asks every loyal American to help win the war by maintaining rigidly as a minimum of saving the following program:

Have two wheatless days (Monday and Wednesday) in every week and one wheatless meal in every day.

Have one meatless day (Tuesday) in every week and one meatless meal every day. Have two porkless days (Tuesday and Saturday) in every week.

Make every day a fat saving day (butter, lard, lard substitutes, etc.)

Make every day a sugar saving day.

As loyal soldiers we must obey the order. It may not be possible to obey it in its entirety, but as near so as possible. We have the assurance from President Wilson that enough will be retained at home to amply take care of our needs so we must trust him and do our full duty.

We will soon have the "victory loaf" for bread as the food administration has decreed that all bakers must begin to make bread containing a 5 per cent. substitute for flour and must increase to substitute for wheat flour until a 20 per cent. substitute is reached February 24th. At the same time grocers will sell householders wheat flour only when the purchaser buys an equal amount of some other cereal.

We may not like the "victory loaf" very well, but we must make it do. America must make up for the shortage, in wheat and other foods, that exists in the countries occupied by our Allies. In so doing we are firing a broadside at Germany and driving in a mighty wedge toward victory.

TAKE CHANCE ON HAPPINESS

Grasp the Mood as It Passes and Join the Great Throng Wearing Smiling Countenances.

We were coming home from a dinner party together, my friend and I. It was late at night and rather rainy, and as we sat together in the damp almost empty trolley car, my friend spoke very suddenly and seriously writes Margaret E. Sangster in the Christian Herald.

"Just now," she said, "I've a chance to be very happy. But I'm almost afraid to take it!"

The rain beat, in a futile manner against the car windows. I listened to it for a moment before I spoke.

"Why?" I questioned at last—"why are you afraid to take your chance—to be happy?"

"Because," answered my friend, and her eyes looked far away—past the car and the rain, even—"because I'm afraid that it won't last!"

When it is autumn, and the leaves are crimson and gold-colored and very beautiful, we know, even as we admire them, that they will be brown and withered some day. But that does not keep us from loving their glorious colors.

It's like that, too, with flowers, and springtime, and the blue sky of summer. We know that the flowers will fade away and that springtime will go and that there will be winter storm clouds where there were once sparkles of sun.

And so this is the answer to my friend and to other friends of mine:

Never be afraid to grasp at happiness because it may not last. For happiness is as beautiful as the flowers of spring and the sky of summer and the vivid leaves of autumn. And even though it might not last, happiness is too beautiful to pass by with never a glance.

And then, as the philosopher said and as we know, don't be sure, as you take your chance at happiness, that it will not stay. Look around your circle of friends, look at your business associates, look at the casual crowds that you pass every day and you'll see that the average of happy faces is rather high. You'll see more smiles, I think, than frowns; more merry faces than sad ones!

Don't be afraid to take a chance at happiness because you fear that it is too beautiful to last. Take your chance, instead, arguing that happiness is too beautiful not to last!

Silks No Longer Luxuries.

Silver lace is said to be easier to obtain than table linen, and to cost less. Peltry, it is claimed, is got with greater ease and at a lower price than leather for shoes. Velvet frocks and silk underwear are within the price of the small wage earner, whereas cotton stockings are an extravagance rarely indulged in. All of which goes to explain the fact that women may be dressed in the splendid fabrics of Elizabethan days and still feel that they cannot afford their ordinary number of shoes and that they must give up underwear that needs starch.

COMMUNICATION

PATRIOTISM

Editor Tecumseh Herald:

In last Friday's Herald there was published a letter from an "Observer," commending the Seniors on their broadmindedness in giving up their receptions in order to give a part of their money to the Red Cross. This is as it should be. I wish to join with him in taking off my hat to such a loyal organization. With such a spirit prevading our young men and women we most certainly will win the war. But—

All the rest of the letter was wrong. The Junior Hop committee of the University of Michigan on Monday, Jan. 14, voted to abolish the "J. Hop" with NO SUBSTITUTE. On Thursday, Jan. 17, the committee on student affairs, which is appointed by the Student Council, the governing body, consisting wholly of and chosen entirely from the students of the various departments and classes of the college, adopted the following resolutions regarding the action of the commitee:

"The committee on student affairs approves the action and appreciates the spirit of the Junior Hop committee and commends the sentiment of the student body in setting aside personal pleasure as a matter of patriotic service. In view of this excellent sentiment the committee feels confident that the same spirit will control the conduct of all student recreations at this and future times during the war."

The students were not requested to do this, but did it on their own initiative. Thus, our "Observer," through lack of information, has grievously erred. The High School Seniors have shown themselves to be of the right stuff, and they need have no fear of Higher Education. They can still go to college and sing "The Star Spangled Banner" without compunction. Higher education still "broadens the mind;" Higher Education still continues to "practice patriotism." Higher Education still looks to books for its one firm foundation, our critical "Observer" to the contrary notwithstanding. The defination of that which "is not true education" therefore does not apply to such colleges as the U. of M. Furthermore, it does not content itself with being misinformed.

PLEASURE OF BEING NEEDED

To Know You Can Lend Assistance to Some One Greatly Lessens the Strain of Discontent.

"I'm really worried about Miss Eustacia," Mrs. Jessup declared. "Of course everyone knows that it was hard for her to lose her savings and go into the home, but the home's pleasant, and she has a big room all to herself; and we are always sending her things or inviting her round to tea to show that she isn't left out; yet she goes round with a face as long as my arm, and the tears come into her eyes if you look at her. Really, I'm almost out of patience. I wouldn't have believed it of Miss Eustacia."

Mrs. Crane looked out into the yard. She was a plump little woman with tender, luminous brown eyes that had a way of seeing far into the heart at times.

"What pretty little tea parties Miss 'Stacia used to give," she said musingly. "She made a different 'feel' about them somehow."

"I know it," Mrs. Jessup agreed. "I don't know exactly why, unless because she was so happy over them herself that she made everyone else feel the same way."

"And how many summers was it that she took to her home a little fresh air girl?" asked Mrs. Crane, with an air of innocent reminiscence. "Last time it was a mother and a sick baby, wasn't it?"

"I guess it must be full as much as fifteen. I hadn't thought of that before, but I suppose she does miss that!"

Mrs. Crane's soft eyes shone with sudden passion.

"Miss them? Things like that—giving things—were her life, Ellen Jessup! Do you suppose that being invited to tea and having flowers carried to her are going to make up to Miss 'Stacia for having nothing to give?"

"But—we haven't anything we want!" Mrs. Jessup said bewilderdly.

"Exactly. That's what's breaking her heart."

"But you can't make yourself want things when you don't," Mrs. Jessup argued.

"I suppose not," Mrs. Crane said with a sigh. "Well, I must be going along. Run over soon, Ellen."

At the turn of the road Mrs. Crane met Lauretta King. The girl nodded with sullen brows. Mrs. Crane stopped.

"What's the matter, Lauretta?" she asked.

"Matter? I want Miss Eustacia, that's what's the matter. I used to run in every day or two when things were hard at home, and she'd help me through, but now—"

"Have you told her so?" Mrs. Crane asked quickly. "Yes, Lauretta, have you?"

"Told her? I haven't been up there. She'll be too busy with all those people."

Mrs. Crane even gave her a push. "Go, Lauretta; go this minute. She's been eating her heart because no one needed her. And tell her that I'm coming tomorrow. I want her—just her—to help me do a dozen things. Hurry, Lauretta!"

But Lauretta was already gone.—Youth's Companion.

Search for Oil in Britain.

Certain eminent American geologists, the house of commons was told lately, hold that it is well worth while to spend a considerable sum of money in exploring for possible petroleum deposits in Great Britain, according to a London correspondent. The speaker, a spokesman for the board of trade, added:

"It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of finding oil in this country. We cannot yet say that it is here, but it is certainly worth looking for.

"Oil is almost more important at this moment than anything else. You may have men, munitions and money, but if you have no oil you are without the greatest motive power we are using."

A SUDDEN CALL

Mrs. Jas. H. Clark dies While Standing on Her Back Porch.

About ten o'clock Monday morning the word went over the phone that Mrs. Jas. H. Clark had just passed away. She was on the back porch of her home waiting for her son Hollis, who had gone for a shovel to clear the walk. His wife, looking out of the window, saw the mother lying in the snow. Her screams called Hollis and when he attempted to lift his mother he found life was extinct. Medical aid was of no avail as she was evidently dead when she fell.

Mrs. Clark has been suffering from a goiter for some time and this, without doubt, was the cause of her sudden taking away.

Carrie House was born in Clinton 59 years ago, the daughter of Morris and Cecil House. She was united in marriage to Jas. H. Clark, February 13, 1879, at her home in Clinton and has resided in Tecumseh since that time. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and two sons Wesley and Hollis both residents of Tecumseh, Hollis being at home and a brother Chas. House of Clinton.

The funeral will be held at the home Wednesday at 10 a. m., Dr. W. J. Balmer officiating. Burial in Clinton.

MRS. JOSEPH MARSH

Mrs. Dora Marsh passed away at her home on the afternoon of January 28th, 1918, after an illness of two weeks of pneumonia

Dora McConnell was born in Adrian township November 12, 1858, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beers McConnell. She was united in marriage to Joseph Marsh in the First Baptist church, Adrian, September 25, 1877, moving to Tecumseh from Springville in the spring of 1898. Mr. Marsh died in Ashville, N. C., December 31, 1904.

She leaves to mourn her five children, Emmett of Sand Lake, Albert and Eslie of Chicago, Ovid and Esther of Tecumseh, 2 sisters, Mrs. Hattie Westfall of Ypsilanti, Mrs. Maria Brazee of Adrian, also two brothers of Adrian, David and Mathew McConnell, a half sister, Mrs. Susie Simmons and a half brother, Eugene McConnell also of Adrian. Mrs. Marsh was a member of the Episcopal church and fo the O. E. S.

The funeral will be private and will be held Thursday afternoon at 1:30 from the home on East Logan St., Rev. B. J. Baxter of the Episcopal church will officiate and burial in the family lot at Brookside.

REXFORD GADDY

Military Honors Given the Soldier Boy.

The remains of Rexford Gaddy of Co. B, who passed away at Waco, Texas, Sunday, Jan. 20, arrived in Tecumseh Saturday noon and the funeral was held at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon.

There was a good attendance to pay their last tokens of respect to this young soldier who had given his life for his country. A fine body of men under command of Gen. F. B. Wood acted as military escort to the grave, where taps were sounded by Chas. Skinner and a volley of musketry was fired over the grave. Rev. Balmer gave a most eloquent talk speaking as friend to a friend, paying tribute to this young soldier, whose form lay in the casket before him. Dr. Hartzog made the prayer his voice choking as he thought of the many brave boys who are giving their all for the cause of liberty and right. Arthur Harding rendered two solos and then the procession formed for the march to the grave.

I could not think, as he went away
With the setting sun that winter day,
Of death at all—but of fighting past
And a soldier come to his own at last.
There was no gloom, but the suns last ray
Warm on the Flag that about him lay,
And I knew as thoughhe had whispered me,
That it was not death—It was victory.

Fundamental.

He looked at his wrist watch.

"Will you marry me?" he said. She blushed.

"There is really no time to lose. You see, I have only 24 hours' notice. I must report at headquarters tomorrow at nine. We sail for France in three days. Will you marry me?"

"I don't mind," she said. "Only—I should like to make one condition."

"And this is?"

"I have dreamed for years of getting married; but not in this way. But I will marry you if—when you return—you will propose to me all over again, and we can go on a honeymoon, and I can be courted, and—well, you know, I am sure!"

"All right," he said with a smile. "To be honest with you, dearest, I thought I was going to escape all that—but I see it's no use. I might have known better. Even a war like this cannot keep a woman from having her own way—especially about a wedding."—Life.

Tit for Tat.

The subject of the Sunday sermon at one of the uptown New York churches was the duties of the citizen in time of war. The need of conservation of all foodstuffs was emphasized, and among the persons who gave ear was a small boy, replete in Sunday finery. He sat with his grandfather, a stout, rather red-faced man, who was obviously devoted to the youngster. "And at this time," said the clergyman, in the course of his sermon, "it is the small sacrifice which means so much to the good of the nation generally. There is a shortage of sugar. Well, let us eat less candy, for instance." The stout man nudged his grandson. "It is time for sober, clear-headed action on the part of all," continued the clergyman; "and when there are so many war needs for alcohol, why, for instance, should any man now partake of spirituous liquors?" Then the small boy nudged his grandfather.

LECTURE GIVEN BY RABBI HERSHMAN OF DETROIT

At the Meeting of the Monday Club Yesterday Afternoon

The ladies of the Monday Club were indeed fortunate to have with them Monday afternoon Rabbi Hershman of Detroit. The business places being closed allowed a number of men to enjoy the treat and the clergy of the village were also present, and each man and woman there listened intently.

To start the program Mrs. R. S. Moore sang an English ballad, then Mrs. Fred Dickinson, the club president, introduced the rabbi in a little speech assuring him of the club's pleasure in his visit.

Rabbi Herchman's talk was in excellent English, showing him a great scholar and well accustomed to the public platform.

He told of the predjudice borne the Jew because we do not understand him and congratulated the club in their year's study of the Jew and their broad-mindedness in attempting to understand him.

His topic was "Zionism," which he defines as "liberation." He told how his people who number 14,000,000 over the world, have been crushed, but want to live the life of a normal people. They want to make Palestine the center of their religion, to be their own home country, but one-fifth only of the Jews could live in that country.

The Jewish national genius which in the past ages was so brilliant, now lies dormant, slumbering, when formerly they considered themselves a super-nation. The history of the whole human race can produce no such genius as Israel.

In all the ages men have strived to be like their gods, then the Jew comes on the scene with the one God. The nations of antiquity all looked back on their past greatness the retrospective view, and the Jew takes the prospective view instead.

The difference in the days we keep, whether Saturday or Sunday, is nothing but custom, it amounts to nothing vital. We ask not what a man is, but what he does. That is what counts.

The Jewish special genius is not at work today. The eagle who soared Heavenward does it no longer. It's wings are clipped today, but the Jew is a person of adaptability. Heaven holds no greater tragedy than genius going to waste.

He told how Russia was the house of bondage to the 7,000,000 Jews within her borders. How in Germany, also in Roumania, the anti-Semetic feeling is so strong. The effect of persecution shows itself on the perecuted and persecutor, but give them their center in Palestine and they will have a new message.

At the close of his lecture many questions were asked by the students of Hebrew and Jewish history in the audience. These questions Rabbi Hershman answered at length, explaining the plan of settling Palestine and giving the names of Jewish gentlemen who are doing their bit, That were it not for Lord Redding and Prof. Weiteman, England could not go on with the war. Lord Redding, with his millions, is now British high commissioner to the United States and the professor a chemist whose work with explosives has been invaluable. Out of Rabbi Hershman's congregation alone have gone into the service over 120 young men.

The plan of the Palestine settlemen originated in 1875 when a group of students went from Russia to that country and started the colony in spite of fearful persecution. They talk nothing but Hebrew and read but little else. In the forty years there has only been one case of theft, so they have no police force They give woman her right of suffrage.

The Jew has given three contributions to the world: The church, the Psalms and the founder of our religion. He only lightly touched on the Reformed Jew, showing it was not a favorite topic.

He says there are several farming schools in this country, and they are primarily a farming people, but are so cowed in the old countries they fear to leave their kind here so we don't have so many following that profession.

His speech was very instructive and couched in the beautiful language, was one of the finest of its sort heard in Tecumseh in years.

Mrs. Moore sang a second song and the session of the club was over.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Women have taken the places of all men letter carriers in Paris.

Women are working in section gangs on the Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The French "garcon" of the boulevard cafes of Paris has disappeared and his place is taken by a girl.

Three hospitals have been established in England for war victims by the Russian Grand Duchess Georgievna.

Practically all the work in some departments of Belgian munition factories is done by girls.

Hundreds of Russian girls, emulating their sisters of the Battalion of Death, have joined their country's navy.

It is estimated that at least 20,000 nurses will be needed for service in hospitals at home and abroad during the next year, according to the report of Surgeon General William C. Gorgas, United States army.

An urgent appeal comes from Major Murphy, head of the American Red Cross in France, to the women of this country for more surgical dressings and bandages.

The Canadian government is contemplating increase of the allowance of wives of soldiers from $20 to $25 a month.

Records show that the demand for fur coats and sets by women of England and France has increased enormously since the beginning of the war.

Practical and attractive peasant costumes have been made in America for the women in ruined districts of northern France.

The first American woman to qualify as a sharpshooter, Mrs. Jackson Morris, is instructing soldiers at Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss., in the best methods of shooting.

If Not Call Ticket Agent Ziehr and Tell Him Why

George J. Ziehr has received a letter from the general passenger agent of the New York Central requesting him to advise him of the general feeling about Tecumseh in regard to the change in time of Train No. 15 southbound which formerly arrived in Tecumseh at 3:01 p. m. and which has been changed to 3:56 p. m. G. R. TAYLOR OF CONE DRAWS 65 DAYS IN DETROIT HOUSE OF CORRECTION Appeared Before Judge Hosmer Friday, on Charges of Getting Money on False Pretenses.

Glenn R. Taylor, alias George Taylor of Cone was arraigned before Justice Hosmer, Friday afternoon on complaint made against him by Wm. Palman of the Peoples Store, who charged him with getting goods under false pretenses.

On January 11th, the complaint reads, Taylor came in to his store purchasing $2 worth of goods, tendering a check for $25.00 signed Geo. Taylor and drawn on the Milan State Bank of Milan. The check was accepted and the balance over the purchase price, $23.00, was paid to him in cash. In due time the check was returned from the Milan Bank with a notation that there were no funds to cover the check.

Mr. Palman secured a warrant for Taylors arrest with the result that he was located and brought into court, Friday afternoon for his examination. After hearing the charge Taylor pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs amounting to $15 and 65 days in the Detroit house of correction. If the fine and costs were not paid soon, he would have to serve 90 days.

"THE WHIP"

When "The Whip" was first shown privately in New York city to a little group of leading film men, the verdict was unanimous that here was a wonderful picture.

"It was everything that a motion picture should have and none of the things that a motion picture should not have," said one man. "It has been superbly directed and the photography is perfect. This is a wonderful production."

This opinion is being echoed by hundreds of thousands of people in all parts of the country who are seeing this memorable production. They are being immensely entertained by the consistently, intense and wholly pleasing story; they are being amazed by the magnitude and immensity of the big scenes; they are being thrilled by the exciting train wreck and the automobile wreck and the exciting horse race at Saratoga and they are leaving the theatres after seeing "The Whip" declaring that it is the world's biggest motion picture.

The people of Tecumseh will have the opportunity of adding their chorus of approval to the general verdict of all people who like good entertainment, for "The Whip" will be presented at the Bradley Opera House this week Wednesday, January 30th.

BLOCKADED

Friday afternoon the railroad about three miles south of town became so drifted with snow that the freight train going north was blockaded and could not proceed until a company of men with their shovels cleared the track.

This is the first time in a number of years that they have had any trouble of this kind but this winter has proved the exception to every rule. The 3:56 train was still at the depot at 6 o'clock and the 5:35 was over an hour late. Saturday morning the snow plow went over the road again.

Traveling by rail is quite uncertain for one never knows when they may start or when they may arrive.

25 YEARS AGO

In looking over our file of 25 years ago this week we find a few references to the cold weather, which was visiting Tecumseh at that time.

"Not in the history of this generation, has Lake Erie been frozen as it is now. There is one unbroken field of ice from Detroit river to Put-in-Gay. Fisherman have driven out 15 miles and report it solid all the way and extending as far as they could see. The entire Erie archipelego is frozen up and teams are crossing the mouth of the Detroit river. In another place we find, "Hundreds of Quail have frozen to death in the late severe cold weather.

If this is a January thaw what woud a freeze up be like?

John Keeney was a business passenger for Toledo Monday.

Miss Lulu Stahler is back on duty at the Co-Operative office after her recent illness.

M. A. C. IS FIRST OF COLLEGES TO ATTAIN IDEAL OF WAR DEPARTMENT

Every Student and Coed on Campus Now Required to Take Physical Training or Military Drill

East Lansing, Mich. The war department's ideal of what a twentieth century college ought to be-one that provides thorough physical and military training along with the intellectual-has been attained by the M. A. C. through co-operation between the department of athletics and the department of military science and tactics. Under a plan worked out by Coach Chester L. Brewer, director of athletics and Major P. G. Wrightson, U. S. A., professor of military science every student in college is now taking military drill, exercising daily in gym classes or participating in athletics.

All freshmen, sophmores and juniors who are physically fit drill with the cadet regiment and exercises also, while all seniors who are not drilling are required to work in the gymnasium classes or take part in athletics. Men who through physical disability are unable to take the war training, work in special classes where as far as is possible their defects are corrected.

Director Brewer, who is in charge of the department of athetics, is the man whom the war department recently offered full direction of all physical training with the United Sates army in France, while Major Wrightson is recognized throughout the country as one of the collegiate professors of military science.

Make The Most Of Your Corn Crop.

Every silo in the country pays for itself this season under present corn conditions.

Do you intend to erect a silo this year? If so, what kind?

We sell one of the best silos made, the Saginaw Steel-Built Redwood.

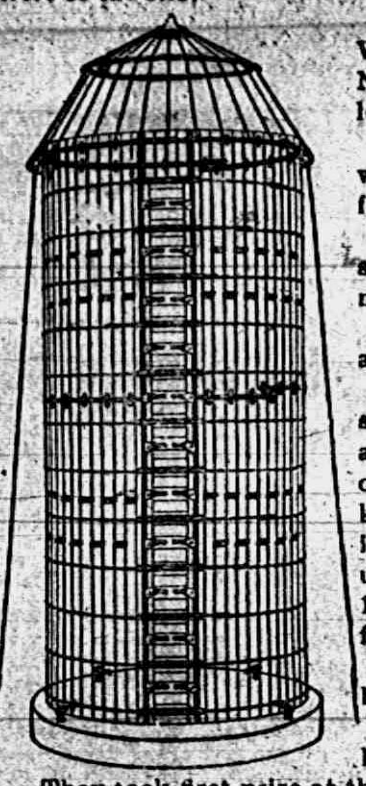
In times past, farmers have bought tile silos because they were afraid the wood silos would blow down or they did not want the trouble of tightening hoops.

These objections to wood silos are now done away with.

Look at the cut below. See the Angle Steel Rib around the middle outside and the top inside. It is firmly fastened to every other stave. The sidewise pressure of the strongest wind cannot bend this angle when curved to the circle of the silo.



Redwood does not shrink. When you use Redwood you NEVER have to tighten or loosen hoops.

Notice also the steel framework and All-Steel Doorframe.

See the Copper-bearing steel spline-dowel which makes it doubly strong.

See how the base-anchors are fastened to the hoop.

This silo has the largest sale of any silo made. It costs a little more than yellow-pine or fir, but will last no one knows how long. There are instances of redwood being used in the open for nearly 100 years and still being free from decay.

The Bidwell Stock Farm has two of these silos, 16x86.

Henry Ford has eight on his farm.

They took first prize at the Panama Exposition.

Do not wait until summer or fall to buy a silo for several reasons.

Prices are continually advancing.

Shipments are continually getting worse.

If you you wait until summer or fall you will pay more money even if you can secure a silo at all or get a carpenter to erect it. Last year some farmers who gave late orders had their corn frosted before they could find a carpenter to put their silo up.

We suggest you write us at once for full description and prices, or better still, call on us. Give your order now and get your silo at the early prices, get it shipped and put up early, then you will not have to worry over delays this fall. These early orders do not begin to draw interest until August.

BUY A BUICK

Why should we have chosen to represent the Buick line in preference to all other makes of cars?

BECAUSE in past seasons during which time we have handled no cars whatever, an excellent opportunity has been offered us to compare any and all makes of cars and to pass an unbiased opinion both from a user's and dealer's view point.

By so doing we have learned that the majority of cars are what the garage man term a one year or one season car and forever afterwards a REPAIR SHOP DELIGHT. The dealer is obliged to be continually offering apologies and making adjustments. The agency eventually disappears and the car is left without a home.

The BUICK however, one of the oldest agencies in Tecumseh has survived them all. There is surely some good reason for this.

FINALLY we have chosen to represent the BUICK line because it has proven to us conclusively time and again, in comparison with all other makes of cars, that a BUICK, month to month, year in and year out, mile for mile, requires less service, will outlast and outwear, and out-distance with less upkeep, less expense, and with far less yearly depreciation, dollar for dollar, any and all other make of automobile.

A BUICK owner is invariably an enthusiastic BUICK BOOSTER.

Moral—BUY A BUICK.

An Aviator's Farewell.

Monsignor de Gibergues, bishop of Valence, has lost his seventh nephew in the war—M. Anthelme de Gibergues, amongst whose papers was found the following moving letter of farewell addressed to his parents:

"If one day, with wings broken in the blue heavens, I fall to the earth and return to God, may these lines carry to my father and mother the last thoughts, desires and dreams of the son they loved so tenderly. As my body nears the earth, my soul will soar to unknown heights, and the separation will be victory. It will be a full-hearted 'Magnificent;' adoring prayer of expiation for what I have left undone rather than for what I have done. And lastly it will be a suppliant cry which cannot but be heard for everlasting life, for strength and comfort for those I leave behind, and for mercy and glory for beloved France, the coming of the Kingdom of God."

His Waterloo.

"There is a fellow they call the 'Miracle Man.'"

"Why?"

"Because they say he can do anything."

"I'll bet there's one thing he can't do."

"What's that?"

"I'll bet he can't convince a woman that she snores in her sleep."

PLUM PUDDING BOY

By WILLA BLAINE.

It was not without a struggle with his pride that Harry Tilston decided to make his plum puddings the summer after he graduated from college. He had not decided as yet on his future career, but since any kind of a start in business as well as the law studies that he sometimes contemplated, was more or less dependent upon the possession of some amount of capital, he accepted his mother's proposition to make plum puddings.

It wasn't because Harry was exactly ashamed of plum puddings that he had hesitated—it was because of Genevieve and Harriette and Mildred and Laura—girls in general, rather than any girl in particular.

Bradley, the small town where Harry Tilson had been brought up, boasted no very definite younger social set, but, so long as there were pretty girls like Mildred Brewer and Laura Stevens in a town, and any young unmarried men, there was sure to be an occasional picnic down the river, an "evening entertainment." Sunday afternoon strolls through the woods or buggy rides into the adjacent counties.

In other years, on Harry Tilson's short visits home in vacation time, he had figured rather prominently in these diversions. He wondered whether Laura and Mildred and the other girls would be inclined to laugh at him if he made plum pudding.

One of the consignments of materials having been delayed in shipment, Harry sauntered forth one morning to purchase from the local grocer a sack of flour, so that the day's energy need not be thrown away for lack of materials. He passed Laura Stevens, who called to him: "Hello, Mr. Tilston, I don't suppose you'll have time to come to the picnic to-morrow, now you've taken to making puddings with your mother?"

Mildred Brewer, gayly decked out in a flowered hat and a many-ruffled dress, in spite of the early hour of the day, was giving her mother's provision order at the store when Harry reached there.

"My word, Harry," she said. "Don't mind my saying so, but I certainly thought you'd have got some sort of an opening from your studies at college without having to come back here to Bradley to take up pudding making. Honest, Harry, are you going to do it all summer?"

The rest of the morning Harry beat the pudding batter with unusual fervor, so much so that little Molly, the "hired girl," whom Mrs. Tilston had recently employed, watched him with something like alarm written on her girlish young features.

"Do you see anything so very funny about a man making puddings?" he asked her abruptly.

"Funny? Why, of course not," she said with conviction. "Why, some of the most successful business men in the country are what they are because they managed to make something like puddings better and in larger numbers than their competitors."

So the summer passed—the strangest, hardest yet, in many ways, most satisfactory summer that Harry had ever passed. As a result of several trips to the big city he received orders for four times as many puddings as his mother had ever made before.

The last pudding had been packed away, and still Mrs. Tilston had not had the heart to mention to Molly that, because the work was ended, she would not need her services any longer.

Harry had hurried off after their simple supper for the usual walk in the hemlocks, and within 15 minutes of the time they had left the house Harry was filled with the wonderful consciousness that the girl whom he regarded as the most womanly and the sweetest of all the girls he had ever known had agreed to be his wife.

"I never thought a college man like you would marry a poor little hired girl," she told him.

"And I never thought such a nice girl as you are would marry a man whose idea of starting a career was to make plum puddings in his mother's kitchen," added Harry with a laugh.

Molly clasped and unclasped her hands nervously. "Perhaps I look differently at this plum pudding project than most people," she began. "In fact, it was those plum puddings that made me come to work for you. I'll have to tell you how it was. Really and truly, I am Mary Louise Juxtonbury, daughter of Juxtonbury, the baker—"

Harry ill concealed a whistle of surprise, for that was the name of one of the leading financiers of the state, whose millions had been made by his chain of bakeries.

"I wanted to do something—make money all myself, instead of floating around in society. So I asked dad what would be a good line, and he said plum puddings. He knew there was a demand for them, and he happened to get one of the puddings your mother sold. And—well, perhaps dad's methods haven't always been just what yours would be. He told me the way to make a success of plum puddings was to get hold of that recipe. So I came out here and managed to get your mother to hire me, and I learned the recipe. But right from the first I knew I'd never steal it from you."

Concerning the Tussock Moth.

The New York state college of forestry at Syracuse has recently sent out a circular letter to chambers of commerce throughout the state warning against the ravages of the tussock moth, which bid fair to be severe on shade trees during the next growing season. The egg masses, which are white and conspicuous, may be seen readily at the present time on the bank of elms particularly, and these may be collected and destroyed or daubed with creosote so that they will not hatch. The college in its letter has suggested that local shade tree or park commissions take the matter of destroying the egg masses in hand at once and push it vigorously.

SHORT WRAP WORN

Apparently Shapeless Garment One of Novelties of Season.

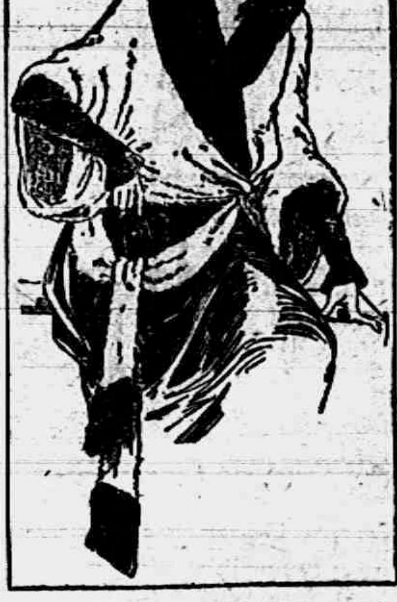
Is as Warm as a Fur Coat but Does Not Hide Beauty of Smart Dress That May Be Worn Under It.

One of the most picturesque and popular novelties of the season is the apparently shapeless, little short wrap, which is warm as a fur coat, but which permits a smart dress to be seen in all its glory, writes Idalia de Villiers, a Paris correspondent.

For example, such a short wrap as that shown in the illustration. This was copied from an exclusive and very expensive Paris model, which was specially created for the young queen of Spain. The original model was composed of ermine and sable, with an exquisite lining of brocaded satin, which showed pastel pink flowers on a silver-gray ground.

But the wrap shown in the sketch was made of pale-gray oursine, with a large collar of musquash and the same soft fur on the ends of the loose sash. There was a lining of bright printed silk, which exploited Chinese designs in three different shades of blue, and the sleeves were wide and rather short.

This was quite an inexpensive garment and eminently attractive. Melusine, oursine or supple ratine might be used for such a wrap as this, and any fur could be added on the collar and sash ends; this model would afford an excellent opportunity for using up an old stole, which, though good in parts, was not fresh enough to be worn in its original form.



Wrap of Smoke-Gray "Oursine."

I recently saw a very similar wrap made of melusine in a clear shade of beige, with collar and trimmings of beaver. There was a Russian toque to match, shaped very like the toque shown in the sketch. In passing I must point out that these high-crowned toques, with fur borders, are popular just now. They are easily made and very becoming.

How Much Does He Save?

A professional man says it costs about 7 cents a mile to run his auto. This includes oil, wear and tear, insurance and upkeep generally. Once a week he drives to the country and buys supplies, butter, eggs, chickens, apples, potatoes, etc. Sometimes he covers 50 miles on a trip. Thus, according to his own estimates, his expense would be fully $3.50 for the 50 miles. If he buys eggs at 5 cents a dozen, butter at 5 cents a pound, chickens at 4 cents a pound cheaper than he can buy them in the city—and he buys them merely for his own family use—how much does he save?—Indianapolis News.

French Repulse Two Raids in Vosges —British Extend Front South of St. Quentin.

Rome, Jan. 28.—There was artillery activity along the entire front in northeastern Italy, the Italian war office announced. Enemy forces attempted to approach the Italian lines at Capo Sile, near the mouth of the Piave river, but were promptly repulsed.

Bombs dropped by Teutonic airplanes on Treviso and Mestre claimed six women victims, three being killed. Three hospitals at Mestre were damaged by the explosives.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The official statement says:

"On the Asiago plateau and east of the Brenta river there were lively artillery duels. Italian attacks against Monte Pertica failed."

Paris, Jan. 28.—"Except for two German attempts to raid small French posts in the region of the Fave river (in the Vosges), which were repulsed by our fire, there was nothing of importance in the course of last night to report," says the war office announcement.

London, Jan. 28.—"With the exception of some hostile artillery activity in the neighborhood of Ribecourt and southwest of Cambrai," says the official statement issued by the British war office, "there is nothing of special interest to report."

The official statement issued by the German army headquarters staffs says:

"Fighting activity was slight on almost the entire front. Prisoners were brought in as the result of small operations south of the River Oise and in the upper Vosges, south of Lusse."

London, Jan. 28.—The Reuter correspondent at British headquarters in France says that the southern British army on the western front lately extended its line to slightly south of St. Quentin. The extension was effected under cover of anti-fighting weather and was only discovered by the Germans when they attempted a raid, as they believed against the French, a couple of nights ago.

MAKE VICTORY LOAF TODAY

Bakers Manufacture War-Bread Containing 5 Per Cent Substitute for Wheat Flour.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Bakers today began the manufacture of the new Victory loaf, a war bread containing a 5 per cent substitute for wheat flour, prescribed by the food administration as a part of its 1918 food conservation program. At the same time grocers will sell to householders wheat flour only when the purchaser buys an equal amount of some other cereal.

The percentage of substitute flours used by baking establishments will be increased gradually until a 20 per cent substitution is reached on February 24.

As substitutes the bakers may use either some other cereal or flours made from potatoes or beans.

A Baseball Philosopher.

Sentiment plays most of the strings in this little musical instrument of a world, says a writer in an exchange.

I didn't see any of the world's series baseball games held in New York and Chicago. But my heart was quite a loud beating affair each day in the bleachers. And it was beating for the Chicago White Sox.

I'll tell you why.

The head, heart and owner of the Chicago White Sox is Charlie Comiskey. They call him "the old Roman." One day an important game was on and his great Chicago park was crowded with something like a $30,000 crowd. Then old Pluvius got busy and started dumping wetness in torrents onto the park.

It looked bad. So bad that one of Comiskey's friends hunted him out, and worried-like in excitement, exclaimed, "Comiskey, do you think it's going to stop?"

"It always has," replied "the old Roman."

No wonder the White Sox won the world's series.

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Church Buildings

The early settlers of Tecumseh were in general and to a very unusual degree favorably disposed toward religion and its institutions. Nearly every religious persuasion was represented, almost if not from the very beginning. If all were not experimental Christians, all were persuaded that the Bible was of Divine origin, and that its tendency was to ele[illegible] est view, and brightest hope of Heaven. Nevertheless, the limited state of society forbade its manifestations according to the formulas and rituals of sectarianism, but this did not bar its vital force nor at all impair its objective practical influence, although not draped in party robes, nor encumbered by ritualistic ceremonies its subjects felt its force, and were so spontaneously brought together by it, that as in the primitive ages of Christianity so now, it was often remarked behold how these Christians love one another.

On the Sabbath they usually assembled together at some convenient place for the purpose of devotion. If a minister of the Gospel happened to be present all gave him a cordial welcome, of whatever denomination he might be and each one and all, joyfully fed on the spiritual bread which he broke to them and accepted gratefully from his hand the cup of salvation. Contention for forms they cheerfully left to the graceless zealots of olden countries.

If no minister was present, some one read portions from the Word of God, another read a sermon, while others prayed, joined in sacred song, and finally with better resolutions and more boyant hopes they went to their homes all without envy toward hose who had in other lands worshipped in stately domes and gorgeous cathedrals.

It is worthy of remark at this point and justly due to a venerable Father in the ministry who yet lives and of whom we would say sereous in coelum redeat, that the Rev. Noah M. Wells in the summer of 1825, then pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Detroit, preached the first sermon ever preached in Tecumseh and in Lenawee County, 'Tis also reported that every adult person in the settlement was present to hear him, except one a woman confined to her bed by sickness. The religious element of which we speak, has ever been a peculiar characteristic of our people. To this more than to all other causes do we owe our rare virtue, our intense industry, and our very greater prosperity, moreover it is this supernatural feeling which has from our earliest history, inclined us to build houses of worship that the Lord our God might dwell among us, that he might own and bless us and also our children who are to inherit the fruits of our toil, when the zephyrs play and the willows wave over our sleeping dust.

But the church building is naturally, and almost always, the work of organized religious societies and in small settlements, denominational affinities gather but few into social harmony, and united efficient purpose. Even if they are generally poor their income small, and their wants many. Then they know how to provide. Hence the building of churches, in towns newly started, is liable to delay.

Episcopal Church

It was not until 1833 that anything of the kind was actually decided upon. In the summer of this year, the Protestant Episcopal church known as St. Peters, first moved in an enterprise of that kind. It was thought to be a very great, and almost hazardous undertaking, for so feeble a congregation.

However, they entered upon the work, and on the 10th day of O[illegible]ber, 1833, the corner stone was [illegible]. The Rev. Lyster deli[illegible] [illegible] the citizens for defraying the expenses. The following summer Rev. Lyster was authorized to go east and solicit from such friends as might be found who were able and willing to help the good cause along. Mr. Lyster was absent until the following March when he returned having raised $2,000.00 toward the object.

Meantime the work of building progressed and on the 2nd day of August, divine service was held in the church for the first time. Rev. Mr. O'Brien from Monroe preached in the morning and Mr. Lyster in the evening. On the 29th of July 1837, the edifice was by the Rt. Rev. Bishop McCoskey, duly consecrated to the service of God. This church underwent considerable alterations and was very essentially improved in the summer of 1868.

The Presbyterian Church.

The next house of worship was the Presbyterians. It was begun in 1835, and finished in the following year. They had hitherto for the most part worshiped in the court house. But it was not well adapted to the wants of the congregation. Besides they were often interrupted, other societies being equally entitled to the building, it belonging to the public. Hence though few in number and limited as to pecuniary means, they resolved on an effort to build a church. The plan of the house was small, 30x40 feet in dimensions and without a gallery,

It was located on Maumee street upon the southeast corner of the lot owned by the society, the lot gratuitously appropriated to the Presbyterian church by the original proprietor of the village plat. It was entered by two doors in the south end, the doors entering into aisles which led up to the pulpit. On the north end seats for the singers were elevated on each side of the pulpit This was but a small and very unpretentious edifice but far better than none; and for several years was a quiet resting place for those who had been as scattered sheep in the wilderness.

It was afterwards sold to the society of Friends who moved it into the southwestern part of the town where in 1869 it now stands sacred to the worship of God.

But in a country naturally so alluring and where the labors of an industrious and enterprising people, were every year adding something new to its native charms the number of people rapidly grew and the congregation increased. The inflow of devout people from eastern churches, a newly experienced Christianity by many who in other days, had observed no overpowering charms within the gates of Zion, together with the growing interest, in regards to religion which like the oder of flowers in the surrounding atmosphere, was gently diffusing itself abroad those all conspired to swell the congregation, till the little sanctuary failed to meet its wants. One adit alone was open to the farther growth of prosperity of the society. But it seemed a decree of fate and the purpose was made and registered. The plan proposed and adopted it called for a edifice 50x74 feet including the colonnade in fror[illegible] to contain 64 slips and b[illegible] gallery. The contract for the foundation was given to John Richard, Esq., of Raisin which he begun and finished in June. The contract to build the super-structure which was to be of wood was given to S. H. Southworth and Burtick who began the job in the month of July following, but money was scarce and much that was in circulation had but a mere nominal value, materials were scarce and hard to be obtained. Hence the work went on tardily, and it was not until the [illegible] of 1840 that the work was completed. No record of the precise day in which it was finished is to be found nor can we learn that any formal dedication of the [illegible] was ever made. We but know it was built for the services of [illegible] and [illegible] it has been used [illegible] time January 1869.

AMERICANS FIGHT HUNS

U. S. Soldiers Killed in Battle in France.

Corporal Walter Roberts Falls in Action, No Details of Which Are Given.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Seasoned by hard work behind the lines, American regulars now are believed to be taking their regular places in the front line trenches and in the scouting across "No Man's Land," which is the only actual fighting now going on along the western front. This was the interpretation which Washington army officers placed on the brief dispatch from General Pershing announcing that another American soldier—Corporal Walter Roberts of Hartline, Wash., had made the supreme sacrifice for his country. Roberts was killed in a clash, presumably between patrols, last Sunday. General Pershing, in the briefest of a report on the subject, simply announced that he had been "killed in action." Whether any of his companions were wounded at the time is not yet known. In the absence of any details, officials suppose that the fight was another of those trench raids which are a part of the night life all along the front. The only significance in the announcement, it was said, was the revelation that American soldiers again have been in contact with the Germans.

It is not believed here that Americans have taken over any additional ground to defend. Such action, officials say, hardly can be expected until the spring drives are about ready to start.

London Daily News Reports Urgent Representations to British Cabinet on Matter.

London, Jan. 23.—The Daily News says there is reasons for stating that President Wilson quite recently made urgent representations to the British cabinet on the desirability of an Irish settlement. The end, he adds, cannot long be delayed.

WILSON GIVES LIE TO SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN

President in Statement Says Lawmaker Distorted Truth in New York Speech.

DEFENDS SECRETARY BAKER

Legislation Proposed by Senate Committee for War Council Had Come, Executive Says, After Effective Measures of Reorganization Had Been Perfected.

Washington, Jan. 23.—President Wilson issued a statement characterizing as an "astonishing and unjustifiable distortion of the truth" assertions of Senator Chamberlain in a New York speech Saturday concerning inefficiency of war preparations.

Wilson Issues Statement.

The following statement was issued from the White House:

When the president's attention was called to the speech made by Senator Chamberlain at a luncheon in New York on Saturday he immediately inquired of Senator Chamberlain whether he had ben correctly reported, and upon ascertaining from the senator that he had been, the president felt it his duty to make the following statement:

"Senator Chamberlain's statement as to the present inaction and effectiveness of the government is an astonishing and absolutely unjustifiable distortion of the truth.

"As a matter of fact, the war department has performed a task of unparalleled magnitude and difficulty with extraordinary promptness and efficiency. There has been delay and disappointment and partial miscarriage of plans, all of which have been drawn into the foreground and exaggerated by the investigations which have been progressing since congress assembled—investigations which drew indispensable officials of the department constantly away from their work and officers from their commands and contributed a great deal to such delay and confusion as had inevitably arisen.

Investigations Not Helpful.

"But by comparison with what has been accomplished, these things, much as they were to be regretted, were insignificant and no mistake has been made which has been repeated. Nothing helpful or likely to speed or facilitate the war tasks of the government [illegible]

"I understand that reorganizations by legislation are to be proposed—I have not been consulted about them [illegible] ond hand—but their proposal came after effective measures of reorganization had been thoughtfully and maturely perfected, and inasmuch as these measures have been the result of experience, they are much more likely than any others to be effective, if the congress will but remove the few statutory obstacles of rigid departmental organization which stand in their way.

Will Soon Prove His Value.

"The legislative proposals I have heard of would involve long additional delays and turn our experience into mere lost motion.

"My association and constant conference with the secretary of war have taught me to regard him as one of the ablest public officials I have ever known. The country will soon learn whether he or his critics understand the business in hand.

"To add, as Senator Chamberlain did, that there is inefficiency in every department and bureau of the government, is to show such ignorance of actual conditions as to make it impossible to attach any importance to his statement.

"I am bound to infer that the statement sprang out of opposition to the administration's whole policy rather than out of any serious intention to reform its practice."

Chamberlain Replies.

Replying to the president, Senator Chamberlain said:

"My argument was directed to the military establishment and not to the general government. Those who heard me know that.

"I had no prepared speech. I delivered an extemporaneous address to the people there, explaining that since Bunker Hill we had practically no military organization or policy. I discussed the subject from that viewpoint for 20 minutes.

"I said the senate military committee had tried to correct the evils by the introduction of the two new bills. One written by me is the director of munitions bill. The other, written by a subcommittee, is the war board bill. I will stand by both.

"Mr. Baker's efforts to better his organization within the military establishment itself have been commendable. He has tried to do something. Some improvements have been made in the system in vogue.

"But in his plan the inherent weakness in the last analysis is that there is no one between the president and the army able to act. The new system of Mr. Baker comprises the clearance board of the war industries board and the various purchasing departments. There is the inherent weakness. They cannot act.

URGES AMERICA TO CURB REBELS

Fatal Fire of Chinese on U. S. Gunboat Called Call for Action.

ATTACKING GUNS SILENCED

Commander of the U. S. S. Monocacy Reports on the Action Near Kien Lih-Sien on the Yang Tse Kiang.

Peking, Jan. 23.—Reporting to the American legation on the attack upon the Monocacy, the American consul at Hankow urges concerted action by American and British war vessels to assure the safety of traffic on the Yang Tse Kiang. Whereas foreign vessels heretofore have been the objectives of snipers, the consul points out, the Monocacy was the target of a well-directed attack. The volleys began fifteen seconds after the first shot was fired and continued until the return fire drove off the attacking forces. At least six foreign merchantmen and two war vessels have recently been attacked.

Attack Without Warning.

The attack on the American gunboat Monocacy, in which one sailor was killed and two others wounded, was made near Kien Lih-Sien, and came without warning. The attackers hid behind a dike on the north bank of the Yang-Tse-Kiang. The gunboat returned the fire, but with what results is not known. Afterward the Monocacy proceeded to Hankow.

The Japanese steamer Tayuan also was subjected to fusillades.

The firing lasted for half an hour. It is presumed that the assailants were a detachment of the southern revolutionary forces.

The reason for the attack and details of it have not been received. Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, the American ambassador, will demand of the foreign office that responsibility for the attack be fixed, and the offenders punished, and also that measures shall be taken to safeguard shipping. Doctor Reinsch does not believe that the attack indicates an antiforeign feeling, but rather that it was intended to bring up complications for the central government.

Silences Attacking Guns.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The commander of the American gunboat Monocacy fired upon by Chinese rebels, reported that he has returned the fire and silenced it.

Secretary Daniels gave out the following: "States gunboat [illegible] ing about 50 miles above Yochow on the Yang-Tse-Kiang river, was fired [illegible] a [illegible] chief yeoman, was fatally injured and W. N. Donelly, seaman, slightly wounded. The fire was returned by the Monocacy and silenced.

"It is believed that the Chinese were bandits or revolutionists."

The foregoing is a paragraph of the official report from the commander of the gunboat.

American Minister Reinsch's dispatches to the state department reporting the attack on the gunboat Monocacy contained no additional details to those already received in news dispatches. Minister Reinsch said he had already made representations to the Chinese government.

In this issue of the Herald, under the head of "Communication," appears an article contributed by one of our friends who justly commends the action of the Senior Class of the Tecumseh High School in cutting down on the expenses of their banquet, thereby being able to contribute a nice sum of money to the Red Cross. We can well imagine what it means to our Seniors to do this and that it is a real sacrifice, for to our high school pupils these events are always looked forward to and cherished in their memory in after years.

While their banquet this year may not be so elegant in its appointments, still the entertainment and the essential things that have always made these events so dear to the student will all be given and added to this will be the satisfaction that they have denied themselves and that their money may aid in the great work of relieving our boys who are sick and wounded at the front. It is an act of true loyalty and we congratulate the Seniors on their patriotic stand.

We older people can draw a lesson from this act of the Seniors. Have we sacrificed something that was equally as dear to us and given the money to the Red Cross? Remember the Red Cross Donation Fund is always open for gifts of any nature. We Americans have not yet learned how to deny ourselves, we have been bred and raised in extravagance, but if this war lasts any length of time, we will know more about denying ourselves of many of the things that we never dreamed we could get along without.

We are beginning to learn. Our industries got their first jolt last week when they had to close by order of the fuel administrator for five days and the nine hour schedule which is now on is an ever reminder of sacrifice. All the American people want to know these days is that these sacrifices are necessary and then they go at it with a right good will. In the long run more or less of this enforced economy by the American people will work out to their infinite good. We can't, perhaps, see it now but afterwards it will come home to us and we will be all the stronger for it. American people have catered to style and fine feathers for many years, it is time we had a jolt, we must cast off some of our fine feathers and get back to plain wholesome living.

LOSS IN TRENCHES

Mortality Less Than in Any of the Previous Wars.

Physician Asserts That Disease Is So Thoroughly Eliminated That a Sick Man Is a Curiosity.

Readers with relatives and friends at the front should get considerable comfort from a study of the mortality statistics of the armies recently put forward by a well-known physician, London Tit-Bits states. While his figures are not so favorable as those given out from Paris indicating that all kinds of permanent losses—killed, captured, missing and disabled—aggregate but 3 per cent per annum of the effective forces engaged, they are nevertheless distinctly encouraging.

He finds that about sixty men per 1,000 are being killed and 150 wounded and that a very large proportion of the latter return to the trenches. This, naturally, is not to be compared with the normal death rate in time of peace of men of military age, which is but eight per 1,000; but it is a vast improvement upon the showing of any previous war.

For one thing, disease has been so thoroughly eliminated that a sick man is a curiosity. The soldier at the front is certainly less liable to attack than if he were at home. Everything he eats and drinks and wears, almost everything he touches, is subject to the finest medical supervision of which science is capable, and if any particularly persistent bacillus were to get into his system in spite of all precautions, it would find him in such superb condition that its work would be futile. The high commands have thoroughly learned the lesson that it does not pay to train a man to be a soldier and then lose him from a cause that is in the least degree preventable.

By this same token experience, both in the protection of the soldier and in the care of the wounded, is steadily reducing the death rate as the war progresses. Not only are new tactics constantly being developed which result in less exposure of the individual soldier, but he is constantly being better equipped with defensive apparatus to minimize the effects of bullet or shrapnel or gas attack. Finally, from many classes of wounds which would have spelled probable death in 1914 and certain crippling in 1915, recovery is now almost a matter of course.

The drafted man who goes as an ordinary soldier, taking his judgment with him and leaving his excessive enthusiasm behind, has every chance of coming back, and in better physical condition than when he left.

ROMANCING RONALD

By ARCHIE C. NEW.

"This stock company is crampin' my style," complained Charlie Zepp, the prolific press agent of the Olympia, to Hazel Dwyer, the "heavy" woman of the company, as, seated in a box, they watching the morning rehearsal. "Same old stuff—day in and day out. Give me vaudeville any day. Why, there ain't been a new stunt pulled off here for a month."

"Sure there is," answered Miss Dwyer, sweetly, "but it takes brains to find it." She gave him a sly look out of the corner of her eye, and went on, "Ronald Cannoles hardly gets any time to carry on his lecture work."

Zepp bounded out of his chair and faced her excitedly.

"What's it?" he demanded, all alert. "Lecture work? Where? When? What d'ye know?"

Miss Dwyer regarded him calmly, with a twinkle of amusement in her eyes.

"You're right nice when you're sober," she told him, and, inwardly rejoiced at his scowl, "so I'll tip you off. Old Man Forrest introduced him to a good-looking girl who's teaching at a girls' school. Then Forrest, with an eye on the box-office, tips her off that Cannoles only plays juvenile for the love of it—that he's a regular bug on Shakespeare—"

"Help!" interrupted Zepp. "Shakespeare? Shades of Braumeister!"

"So the girl coaxed him out to the seminary," continued Miss Dwyer. "Ronnie gave 'em an earful about Romeo and Juliet and Macbeth, then they asked him back to family dinner. He's due for Hamlet next Friday afternoon."

"Oh, boy!" gurgled Zepp ecstatically. "Local interest—intellectual treat—heart stuff—all that! Gosh, that'd spread half a column or more." He shut his eyes in a dreamy perspective for an instant, then grabbed his hat. "Jes' watch me. I'm going to romance Ronald up to his ears."

Forrest was leaving his office the following Saturday afternoon, when an irate figure, brandishing a newspaper, loomed up in the doorway.

"Who wrote this?" demanded Ronald Cannoles, heatedly, in the doorway.

"What?" queried Forrest innocently.

"That!" And Cannoles pointed. "The dirty bums. They've ruined me. I—"

"Here, wait a minute till I read it," admonished Forrest, and he scanned the offensive article. "Where's the kick?" asked Forrest calmly.

"The whole thing's a kick," snapped Ronald hotly. "Right where I live. See here, it says, 'Following his most interesting lecture, Mr. Cannoles dined at the home of one of the fair members of the faculty. It is rumored that another alliance has been formed by Cupid between stage and college.' Cupid, bah! I'm going to beat Charlie Zepp to a jelly."

"What—for giving you the best boost in years? You've got the notoriety. What do you care?"

"That's just it," cut in Ronald. "I do care. Confound it, man—I—I like Miss Walters."

"Oh!" whistled Forrest, in amazement. "So that's the lay?"

After a few minutes Ronald left the office and Forrest got busy. He phoned a near-by restaurant, and three minutes later he had the case before Charlie Zepp.

"Get busy and write your head off. [illegible] about Cannoles being descended from English nobility—you might [illegible] a lord in the family somewhere—only do it up brown. Tell all about his wonderful college career. Smear it on thick."

Zepp looked at the other, openmouthed and incredulous, then exploded.

"But, hang it all, chief," he demurred, "that's all bunk. It'll cost on advertising rates. That's expensive."

"Hang the expense!" snapped Forrest impatiently. "I've made a cleanup on him, and he's a fine young man. Go get busy and charge it to me."

"Who's that dame across the way?" demanded Charlie of Hazel two weeks later as they again sat in a box at rehearsal. Charlie was pointing to the opposite box wherein there sat a beautiful young girl whose shining eyes and smiling, dimpled cheeks followed every movement made by Ronald Cannoles on the stage.

Hazel followed his gaze, then pinched him and whispered eagerly: "That's her."

"Her who?" echoed Charlie, blankly.

"The teacher," she whispered. "Cannoles' girl. They've made up. Forrest brought 'em together. She's crazy about him. There's your chance, you boob. Romance—gobs of it. Young, pretty teacher attends stock company rehearsals regularly. Object, matrimony. Where's your originality?"

"Buried," answered Charlie, grimly. "Never again for this romancing Ronald. Nearly got strung last time. Now I'll wait till it's sure."

"Well, what more proof do you want than that?" demanded Miss Dwyer, in a whisper, and Charlie looked.

Into the opposite box Cannoles had crept quietly, and around Jeannette Walter's neck stole his two arms. Oblivious to their audience opposite she looked up into his face happily and kissed him.

NEW CAMOUFLAGE DISH

"Aginomoto," Noted Japanese Chemist Calls His Invention.

War prices for foodstuffs will have no terrors for citizens of the United States if they adopt the "meat camouflage" invented by Dr. K. Ikeda, a Japanese chemist of note.

"Aginomoto," or "taste creation," the brown men call it.

Yutaka Tanaka, a Japanese commercial agent visiting in Denver, describes "aginomoto" as a preparation made mostly from the humble turnip. It is manufactured in powder form and when spread on any article of food it imparts a delicious meat flavor.

The judge took a look at the pretty bride and her young husband and decided their defense was enough to dismiss the case.

GIRLS MAY BE CONSCRIPTED

Germany Considers Training to Match Boys' Military Service.

Plans for general conscription of women after the war are being made in Germany, and there is a general feeling that girls, as well as boys, will be compelled to undergo a regular period of training corresponding to the German youth's service in the army. The service proposed for girls is not military but civil. It is proposed that all women should, preferably at the age of seventeen, be taken from their homes and compulsorily "trained" either in a profession, a trade or in household duties.

The characteristic German division between rich and poor is maintained in the project. Girls of the upper classes are to be trained in special institutions; poor girls will go to factories or be placed in private households, where their employers will give them a trifle of pocket money and make a contribution to the state.

The idea meets with wide commendation in the German newspapers, but one English critic notes that "there is some difference between male conscription, which puts a man into a regiment run by and for the state, and a female conscription, which makes a girl work without wage for the profit of private individuals. The latter cannot with accuracy be called anything but slavery."

SHOT IN HIS CELL

Man Who Denounced America and Killed Marshal, Himself Killed.

A man who told the police of Malden, Mo., he was L. H. Wissmann of Havana, Ill., was captured in a swamp near there by a posse of several hundred men after he had shot and killed City Marshal R. S. St. Clair when the marshal tried to arrest him for uttering disloyal sentiments. A member of the posse that captured Wissmann shot and probably mortally wounded him in his cell in the jail here after his capture.

Members of the posse say Wissmann was heard to remark a few days ago: "To —— with the Red Cross, the government and Wilson!"

Maps showing the farms of this part of the country with the names of the owners and a list of their principal products were found in Wissmann's possession.

BASUTOS SING PSALMS

Africans Surprise Congregation of Noted Church in Paris.

An odd spectacle was seen at the Oratoire in Paris recently. Twelve Basuto laborers stood before the altar and sang several Psalms in their own language. They are part of the contingent brought to France last January by the British authorities to work behind the front and were paying a visit to Paris, in charge of Lieutenant Mabille, son of a Swiss Protestant pastor, and a naturalized Africander.

Pastor Shristol, who was a missionary in Basutoland for 25 years, welcomed them at the Oratoire, and two of them replied in Basuto.

PORTABLE PHONE FOR WOODS

How Forest Ranger Can "Cut In" Anywhere on Long Lines.

A forest officer of Missoula, Mont., has invented a very ingenious portable telephone, weighing only two and a half pounds and so practical that it has been adopted by the government and is part of the regular equipment of patrol in the national forests this season.

It is said that a field man equipped with this telephone, a few yards of light emergency wire and a short piece of heavy wire to make the ground connection can "cut in" anywhere along the more than 20,000 miles of forest service telephone lines and get in touch with the headquarters of a supervisor or district ranger. To talk, one end of the emergency wire is thrown over the telephone line, the two ends are connected to the portable instrument, and the instrument is connected to the ground wire, the end of which must be thrust into the damp earth or in water. Contact with the line wire is made possible by removal of the insulation from a few inches of the emergency wire.

The instrument, writes E. L. G., in St. Nicholas, does not ring the bell of the receiving telephone, but instead causes a screeching sound from a small megaphone-shaped apparatus descriptively known as a "howler." This instrument is installed at the ranger station telephone and is said to give effective notice that someone is on the wire. The transmission is equal to any standard wall telephone, conversations having held with it for a distance of 1,000 miles.

How to Cure Stammering.

Lisping and stammering, according to Popular Science Monthly, are separate imperfections of speech which require entirely different treatment.

Lispers, for instance, can be cured in a short time by tongue and palate gymnastics. They "lithp" simply because they do not work their tongue and palate properly. By making the child speak before a mirror, however, the teacher can correct these mistakes.

Stammering is a nervous disorder which cannot be cured so easily. The pupil involuntarily applies too much force at certain parts of the vocal organs, causing the stuttering and a sputtering with which we all are familiar. The cure is to relieve the overworked parts by distributing the energy evenly. This is learned by pronouncing certain flowing sounds in front of a candle until the flame does not flicker.

NATIONAL LEAGUE FOR WOMAN'S SERVICE COLLECTS GOLD AND SILVER ORNAMENTS FOR WAR FUND

Detroit, January 23, 1918. Solid gold and silver ornaments and trinkets of all kinds and degrees of value are being received at the State headquarters of The National League for Woman's Service, 24 Witherell St., Detroit, to help fill the Molting Pot. The Meling Pot is very capacious and will take an unlimited amount of filling.

The idea is that solid ornaments can be melted and turned into bullion, which when sent to the U. S. Mint is turned into money which will be used for war work.

The melting Pot could tell a good many stories. There is the woman in Bay County who sent in her wedding ring because, her husband and children being dead, and she had no one to leave it to, she preferred giving it to soldiers rather than to strangers. There are the rings and lockets that belonged to soneone's little girl and long kept as memory tokens, as well as numerous other things that represent real sacrifices. If you are hoarding away some treasured article that is of no actual use to you, you will know where to place it.

In the sewing room of the League stacks of queer little patterns have been received from which to make dresses and blouses for the French children. Clubs and individuals in the state desirng to help in this work may secure patterns by application to headquarters. There is an urgent need for a large supply of new clothing of all sorts for these unfortunate children.

GERMAN ALIEN ENEMIES IN UNITED STATES MUST REGISTER

Among the regulations for the registration of German alien enemies in the United States during the first week of February are the following:

All Germans males of the age of 14 years and upward are required to register. Notice of time and place of registration will be given by publication in Newspapers.

The affidavit of each registrant must be accompanied by four unmounted photographs, signed across the face so as not to obscure the features, and the finger prints of each registrant shall be taken.

Between 10 and 15 days after registration each alien enemy must again appear before his registration officer to obtain registration card, which will bear his name and his left thumb print. This card must be carried by the registrant for future identification.

An alien enemy who changes his place of residence to another place within the same registration district must at once report the change to the registration officer. No alien enemy shall move out of the district without a permit. Application for a permit must be made upon a form furnished by the department of Justice, giving full particulars as to date reason for change, and intended place of residence.

WAR PREPAREDNESS BOARD

Lansing Michigan, January 24.—One million American soldiers and sailors are preparing to go over the top without taking care of their families. If they are killed or rendered helpless by wounds, their dependents must rely upon charity for daily bread.

The last day on which men in Federal service can take out the insurance that the Government provided is Tuesday February 12. After that, applications are refused.

The Michigan War Preparedness Board estimates that there are fully 10,000 Michigan men with the colors who have been negligent in this respect. In a statement issued today the Board urges wives, mothers and children to write or even wire their relatives in the service to take out an insurance policy before it is too late.

Premiums may be paid out of the man's wages monthly. The average cost is only 70 cents per $1,000 per month. Policies are written from 1,000 to $10,000. In case of death or injury, policies are paid in monthly installments for twenty years.

"If your husband, father or son has not insured himself in your favor, urge him to do so says the Board.

"If he does not do so, you may face starvation because of his carelessness. Should he come home a helpless cripple and he is not insured you must support yourself and him, too.

"Don't let false pride keep you silent. Remind him he has not done his duty."

COMMUNICATION

Editor Tecumseh Herald:

We are told that one of the principal benefits of a college education is to broaden the mind. How is it then, that when the students of the University of Michigan were requested to give up the "Junior Hop" this year, they refused, while the seniors and juniors of our own little Tecumseh High School of their own initiative, gave up their receptions for this year, in order to give a part of their money to the Red Cross?

It seems to me it's rather a narrow mind that takes pleasure in expensive social functions when there is such imperative need of help. Patriotism doesn't consist only in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." A patriotism that is not willing to make a sacrifice in such times as these is not worthy the name. Neither is patriotism a thing that is given us all in a lump when we are grown. It comes to us, little by little, as we are capable of appreciating what our country means to us and does for us, and as a result of the sacrifices we are willing to make for it. We must practice patriotism. Education does not come wholly from books. An education that has put a person in a condition that he can enjoy expensive socail pleasures while his brothers are suffering and starving is not true education.

We wish to commend our boys and girls who have had the "backbone" and good sense to make this decision.

Observer.

WOMEN WILL BE INTERESTED IN THE GOWNS WORN IN "THE WHIP"

All women will be very much interested in the stylish, smart costumes that are worn by all the actresses appearing in "The Whip". These costumes are of the very latest design and most fashionably cut. In fact they are patterned after the gowns worn by the leaders in New York's most exclusive circles.

All women who see "The Whip" will be particularly interested in the hunting costumes worn in one of the big hunting scenes in this big production. The air of smartness that pervades every scene of "The Whip" makes this the classiest production ever made.

"The Whip," the supreme offering of filmdom is coming to the Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, next Wednesday, January 30th, to charm, delight and thrill the patrons of this show house with its thrilling story, its splendid characterizations, its truly wonderful photography and its sensationally magnificent scenic effects. "The Whip" is easily the world's biggest motion picture. One scene alone, that of the great train wreck, was staged at an enormous expense merely for this offering. And it is the biggest and best train wreck yet seen in motion pictures. An automobile race and wreck that is so vivid as to hold the spectators gasping is another feature. But, of course, the biggest feature of all the tremendous scenes and events in this race. The scenes for this splendid event were taken at Saratoga, where the biggest racing events of the world are pulled off, and the screen reproduces the tensity, the excitement and striking fidelity.

From start to finish "The Whip" has been staged on a remarkably [illegible] production has been made by that genius of the screen, Maurice Tourneur, and he has excelled all his previous efforts in this remarkable and tremendously successful production. By all means see "The Whip." It is the only motion picture that you cannot afford to miss. "The Whip" can easily be classed with that mighty production, "The Birth of a Nation."

Word comes today of the death of Samuel H. Hicks which occurred at Eaton Rapids last Wednesday. He was the father of Curry Hicks, a former High School teacher and a great favorite with the young men of the town. Curry is now teaching in the Amherst, Mass., college.

The Men's Class of the Presbyterian church have certainly had some hard "sledding" with their Lyceum course this winter, with the war drafts and necessary changing of dates. Last night The Winters Entertainment was slated and about 6:30 came a message from Dundee from the company saying they were stuck in that burg and no means of getting over the drifts to Tecumseh. Rev. Rex and the men of the class got busy and by the use of the 'phones reached nearly all of the ticket holders so not many made the trip to the church. The company assures the Rev. today that they will surely appear tomorrow night.

On next Monday Rabbi A. W. Hershman of Congregation Shaarey Zedak, Detroit, will speak at the Monday Club. His topic will be "Zionism," a theme at once practical and romantic. Following their policy of sharing all good things, the Monday Club officials extend a hearty invitation to every interested person. Time 2:30 p. m.; place, Methodist church.

OVER THE TOP!

"Who Leads The National Army."

Hundreds of thousands of America's finest young men are in training camps—others are on the battle front abroad—hundreds of thousands more will be going. Relatives and friends of these red blooded fighters want to know everything about the officers who will lead them "Over The Top."

"Who Leads The National Army" the big and timely photoplay authorized by the war department and produced by the Military Training Camps Ass'n., shows everything about the selection and training of these men from the time they apply for enlistment until they receive their commission and ready to lead the national army.

The picture was produced by the War department and was taken at six of the officers training camps scattered throughout the country and in the office of Secretary Baker, in Washington.

It is the desire of the War department that every American see this great patriotic picure. It will be presented at the Bradley Opera House, (tomorrow night) Saturday January 26th in addition to the regular Saturday night program but with no extra charge, only the regular admissions being charged. You are asked to make an extra effort to see "Who Leads The National Army" it has been produced at an enormous cost for YOU. MILITARY FUNERAL PLANNED FOR PRIVATE REXFORD GADDY

Arrangements Not Fully Made as We Go to Press

The remains of Private Gaddy, a member of Co. B, who died at Waco, Texas, a few days ago, are expected to arrive in Tecumseh this afternoon or Saturday. Village President C. A. Waldron is working on plans to give Rexford Gaddy a military funeral. It is impossible to say until the body arrives and the final arrangements have been made, just where and when the funeral will be held, but hope to have the band out, a detachment of Spanish War veterans and the Uniformed Rank of K. of P. to represent as near as possible a military escort.

We also hear that Co. B is under marching orders for some point east.

The annual donation of the Ridgeway church will be held at the church February 1st.

A card received by George Hawkes from his son Capt. Milburn Hawkes late of Waco, Texas, says that his division were enroute for a point east and expected to be located somewhere in New Jersey.

BUY A BUICK

Why should we have chosen to represent the Buick line in preference to all other makes of cars?

BECAUSE in past seasons during which time we have handled no cars whatever, an excellent opportunity has been offered us to compare any and all makes of cars and to pass an unbiased opinion both from a user's and dealer's view point.

By so doing we have learned that the majority of cars are what the garage man term a one year or one season car and forever afterwards a REPAIR SHOP DELIGHT. The dealer is obliged to be continually offering apologies and making adjustments. The agency eventually disappears and the car is left without a home.

The BUICK however, one of the oldest agencies in Tecumseh has survived them all. There is surely some good reason for this.

FINALLY we have chosen to represent the BUICK line because it has proven to us conclusively time and again, in comparison with all other makes of cars, that a BUICK, month to month, year in and year out, mile for mile, requires less service, will outlast and outwear, and out-distance with less upkeep, less expense, and with far less yearly depreciation, dollar for dollar, any and all other make of automobile.

A BUICK owner is invariably an enthusiastic BUICK BOOSTER.

Moral—BUY A BUICK.

TURKS DESERT KAISER

Army of 160,000 Crumbles Under Falkenhayn Leadership.

Expedition to Palestine Is Abandoned After an Effort of Only Three Days.

Washington, Jan. 23.—One hundred and sixty thousand Turkish troops—more than 50 per cent of General Falkenhayn's reorganized Turkish army—deserted during the recent journey from Constantinople to Palestine, official dispatches stated.

General Falkenhayn, appointed by the kaiser to reorganize the crumbling Moslems after General Allenby's victorious Holy Land campaign, has returned to Constantinople and his entire plan for rehabilitation of the sultan's forces has been abandoned, the reports declare.

"More than 50 per cent of the strength of 24 Turkish divisions was lost by desertion during the journey from Constantinople to Palestine," General Allenby's report declares, adding that "41 companies of storm troops which left the Alexandretta district, each 300 strong, reached the front with only four officers and 100 men per company."

Even Turkish officers refused to "fall in" with Falkenhayn's program, reports declare, and openly voiced their dissatisfaction, knowing well the unreliability of the disheartened, war-weary native troops. In less than three days Falkenhayn abandoned the Palestine sector and returned in disgust to Constantinople.

The internal situation in Turkey is acute. Typhus, which a few months ago was claiming 140 victims per day in Constantinople, is on the increase. At this time of the year its virulence is most pronounced.

THOMAS NIXON CARVER

© HARRIS & EWING

Thomas Nixon Carver, adviser of agricultural economics to the United States government, is working out with Senators Curtis of Kansas and Sheppard of Texas a plan for colonizing United States soldiers after the war. A bill carrying the general idea is already pending in congress. Until recently Professor Carver was professor of political economy at Harvard university.

Beavers Use Scarecrow.

So troublesome have beavers become to the farmers along the Walla Walla river in Washington that one rancher erected a beaver "scarecrow," which was effective the first night. On the second night the beavers cut down the scarecrow and used it in their dam.

EFFICIENCY GOWN IS NEWEST IDEA

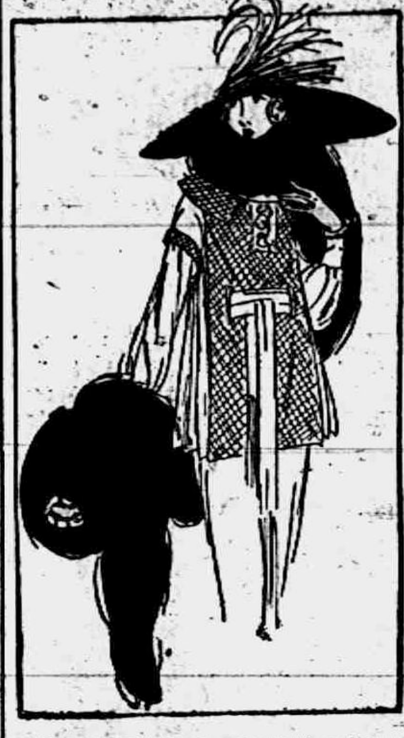
Many Economy Costumes Designed to Appeal to Women in War Times.

LITTLE WOOL BEING USED

Traders Trying to Go the Government "One Better" and Not Even Reach Maximum of Four and Half Yards Per Suit.

New York.—This season of the year witnesses the annual performance of stirring stunts to keep the women interested in the question of apparel. Heretofore, the traders have had two excellent pegs on which to hang new clothes at this time of the year: the exodus to Palm Beach and the incoming of midseason French fashions.

But this year the trade has added a third peg to the row on which the two others were placed. They have had a sop thrown to them by the government in the nature of a request to make gowns out of as little wool as possible, and they have pledged themselves in a body to keep within the 4½-yard measurement for a suit gown.



Sleeveless blouse of plaid velours. It is made in two sandwich panels with plaited, plain velours at the sides. The sash goes through buttonholes in the middle of the back and front and is finished with fringed ends. The short sleeves and turn-over collar give room for the frock to show.

This third peg was an actual stimulus to production. It offered a broad white way to exploitation. It fairly bubbled and seethed with advertising possibilities. It was taken up by the trade as eagerly as a brilliant phrase of a statesman is caught up by the multitude and made a part of an appeal to war.

Each man jumped to his scissors, his pencil and his material and went to work to beat all his competitors in producing a costume to which he could point with pride and say, with a spreading, arrogant gesture, "this is the ultimate pinnacle on which art and economy can stand entwined."

"I have made a gown from 1⅓ yards of worsted," said a famous Fifth avenue designer, "and it is good to look at."

"I hope the woman is," said the listener.

"Oh, I have added other materials," quickly explained the designer. "The gown does not affect the minimum of visibility."

The frock had to be brought down from the workrooms to prove the point that its wearer would not break the law of economy in wool or that of proper drapery. It was of black woolen material, made with a bodice that became a bib in front and a long panel in back fastened with bone buttons from neck to heels. The underslip was of plaited black satin, with a sash of itself that tied loosely over the wide sandwich back.

This is only one example out of hundreds that are being offered.

A Chance for the Trade.

Exploitation is the life of the trade in women's clothes. When the government joined hands with the traders in helping them over a serious situation, there was joy in the land of apparel. On every side we hear of efficiency blouses, economy gowns and conservation suits. Each firm assures us that less than three yards of wool is employed in each costume, because the firm is too patriotic to withstand the appeal of the government.

The traders are trying to go the government "one better" and not even reach the maximum measurement of 4½ yards per suit.

Individual designers insist that no wool should be used in the new clothes. They confine their acceptance of it to embroidery made from ends of yarn that cannot be used for knitting.

We are shown remarkable street frocks and restaurant gowns which depend for their color and brilliancy upon waste paper basket materials, so we are told—quarter yards of colored wools that were left from army and navy garments.

We are shown efficiency gowns in which a gold-colored foundation is covered by a black georgette surface, the latter unhooking at the shoulders and dropping down to form an ornamental apron on the skirt, to disclose a low-necked satin blouse suitable for a restaurant and a party.

There are economy costumes in which a georgette foundation in pastel color is disclosed when a one-piece jersey tunic or polonaise is taken from it. With the latter in its place, the [illegible] for shopping, for trains and for the morning activities; and with the somber jersey pinafore shed, the georgette gown becomes a fragile thing, a butterfly emerging from its dull-colored cocoon.

A number of the importers have returned from Paris with midseason gowns, and these are disappointing, in a large measure, but a few of them point to something new, and their presence is at least stimulating.

There are far more interesting sketches coming over than gowns, as they purpose to be the new clothes worn by the women in Paris who are buying smart things.

Wood Pulp and Twine.

The leading feature in the new frocks is the constant repetition of artificial jersey silk, matelasse and [illegible] common [illegible]. This winter type of artificial silk jersey is thicker and heavier than anything we have had under the oft-repeated name. It has the stiffness that one associates with a fiber made from wood pulp. It may be, however, that we will not have permission to make much of it in this country.

Matelasse is being made over here, and also the new type of brochure jersey silk, and the claim is that the American manufacturers have made the stamping of the design more secure and durable than the French have done.

Chanel sends over a black gown with a tunic and a narrow skirt made of this heavy wood fiber silk jersey which is decorated in Indian fashion with white twine and tiny wooden beads.

The importers think that this gown will be a success.

Paquin is responsible for the fashion of two frocks, both worn at the same time, and it is this idea of hers that is being copied here and exploited as an efficiency gown.

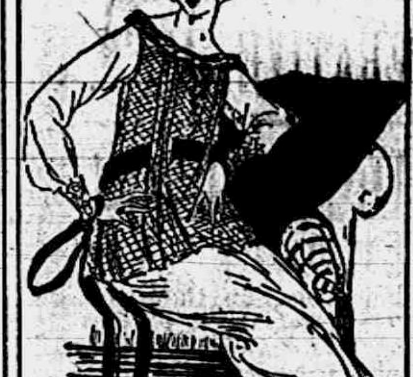
This fashion is made easily possible by the prevailing idea of a sleeveless medieval tunic showing sleeves and collar of another fabric. As Paquin works out the idea, the sleeves and collar of another fabric are also of another color and belong to a separate gown that is covered by the medieval, sleeveless affair of wool or some other protective material. As these long tunics are fastened down the middle of the front or back, they are easily removed. A sash is girdled about the hips once or twice, to give them character.

That Sleeveless Blouse.

What may be safely called a medieval garment is the sleeveless blouse that insists upon being seen at every turn of the fashions. There is nothing new about the loose, straight tunic cut off at the hips or below, and we once wore it in a half-hearted fashion, calling it a Russian blouse.

It has been exploited for two years, but never taken seriously by our public as a whole, although certain segments of women wore it constantly as a becoming and useful garment.

The garment in its new shape presents itself on the poster placards as an efficiency garment. It may be made of any material, worn over any kind of blouse, and it drops limply over a separate skirt.



This medieval velveteen blouse is in Burgundy red cut with the fourteenth century decolletage and has small armholes which are edged with stitching. A sash of beige-colored jersey cloth runs under the plaits and ties at the back.

Three of these have come over from Europe in the way of sketches to show how determined the French are to wear them. They are of black velveteen, plaid velours and Burgundy red velveteen, and two are low in the neck and one quite high. Two of them have semisleeves, mere armbands that drop four inches below the shoulders, and each has a belt arranged in a novel and ornate way, always subscribing to the Jeanne Lanvin trick of going in and out through buttonholes and under plaits.

Quilting Ornaments Satin.

Quilting sometimes ornaments the satin evening coats, with fur for bolder relief, and charming effects are secured in this way. One coat of silver gray satin was quilted from hem to hips and across the shoulders and was deeply collared and cuffed in gray wolf and lined with warm rose.

A drill bit worth $2,700 has been found in the Mass mine at Negaunee after being lost 16 years. The drill contains several large black diamonds. It was found at a depth of 1,286 feet.

The Detroit & Mackinaw Railroad company is now running but three trains a week on the Augres and Lincoln branches, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the daily passenger train between Tawas and Prescott has been taken off and Prescott has but one train a day.

The retirement of D. W. Rogers, founder of the company and for 33 years its secretary, featured the annual election of the Michigan Mutual Tornado, Cyclone and Windstorm Insurance company, held at Hastings. The following were elected directors; R. J. Gillespie, Flint; L. B. Spencer, Ypsilanti; M. F. Andrews, Carleton; Frank Martin, Charlotte; F. A. Johnson, Lake county.

Governor Sleeper has appointed the following military entertainment committee: Elton F. Hascall, Detroit, chairman; J. Edward Roe, Lansing; H. E. Vanderwalker, Ypsilanti; Eugene Osgood, Grand Rapids; Charles K. White, Jackson; Fred Appledorn, Kalamazoo; James C. McCabe, Bay City; Frank C. Whitney, Muskegon; W. E. Dunkin, Flint; W. S. Linton, Saginaw, and Ray Hart, Battle Creek.

Representatives of Bay City's water department and at least one of the larger commercial fishermen of that city have been investigating the alleged contamination of the Pine river by one of the sugar beet companies at St. Louis. Since their trip up the stream officials of the state game and fish department have been over the ground. It is said that thousands of dead fish were seen and that no live fish whatever could be found. Farmers living along the river complain that their stock refuse to drink the water.

Col. J. Paul Petermann, of Calumet, commander of the Thirty-fourth Michigan during the Cuban campaign, has been recalled from the retired list of the National Guard to command the new upper peninsula regiment of Michigan state troops.

Two hundred horse hides have been purchased by John and Albert Kfels from farmers in the vicinity of Holland. Because of the grain shortage, high prices and severe weather conditions these farmers were unable to carry their animals through the winter and killed them.

UNFIT SOLDIERS COST U. S. HUGE SUM

STATISTICIANS FIGURE THAT EXPENSE ON MEN AT WACO ALONE IS $411,320.

3,640 CANNOT BE SENT ABROAD

A Number of These Were Discharged Some Time Ago—Others Are Still Under Doctor's Care.

Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex.—Statisticians that have figured how much it cost the government to enlist and provide for the 3,640 misfits in the Thirty-second division, who cannot go overseas, discovered that already the outlay amounts up to $411,320 and it is still climbing, for the men remain in the army long after it is known they are unfit.

Some of these men were discharged some time ago, While a number are now awaiting discharge.

"No one person, no one body of men is to blame for this situation," one officer said. "Insofar as the misfits are selective soldiers, the trouble started with the local boards and along the line everybody 'passed the buck.'"

Here is the way the statistician figures things: Included in the 3,640 men that cannot go overseas with their outfits are 1,450 that are waiting surgeons certificates of disability. Some of these men have been in for a long time, but the great majority are drafted men and volunteers that were accepted after war was declared on Germany.

To feed them it has cost the government 42 cents each a day, a total of $66,990; to clothe them, it has cost $29,000, allowing $20 worth of clothing for each man to wear out in the time he has been in the service; overhead expenses such as tentage, etc., is put at $2,500; government pay, at $30 for each man (the non-coms received more,) totals $43,500. Railroad transportation from northern camps to Waco cost $58,000.

Of the 1,450 men at least 1,000 come from Camp Custer and the expense of examining them in their home town, transportation to Battle Creek and providing for them while they were there is figured at $20 each (called an extremely low estimate.) This totals $20,000. It has cost $220,900 to provide for 1,450 men now awaiting discharge or otherwise unable to go along with their organizations, and it is not likely the entire 1,450 will be cleared for at least two months.

Concerning the 800 men that already have been sent home as physically disqualified for service, the total cost of caring for them while they were in the army is placed at $110,000 and the cost of caring for the 580 alien enemies sent to Camp Logan, Houston, is set as $30,000.

CUSTER REFUSES TO LOAN COAL

Commander Says Supply at Camp is Also Likely to Run Short.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Following a number of requests from nearby communities that he loan them coal from the camp bunkers, and anticipating more, Major General Parker, commander of Camp Custer issued the following statement:

"In reference to requests for loans made to the commanding officer of this cantonment by citizens of communities, the following facts should be noted:

"While the commanding general deeply sympathizes with a hardship which is being experienced by certain people of communities and would be glad to be the means of relieving such hardship, this seems at present impracticable for the following reasons:

"(1)—This encampment has no surplus of coal; has coal only for a limited length of time and is likely to run short unless conditions are improved.

"(2)—To loan certain individuals or communities would instantly bring about a demand from other communities, perhaps laboring under greater hardships.

"(3)—The regulations of the war department explicitly forbid the loaning of army supplies to private individuals or to state or municipal authorites."

Reports that coal intended for delivery at adjacent cities has been commandeered by the camp quartermaster are emphatically denied by that official.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

Magazines of not too ancient issue are wanted at the Custer library.

Circulars have been distributed instructing officers that they will not be exempt from income taxes. All unmarried officers come under the law and all married officers above the rank of captain will feel the tax.

Michigan citizens with field glasses and field glass lenses can do a profitable business by selling them to the government. General Parker is seeking such equipment for this divison.

By order of the division surgeon all men to be transferred from Custer to other camps or ports of embarkation will be subjected to examination for communicable diseases.

Sergeants have taken up voice culture in their schools. There has been a general disposition to give commands too quietly, it appears, and this fault is being corrected.

Tax on Immigrants.

Mexico City, Jan. 23.—President Carranza has approved the bill imposing a tax on immigrants. All persons entering Mexico after February 1 will have to pay a tax of 50 cents, Mexican.

French Take Prisoners.

Paris, Jan. 23.—"A German raid west of Navarin farm in Champagne was without result," says today's official statement. "In the region of Auberive, French patrols brought back prisoners."

German Raids Repulsed.

London, Jan. 23.—"Attempted enemy raids east of Ypres were repulsed," the war office reports.

The Muskegon draft board has requested the state department to grant passports to Korea to Rev. John C. Klose of Houghton, who proposes to take up missionary work in Korea.

A new nine-mile state road will be built from Pinconning to Standish, to be part of the new Huron Shore gravel road, to be built through Arenac, Iosco, Oscoda and Alpena counties next year.

How Does a Soldier Feel in a Life-and-Death Crisis?

He was caught—like a rat in a trap—with only one chance in a million of coming out alive. He thought of——

What does a soldier think of in a life-and-death crisis? How does he feel? What does he do? What is the millionth chance that he takes to escape?

While trembling and hot from the experiences they have gone through over two hundred men—airmen, trench raiders, submarine commanders, grenade throwers—have told what they saw, heard and felt. To read these stories of personal adventure is to get an entirely new viewpoint of the war.

A Close-Up of the War

Newspapers and magazines treat the war along broad, general lines—they speak of nations and armies. But these stories tell you about the most daring, audacious and heroic deeds of MEN—individuals. They tell of exploits which even now you think never could happen. No professional author in the history of literature could tell such stories, for no man's imagination could think them up. Yet each of these stories is true—and so startling that the mind simply stands agape at wonder. They would thrill a man with blood as cold as a fish.

Partial List of Stories

Sixteen Months in Four German Prisons—The White Road to Verdun—An English Girl's Adventures in Germany—With a Field Ambulance at Ypres—American Boys with Ambulance No. 10—The Boy Who Dined With the Kaiser—With Princess Patricia's Canadians—Escape and Capture Underseas—Hindenburg's Death Trap—Adrift in a Mine Field—How We Foiled "U 35"—My Escape from the Turks Disguised as a Woman—This List represents only a fraction of the stories in this set of six volumes—over 1840 pages of the greatest true stories of the times.

"True Adventures of the Great War"

6 Volumes Free!

The Review of Reviews has collected these two hundred and more stories in six handsome volumes, containing altogether 1840 pages, profusely illustrated. Every one of these stories is absolutely genuine as to the facts related; every one of them is told in the words of the person who is the hero or heroine of the exploit. And now, for a limited time, you can secure these six volumes free, with a two-year subscription to the Review of Reviews.

Now, and during these next few years, as never before, every intelligent American will need the Review of Reviews. The world is on the verge. It is in the throes of social, industrial and political changes that are cataclysmic. One cannot form opinions on these revolutionary trends, one cannot base his acts intelligently upon them—one cannot understand the real war situation, unless the facts, all the facts, are known. It is genuine patriotic duty in these coming days of trial for every citizen to know comprehensively what is happening in the world around him.

A Pacifist.

The newcomer had hardly seated himself in the railway compartment before he began to talk, relates London Tit-Bits "I am a pacifist," said he in a voice as if he wanted to disarm all interruption. "If we can't beat the enemy in three years it's time we started waving the olive branch instead of the sword."

Just then a severe feminine face inserted itself at the carriage window. "Is there a John Tamson here? Aye, there he is. Cam oot o' that smokin' carriage, ye heathen, before I tak' ye by the lug. Dae ye think your wife's a haddie for the curin'?"

John Tamson left, and the astonished silence which followed was broken by one passenger remarking: "Puir fellow, nae wunner he's a pacifist. It's mair nor three years o' war he's had, I'm thinkin'."

Wise Bertie.

Mamma—Oh, Bertie, here you are again all covered with mud from head to foot.

Bertram (in tears)—It isn't my fault. I was sailing on a plank, when Willie Meigs gave me a push, and over I went.

Mamma—Well, what are you crying so about? Is it painful to be covered with mud?

Bertram—No, it ain't; but I thought that if I came in laughing you would whip me.

RED CROSS NEWS

SOCKS

Socks must not have a ridge under the heel nor at the end of the toe nor a back seam stitch.

Do not knit coarse yarn on fine needles.

Do not make double heel.

Break any knots in the wool, and join by running each end into the other with a darning needle for about six inches.

Always knit loosely.

Always shrink yarn before [illegible]

Always wash socks carefully before turning them in.

Medium sizes are required [illegible] gest numbers —Foot 11 inches.

Loosely cast on [illegible] enough stitches to [illegible] when stretched o[illegible] for 4 inches; knit [illegible] inches in all.)

Heel—Take [illegible] of stitches [illegible] two needles. With right side of work toward you, knit across plain, turn, purl back the stitches, turn, knit plain, repeating these two rows (always slipping the first stitch) until the heel measures three inches in length.

With right side of work toward you, knit to middle stitch, knit 2 together knit 1. Turning other side of work toward you, slip 1, purl 2, purl 2 together, purl 1, turn, slip 1, knit to stitch before the hole. (Hole is made by turning work.)

Knit the stitch before the hole and the stitch after the hole together.

Knit 1, turn, slip 1, purl to stitch before the hole. Purl this stitch and the one after together. Purl 1, turn, repeating this until stitches are all on one needle.

With right side of work toward you pick up stitches on one side of heel (calling this first heel needle), knit plain across front (or front needle), then pick up stitches on other side (calling this second heel needle.)

Divide the heel stitches on to the two side needles, and knit right round again to the center heel.

First needle, knit to within 3 stitches of the front end of side needle, knit 2 together, knit 1.

Front needle plain.

Third needle, knit 1, slip 1, knit 1 pull slipped stitch over, knit plain to end of needle.

This reducing of stitches to be done every other row until there are as many stitches on both back needles as there are on the front needle. Knit plain until work measures 9¼ inches from the back of heel.

To narrow for Toe—

Narrow every 5th stitch for once around. Knit 5 rows plain, narrow every 4th stitch once around, knit 4 rows plain, narrow every 3rd stitch once around and 3 rows plain. Narrow every 2nd stitch and 2 rows plain. This would leave about 20 stitches for closing.

Intake of Toe—

Having 10 stitches each on front and back needles, break off wool, leaving 12 inches with which to finish off sock and thread it into a darning needle. Put darning needle into first stitch of the front knitting needle as if to knit, pull wool through and take off stitch. Put darning needle in next stitch of front needle as if to purl, pull wool through but leave stitch on. Go to back needle, being particularly CAREFUL THAT THE WOOL IS TAKEN UNDER THE KNITTING NEEDLE EACH TIME AND NOT OVER. Put darning needle in first stitch of the back needle as if to purl, pull wool through and take off stitch; put darning needle in next stitch of the back needle as if to knit, pull wool through but leave stitch on. Return to front needle, put wool in first stitch (the one previously purled) and repeat. In finishing off end of yarn, run yarn once down side of toe, so as not to make ridge or lump.

Tie together below ribbing at back of leg.

HOW OCEAN CABLE DIFFERS FROM TELEGRAPH LINE.—Although an ocean cable is in fact a telegraph line, it is so differently constructed that the rules for working land lines are almost entirely dissimilar. With the first long cables, great difficulties were encountered in sending through them a current of electricity of sufficient power to record the messages rapidly. The methods for overcoming these difficulties, and in use at present, are described as follows:

Keys which, when depressed, transmit positive and negative currents, are employed at the sending station in connection with the regulation battery. The current of the battery does not pass directly into the cable, but into a condenser, which passes it into the submarine line.

This greatly increases the [illegible] of the current used and [illegible] to cut off interfering [illegible] currents.

The instrument first employed in receiving cablegrams was a reflecting galvanometer. Upon the magnet of this instrument is carried a small curved mirror. A lamp is placed before the mirror and behind a screen in which there is a vertical slit. Flashes of light moving across this slit as the needles moved from left to right, indicated to the trained eyes of the operator the letters in the message being transmitted.

But this method of recording messages was found to tax the eyesight of the operator severely, a few years' work often rendering them almost, if not totally blind. Recognizing the fact that there must be something wrong with such a system, inventors set about repairing the defect, which resulted in perfecting the syphon galvanometer, which has all but superseded all other receiving devices.

BIG FLOCKS ONLY SOLUTION

Why Idea of "A Sheep for Every Family" Would Be of Little Value.

The idea of "a sheep for every family" is good in intent and purposes. Both manufacturers of woolen goods and meat distributors would like to see a larger supply of raw material. Sheep raising, however, is not like gardening, says the Albany Journal. To be successful it must be conducted in the open and on a large scale. Breeding itself is a large and complicated matter. Also, the nature of the wool-growing animal is unsuited to combined commercialism and domesticity. The family who had a sheep running around the dooryard would form an attachment for the animal that would put the latter on the footing of a family pet, that could be separated from its valuable wool only if the sheep's comfort were considered.

As for the use of a family sheep for meat, such would be rare. "Led like a lamb to the slaughter" has more than a literary meaning. One who could see a sturdy steer felled by a hammer blow or an uncouth and squealing pig slashed in the throat, would turn from the sight of a lamb, without fight, held helpless while slowly bled to death. Most people like lamb or mutton, and most people require woolen clothing, but for both food and warmth the sheep-raising industry will depend upon commercialized flocks.

Lesson in Thorough Bass.

The use of the word "stuff" in the president's Thanksgiving proclamation, comments the Brooklyn Eagle, furnishes the discord needed to emphasize the harmony of the flowing rhetoric. In effect the president says "We are the stuff." If our enemies twist it we shall not care. James G. Blaine was called the "plumed knight" by Ingersoll, and it passed for a fine compliment, but Blaine thought it suggested the "white feather." If the president thinks his boys are the stuff, we shall all agree with him. Here's where the kaiser gets a lesson in thorough bass.

WHY

Physical Defects Make Children Backward

Neglected supervision of the child by its parents before it enters school is the subject of sharp rebuke and admonition from Dr. Wilmer Krusen, director of the department of public health and charities of Philadelphia.

The general tendency of parents to treat without concern the symptoms of physical disorder displayed in their children, especially so long as the little ones are able to romp about in all the exuberance of youth, is taken seriously to task by the director.

"It is universally agreed that the personnel of a military organization must be physically fit to endure the trials and hardships incident to its particular duties," says Doctor Krusen. "In a measure the same holds true of the children who are to enter a new environment when registered upon the school rolls, and who are to give up their customary hours of play at home for a seat in the classroom, to be occupied for definite hours every school day. A change of discipline from that of the home to that of the school, together with the labors of study, brings about a complete mental change in the attitude of the child. Are your children prepared for this change or are the older boys and girls ready to take up their advanced studies?

"The eyes, ears, teeth, nose and throat should receive special attention, as defects of these parts of the body are most frequent.

"Defective vision must be corrected if the child is expected to keep up with its studies and to maintain the same standard as the normal child. Good hearing is also essential to the child who receives oral instruction, as many cases of backwardness are primarily due to defects of hearing. Diseased tonsils and adenoids are responsible for no small number of cases of illness among children, more especially during the school term. By having them removed at an early date we permit the child a better opportunity to combat the diseases of childhood.

"Of no less importance are the teeth. We cannot hope to improve the physical state of the schoolchildren unless their food is properly masticated by sound, healthy teeth. Infections through the mouth often have their beginning in carious teeth."

How Binder Twine is Made From Palmetto Trees.

At last the palmetto tree is coming into its own. It has been posing for two-thirds of a century in Southern poetry and Southern oratory, and now Florida and South Georgia and other Southern states have turned upon it and said: "Now you be useful as well as ornamental. You shall take the place of Mexican sisal for the manufacture of cotton bagging and binding twine and, instead of being used for broom-making to sweep ignoble floors, you shall become useful to the nation."

A newly invented machine spins the fibre out of the palmetto leaves. They are stripped green from the trees, fed into one end of the machine and emerge balls of binder twine from the other end.

In four months the stripped tree will have another coat of leaves which will be cut off at their stems and fed to the machine, and so on three times a year.

ONE OF THREE

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

Walgrove turned from the box office. Disappointment was written on his face.

"There's not a seat to be had, Sis. I'm awfully sorry. But I expected it. There hasn't been a show like 'Back There' on Broadway for some time."

His sister, Peggy, reflected his disappointment. However, she smiled. "It can't be helped, Vance," she said cheerfully, "but I should love to have seen it before going back home."

They were leaving the foyer reluctantly when two girls approached them.

"We have one seat extra in the fifth row," the elder of the two girls said, addressing herself to Peggy; "if you care to take it—it will help us out."

"We wanted two," Walgrove returned quickly, being quite accustomed to this manner of purchasing seats; "my sister is only in town until tomorrow, and I wanted especially to take her tonight." He lingered a moment while the two girls conferred in undertones.

The elder again spoke, this time addressing Walgrove:

"Miss Gale says she will let you have her seat since it is the only night your sister can come. Perhaps she and Miss Weeks will get seats another time."

"Oh!" Peggy exclaimed swiftly, and, turning to the girl: "This is too good of you. I wouldn't think of using your seat." She saw with swift comprehension that the girls had no doubt bought the seats many weeks in advance by way of a rare treat. They apparently toiled for their theater tickets a few extra nights a week.

Gladys Gale answered, a slight blush making her even more charming to look upon. "I am only happy to let a soldier have my seat," she said. "Nan Weeks and I will come another time." She spoke for a moment with her companion; then, with a swift nod which included both Walgrove and his sister, she went out of the theater.

"It is awfully good of your friend," Peggy continued speaking when, after Walgrove had exchanged four dollars for the two seats, they all went into the theater. "You see, my brother may be called out any moment, and I wanted to see as much of him as possible." She gazed rather proudly at the big man in khaki, and so did Miss Greene.

The latter, much inclined to conversation, told Peggy about the small flat she had with the two other girls.

"I just kind of keep an eye on Gladys and Nan," she said. "I'm a good deal older and feel motherly toward them. We all work during the day and now Nan has taken up Red Cross work. That's the reason she had to give up her seat tonight. She's been waiting for a vacancy in the home-care class and didn't expect it to come so soon."

The rising of the curtain prevented further chatter, but Vance was conscious that his sister welcomed feminine companionship as well as his own.

During the intermission Miss Greene again spoke of the small flat.

Peggy voiced her thoughts. Her eyes remained wistful. "You see, I don't know many girls in the city, and those whom I have met only care for restaurants and dancing. I quite envy you your little homey flat and late suppers. I suppose you have little studio aprons and a tiny kitchenette and pink potted plants in the windows."

Miss Greene laughed quickly. "You could not have described us better had you been in our flat." She paused a moment in thought while she cast a swift, searching look at Vance Walgrove. "He seems human," was her inward comment. She turned again to Peggy. "If you and your brother will come I will be so glad to telephone the girls to prepare enough supper for five instead of three tonight."

"Oh! I should just love it!" Peggy's real delight shone in her eyes. "I will persuade Vance while you are telephoning."

She had little difficulty with her brother.

Miss Greene telephoned, and when the play was over a taxi whirled them swiftly down to the little flat.

After introductions Walgrove naturally drifted toward Nan Weeks. She was slim and pale and seemed quite unable to stand the strain of typing all day long and studying nursing in the evening.

"But I would far rather die in a nurse's uniform than in ordinary office clothes," she argued softly to Walgrove. "You are doing your part," she ended, with a glance at his khaki, "so let me do mine."

The evening was altogether charming and they were all sorry when it was over.

Walgrove wanted to take Nan and Gladys to "Back There," since they had missed it, but neither was willing that he should sit through it twice.

"Then I'll get two more chaps and make a party of six," he announced. "I'm sorry you won't be here, Peg," he added.

During the drive back to the hotel Peggy talked much of the evening. "Nan Weeks is far too beautiful and sweet to nurse soldiers," she said firmly. "They will one and all fall desperately in love with her and their fevers will soar sky high whenever she tends them."

"Peggy—you're a brick! I knew you were seeing Nan Weeks as my wife almost before I did." He squeezed her hands affectionately. "I will have to make quick work of it, for we may be called any day to France."

CARRIE'S BIG WEDDING FEAST

Father Remembers His Days of Despair When He Invites Guests for the Sumptuous Repast.

Twenty years ago Max Gootschneider landed in New York with a slim young wife, a baby girl that could just toddle, $10 in money and a hopeful disposition. The first few weeks in the strange America was a period of such forlorn and homesick misery that Max never forgot them.

And so, when Max and Mrs. Max, no longer slim, sat in their fine house discussing the details of a celebration which might be suitable to signalize the engagement of the only daughter of a prosperous furrier to marry a rich young diamond merchant, Max had an idea, says the Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Mamma," he said, "you remember when we landed in New York—you and Carrie, our baby, and me? You remember how it was for us then? Well, we shall give a feast for our daughter Carrie and her young man, but we will give it to the people who are now like we were then. Our friends are happy. They are not hungry. They are not sorrowful because there is no one to cheer them up. They do not need a feast like the poor people that have come from the old country. Those are the people who shall enjoy our Carrie's wedding feast."

And so the feast was given, away down in East Broadway, in the building which is occupied by the Hebrew Immigrants' Sheltering Aid society, and which overflows nowadays with hundreds of misery-stricken people from the countries at war in Europe.

There was a room where 150 persons could eat at once. As soon as one crowd of 150 had finished, another came in. There were no invitations and no red tape. Max and Mrs. Max and the pretty Carrie and her proud husband-to-be stood at the door and smilingly welcomed all who came. There was chicken and duck and goose and gefilte fish. And everyone was welcome to all of everything.

Even the kids, who stealthily pilfered goodies were urged to pilfer more. And the feast brought joy and good cheer to a thousand people who are homeless in a strange land. And the spirit of kindliness so permeated it all that Mamma Gootschneider, now and then, was compelled to wipe away a sympathetic tear. And after it was all over, Papa Gootschneider declared that his undying regret would be that he had only one daughter to give a wedding feast for.

Precious Gold.

Since the beginning of the war, the nations of Europe have sent quantities of gold to our shores. So, as far as gold is concerned, we are richer than ever before, comments a financial exchange. But gold, except that portion of it which is made into gold foil, or used for gilding, or made into jewelry, or otherwise employed in the arts, has no value in itself. Gold, in general, is only a symbol of value, of use for buying; and if the goods are not at hand to be bought, the gold is valueless. You cannot eat it, or drink it, you cannot warm yourself with it. As a financial writer said the other day, "If gold were to be discovered in the same quantities in which copper is found, it would be as beautiful and as useful in the arts and sciences as before, but we should have to stop using it for money. You would need 30 pounds of it to buy a pair of shoes and the price of the shoes would be about $7,560."

Washington Ate Hoe Cakes.

There was no wheat shortage in America when George Washington was a wealthy Virginia planter, before the Revolution, yet that eminent patriot set an example in the conservation of flour which citizens of today would do well to follow, says an exchange.

Wheat is not essential to a satisfying meal, the food administrator points out. Corn is an excellent substitute. The following excerpt from Irving's "Life of Washington" is interesting now in view of the agitation for a wheatless diet:

"He was an early riser, often before daybreak in the winter when the nights were long. He breakfasted at seven in summer, at eight in winter. Two small cups of tea and three or four cakes of Indian meal (called hoe cakes) formed his frugal repast."

It is said that, even in the days of plenty, big spreads were an infrequent occurrence in the Washington home.

DON'T FRET ABOUT TRIFLES

Magnifying Petty Mistakes and Troubles Weakens One's Ability to Master Bigger Problems.

Some of us rather overdriven women get into a habit of magnifying the petty mistakes or troubles of disagreeable events of the day, the business day, and making them out very big and terrible. The result is a loss of energy, for magnified troubles bring worry and anxiety, which is a sort of poison to the mind and even to the body, writes Jessie Roberts in the Houston Post.

Don't hang on to the mistakes of yesterday. Today's will be easier to manage if you haven't that drag on you, and by a little more firmness you can soon get to the point when the annoyance of the moment gets itself settled in that moment and then is dropped.

We would think it a fool thing to feed our body poison, even in the minutest particles; but we feed our nerves poison, even though it be in small quantities, when we deliberately fret and worry over small things, making them huge and important by the mere turning of them over and over.

These are strenuous days. Don't weaken your strength by unnecessary and harmful fussing over trifles. After you have done whatever can be done to remedy what has gone wrong, turn your mind away from it. Refuse to be dominated by small mistakes. Few of us, by the way, are terrified by a really big thing. We rouse up and meet it definitely and firmly, unless we have a yellow streak. But the small thing often breaks down our nerves—and then our nerve.

How to Develop a Good Memory.

In an article about James Horgan and his great memory in the American Magazine, a writer says:

"'Attention comes first,' Horgan told me. 'When you meet a man, look squarely into his face for a second and forget everything else in the world. Etch his features into your brain; you can do it if you will keep practicing.

"'It isn't enough to catch a name so that you can pronounce it. You must learn to see it. You must visualize it so that it appears in your brain as clearly as if it were printed on paper before your eyes. A trained memory is packed full of double exposures—to use a photographic term.'"

HOW

To Remove Stains From Various Fabrics

To give clothes a longer period of service, and to conserve garments or fabrics which may appear to be hopelessly stained, is the object of a publication issued by the United States department of agriculture.

Lady Macbeth might have had less trouble with that spot if she could have read this bulletin on "The Removal of Stains From Clothing and Other Textiles." Uncle Sam says that if the housewife knows the cause of a stain, she can find a common-sense way to get rid of it by following the directions given in this bulletin. Methods are outlined for the removal of practically any kind of stain, from "acids" all the way through the alphabet to "whitewash." They have been tested by the home economics experts of the department.

One of the first requisites in removing stains, says the bulletin, is to know the kind of fabric which is spotted and, if possible, the nature of the stain. Some stain removers which will give admirable results on cotton or linen may, if applied to woolen or silk, remove pieces of the fabric as well as the stain. Likewise, stain removers which are entirely satisfactory for cleaning silk or woolen materials cannot always be used for removing stains from vegetable fibers, such as cotton or linen. Similarly, treatment which will remove some stains immediately will cause those of a different nature to take firmer hold on the fabric.

The second cardinal principle in spot removal is to work while the stain is fresh. Cold or lukewarm water is usually the housewife's best aid for a first step, the bulletin indicates, if the nature of the stain is not known and if the fabric is not injured by water. Hot water should not be used until it is determined that the staining material is such that it will not be "set" by heat. Stains from meat juice, blood, egg, milk, and other materials containing protein are set by hot water.

If stains are of such a nature that they will not yield to laundering or sponging with water or with water and soap, it is necessary to use one or more of a number of chemicals. Besides water and soap the bulletin names as the substances most useful in removing stains, Javelle water, potassium permanganate solution, oxalic acid solution, ammonia water, carbon tetrachlorid, French chalk, and cream of tartar, each of which may be used successfully, provided the right one is used at the right time.

MOTORIZE ENGINES OF WAR

How Expert Automobile Men Are Aiding Uncle Sam.

In the ordnance department of the United States war department, the need for motorization of artillery and the handling of ammunition by means of motor-driven vehicles are fully appreciated, and rapid strides are being made toward what will doubtless be the most completely motorized artillery equipment of any of the allied powers. This motorization involves not only the use of numerous trucks, most of which will be of the four-wheel-drive type, but also the use of numerous tractors. In this work the Society of Automotive Engineers is represented by its president. Closely associated with this are the design and construction of any apparatus like so-called tanks. A past president of the society is commissioned to work upon the development of these special engines of war. Another S. A. E. engineer has just been assigned to take charge of the design, operation, and upkeep of motor-driven ambulance equipment.

No less than 50 S. A. T. members are now located in Washington giving active assistance and advice to the government in the design of the military trucks. In connection with the aircraft program the standard U. S. A. aviation engine has been designed by two well-known S. A. E. engineers.

Why Care Should Be Given to Children's Eyes.

An elaborate study among many kinds of workers has convinced an authority that the use of the eyes in close work makes the severest strain. The trouble is likely to be aggravated by the abnormal position of the head and the body, particularly when habitually maintained. With proper teaching in schools much of the evil might be obviated; but, unfortunately, in this matter the school authorities have been both ignorant and neglectful. However, among educators just now there is an increasing realization of responsibility. In many schools throughout the country they are insisting on a strict examination of the eyes of children. It really should be one of the first things done to a child on entering school. It should be a part of a careful physical examination, resulting in the correction of bad habits and the forming of habits that are wholesome.

Climbers Imprisoned Atop Fuji.

The wisdom of erecting huts on Fuji for refuge in case of sudden storms of snow and rain was proved recently when a violent fall of snow and hail burst upon the crest of the sacred mountain. During two days more than 10,000 climbed the mountain and sudden arrival of the storm caught several hundred of them upon the hilltop. They sought safety in the numerous refuges. When the storm burst the police compelled all excursionists to wait for better weather at Gotemba and Tarobo. Relief parties were sent out but were unable to get through the drifts. Anxiety was felt for the food supply, but the adventurers came down safely. For two days the people in the snow were incommunicado, owing to the destruction of the telephone wires. These will be buried before next season.

Jerusalem's Great Walls.

After 1244 Jerusalem was under the rule of the sultans of Egypt until the year 1517, when Selim I conquered both Palestine and Egypt, taking the title of caliph, and carrying off the sacred banner of the Moslems to Constantinople. Selim's son, Suleiman the Magnificent, once more built the great walls about Jerusalem. These walls of Suleiman are the present fortifications of the city. But the great walls of Suleiman the Magnificent are only the last of a long series of walls which, time after time, have been built only to be destroyed. The most tragical destruction not only of the walls, but also of the whole city, was that which was carried out by the Roman armies of Titus, in the year 70 of our era, in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian.

RED CROSS NEWS

On the evening of February 4th and 8th at Witherell hall, Mrs. F. B. Wood will produce the Columbia March with song chorus. This is a stirring patriotic march, by Seneca G. Lewis which was recently rendered with great success by Sousa's Band at Detroit. The music is very catchy and has been rendered several times by the Red Cross Concert company. After Monday, Feb. 4th copies at 25c each will be on sale at Gaston's and Coller's music store or they may be obtained from Mrs. F. B. Wood. Every music lover should procure a copy of this music as the entire proceeds of the sale will go to Tecumseh Red Cross.

Mrs. W. B. Hartzog and committee sent twelve pair of knitted socks to Headquarers this week. Mrs. Hartzog still has plenty of yarn on hand.

Mrs. Theodore Crane and committee have finished 13 suits of pajamas.

There was a good attendance at the surgical dressings department on Wednesday. During the afternoon 150 yards of gauze was cut.

Miss Sena Hosmer sent to Headquarters 12 sweaters and 22 pairs of wristlets.

More volunteers are still needed on Thursday and Friday afternoons in the surgical dressings department. Good instructors will be present on both days who will most cheerfully aid the new workers.

Mrs. Margaret Beamish has just completed 22 pair of socks.

Since circumstances have made it necessary for me to resign the chairmanship of the pajama committee the Tecumseh branch of the Red Cross, I wish at this time to express my thanks to the efficient committee members who have worked so faithfully during the past eight months. To them must go the larger share of credit for whatever the committee has accomplished. I ask for my successor the same loyal support and cooperation. Mrs. Theodore Crane.

Mrs. Raynor Haussler of Manchester was a guest at Headquarters on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Frank Nyland and committee completed 38 surgical shirts, which were sent to Headquarters Monday.

Height Effects in Airplaining.

Some effects of airplane flights at very high altitudes are described in a recent English report. "Height effects" begin to be felt at 10,000 feet and become marked in most cases from 17,000 feet up. The principal difficulties are cold and lack of oxygen. Strange to say, no airplane has yet been devised on a plan which deliberately utilizes the heat of the engine to keep the passengers warm, although any tractor model has this effect to some extent. The matter of oxygen is solved by taking a supply in a container, which the aviator mixes with air when he feels oppressed. It is feared that flying at very high altitudes, to be made possible in the future by further development of models, may produce a trouble analagous to the "bends" experienced by workers in compressed air caissons due to the extreme pressure changes.

CHARLES EVERETT COLLINS

After an illness of only a few days Mr. Charles E. Collins died of pneumonia at his home in Macon, Monday night, January 14th. Having always been of sturdy physique and excellent health, the news of his sudden death came as a great surprise and a shock to his large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Collins was born September 20th, 1848 on the farm purchased from the government by his father Isaac Collins, and subsequently purchased by himself that he might continue to make it his home. In the year 1888, he was united in marriage to Miss Ella R. Prentice, of Fairmont, Missouri. Two sons were born to them namely, Mr. Everett and Mr. Ellsworth Collns, both of Macon.

Mr. Collins from early boyhood evinced a profound love, a marked aptitude and an enthusiastic interest in farming. He regarded it as a most honored occupation, as a science and as an art, which called for specialized and expert knowledge. Into his chosen occupation therefore he gladly and constantly put the best thought of his brain, the most skillful touch of his hand and the vigor of his sturdy manhood

He loved his large farm with its fine and modern equipment, like a painter loves his picture, because it embodied and expressed, not only his life but also the lives and labors of those whom he loved. He valued it, not for itself, but for the opportunities it offered to render highest service to humanity. He cherished it because it enabled him to build for himself and for his children a home where God's blue sky was ever visable and where the green meadows, the stately trees and the song of the birds were constant companions.

Progressive and intensive in his methods, receptive in mind to that which was best in farming, knowing cattle and sheep, but especially horses in such a thorough way as to render his judgment of them valuable, Mr. Collins rose to an honored and an acknowledged place of excellence as a farmer.

He was however not simply a farmer in the highest sense of that word, he was also a citizen to whom citizenship was a sacred trust, which lifted it above narrow partisanship to a patriotic and sacrificial regard for the ideals and the world interests to which our nation has committed itself. Never was he ambitious for office but to whatever public positions he was called he brought the same faithful, efficient effort that he gave to his own interests.

Being brought up a Friend he was never churchman, but he ever carried in the depths of his soul a reverent regard for things spiritual and for his Heavenly Father. Recognizing the church to be a vital force in the affairs of men he was always a willing and generous contributor to its work.

It was not because he lived the whole of his life in one place, but because he lived that life so fearlessly honest, so quietly helpful and neighborly, so constructively progressive and so intimately in touch with the things of life, that he created an atmosphere and left an impression for good that will continue. His genial presence, his sunny optimistic personality, his true warm friendship and his thoughtful neighborly ways will be missed not alone in his own immediate community, but in the adjacent towns where he was so well and favorably known.

The funeral services, conducted by Rev. J. E. Somers of Ridgeway were held at the family residence after which the body was laid to rest in the beautiful Macon cemetery.

A wife, two sons, two brothers Albert and Allen Collins of Macon, two sisters, Mrs. M. S. Gray, of Ridgeway, Mich. Mrs. Alice M. Burns of Weston, O., together with a large circle of relatives and friends, deeply and sincerely sense their loss yet all future days will be richer because of the memory of a life that was pure, sincere, upright, "suncrowned."

It is Eddie Guest, who most truthfully says:—

"There is no death, I'm sure of that, the thing that seems to be,
Is but the touch of winter that lays bare the spreading tree;
And as the roses bloom again,
 when all the snows have gone,
So do the souls of men arise with finer raiment on.
Oh weary heart be brave and strong nor wince beneath the sting,
Beyond the gates of death there lies the sweet, eternal spring."

Wm. C. Burns, D. D.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors who so thoughtfully assisted during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father, for the comforting words of our pastor, and for the beautiful floral remembrances.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett I. Collins.

COMMUNICATION

Ann Arbor, Michigan
January 30, 1918

To the editor of the Herald:

The person who signed himself "Observer", in the last Friday's issue of the Herald made one absolutely untrue statement in speaking of the "J-Hop", and thereby created a mistake and false impression of the activities of the University at the present time. He also revealed by his remarks, that he either never had been subjected to the broadening influences of higher education, or at least, had been totally unaffected by them.

Because of the antagonistic attitude towards the U. of M. which I realize does exist in Tecumseh, and the unfortunate and unfair manner in which I have heard it mentioned, I wish to correct the wrong impression created by the "Observer's" communication. His statements have very apparently been made by one entirely ignorant of the true state of affairs. As for the "J-hop",—that matter was quite effectively disposed of by Mr. Waring, whose letter appeared in Tuesday's issue, and I only wish to confirm first hand, all the statements which he made concerning the abolition of that function. When the faculty committee suggested an informal hop, campus sentiment opposed it strongly, and the columns of the "Michigan Daily" were crowded with protests from students. The resulting action taken by the student governing body was, as you have been old, entirely voluntary. This however, is but a very small part of the patriotic work that is being done here.

As an alumnus of the Tecumseh High School, I am glad to hear it praised for its patriotic decision, but not at the expense of the University. As a student of the latter, I earnestly desire that the people of Tecumseh be brought to realize how great an institution it is, and how undeserving of the sneering criticism directed against it by the "Observer." It is for this reason that I mention some of the things which are being done in Ann Arbor in the present crisis.

First, for the Red Cross. The Board of Regents have donated the use of the Angell House, the home of the late President Angell, to the Red Cross free of charge. Practically every woman student has pledged anywhere from three to six hours a week for the making of surgical dressings. At a recent mass meeting, composed mainly of students over 1,000 memberhips were subscribed, totaling over $1,500.

Second, for the "Y". In a recent campaign conducted by the students, the members of the faculty and student body pledged over $25,000 or more than five dollars per capita. Besides this, the Association of Collegiate Alumnae and the Michigan Union have given $1,000 each for the support of the University Union in Paris which is relieving the Y of the care of University men in the allied armies. A member of the faculty, Professor Vibbert, is giving his services to this cause absolutely without salary, and is even paying his own expenses.

Third, for the services of the United States. Every fraternity is flying a service flag. Each day, the news of new enlistments appears in the Daily. We are nobly represented in the army, the navy, the marines, the ambulance corps, the engineering corps, the aviation corps, in every branch of service. Major (formerly known as Professor) Bursley is giving courses preparatory to service in the quartermaster's and ordnance departments. Hundreds of students are graduating from these courses and automatically entering service every few weeks. Several of the finest physicians on the faculty, now hold commissions in the medical corps. The Dean of that school is now Major Victor C. Vaughn. Altogether the University has given about 1,600 students and 2,400 alumni, making a total of 4,000 men. (These figures were furnished by W. B. Shaw, secretary of the Alumni Association.)

1,800 men have voluntarily enrolled as cadets in the University Reserve Officers Training Corps, and are devoting an hour and a half a day to work in Military Tactics and Science and Physical Training, under the supervision of Lieutenants Mullen and Williams of the U. S. A. By virtue of work in these classes and others, men are constantly being recommended for commissions by the officers in charge.

At present, all buildings on the campus except the gymnasium where the military classes are held, are being closed every evening at 6, in order that the University's supply of coal may be conserved and used as it has been for the past few weeks, to keep the people of Ann Arbor from freezing. This move has caused a great deal of inconvenience, but no complaints are heard. It is cheerfully accepted with a full realization of the patriotic necessity for such action.

Indeed, I can safely say that no organization in the state, either officially or through its members as individuals, is doing more for our country. I hope that these statemens and those of Mr. Waring may go far towards establishing in Tecumseh, an opinion of the University which shall be [illegible] prejudiced, and worthy of a community as broadminded in spirit as I have always believed it to be.

As for the Observer, perhaps in view of these facts and the falsity of his statements, he may congratulate himself on being anonymous. Hereafter, when prejudiced critics aspire to "observe" such a great institution, I hope they will first investigate the truth of their assumptions, and afterwards, sign their names to their observations.

THE FOOD VALUE OF HONEY

It ranks high.

Honey is sugar in a form that does not tax the digestion.

It is extremely nourishing, and is of value in building up persons whose health is below par.

The regular use of Honey in any home would prove a benefit to every member of the family.

We've a splendid sample of Honey on hand now. Combs are well filled. The extracted is clear, pure and wholesome.

Studebaker WAGONS, BUGGIES, HARNESS

A STUDEBAKER THAT HAS SAVED MONEY FOR ITS OWNER

I bought my Studebaker from your agent, D. M. Smith, at Flint, Mich., in 1876, and have used it continuously on my farm.

I have a farm of 140 acres, with good buildings, and this wagon hauled all the material.

Two years ago my son put on three tons of sugar beets and hauled it over frozen ground to the scales.

Last summer we hitched a loader behind it and drew our hay to the barns.

The wagon had not been sheltered half the time for the last twenty years yet has never broken a wheel or an axle.

John H. Wood,
Flushing, Mich.

Not a broken wheel or axle —in use 37 years —still good for haying

Think what it means to get 37 years and more work out of a wagon.

Cuts down the cost—doesn't it?

The Studebaker wagon will stand any reasonable strain.

We know what Studebaker wagons that we have sold have done.

Come in and let us tell you what our experience has been with the Studebaker people, our experience with Studebaker wagons and the experience of those to whom we have sold Studebaker wagons.

FOWLER FOUND AFTER LONG EXCITING CHASE

Former D., T. & I. Station Agent is Charged With Bezzlement.

ARRESTED NEAR JACKSON

Pursuit of 15 Months Had Led All Over Country and Into Alaska Without Success.

After successfully evading capture by officers for 15 months Rufus Fowler, former station agent for the D., T. & I. railroad company in this city, was placed under arrest in the city of Jackson this morning and this afternoon he was lodged in the county jail with a charge of embezzlement against him. Fowler was arrested by Undersheriff Ford Van Dusen of this city and his appearance was made possible by the continued vigilance of members of the sheriff's force.

Fowler was station agent here in 1916. He left this city rather mysteriously early in the autumn of that year and an audit of the books made soon after his departure revealed that the company was short about $2,200. A warrant for Fowler's arrest was issued October 25, 1916 and since that day the members of the sheriff's force here have trailed the former agent through the west and northwest and into Alaska.

Mrs. Fowler had volunteered her aid to the officers in locating her husband but whenever she gave them a tip as to his whereabouts it was just as he was leaving for another place and instructions to officers in those cities always arrived a few hours too late to catch him. At one place in Oregon a sheriff received orders from Lenawee county only 40 minutes after Fower had left. He was trailed from one place to another, but Lenawee officers preferred not to undertake the expense of sending a man after him and they were firm in their belief that Fowler would return to Albion to visit his wife, his parents and his infant child. A few days ago the officers received a tip that Fowler was coming home and last night a telephone message to Albion instructed a Jackson county deputy to search the Fowler residence. The man was found in the house and this morning he was taken to Jackson where he was turned over to Under-sheriff Van Dusen.

Fowler is 43 years old. He came here March 28, 1916, and left October 11. Representatives of the company, who issued the complaint before Assisting Prosecuting Attorney James H. Cornelius two weeks after Fowler's disappearance, declared that the company's loss was between $2,200 and $2,300.

—Adrian Telegram.

Rufus A. Fowler, or more commonly known in Tecumseh as "Capt." Fowler, was for about two years local agent of the D., T. & I. Railway just before he was transferred to Adrian. While living here he was married and brought his bride to Tecumseh where they lived in a house on South Union street. Fowler while living here was considered a hustler and through his efforts the local business of the D. T. & I. road showed a splendid increase. Mrs. Fowler made many frends while living in Tecumseh and was quite prominent in the Presbyterian church.

It developed after he had skipped out of Adrian that he was short in his accounts here and an auditor was sent here to check out his books. Just what the amount of the shortage was we are unable to state but it is supposed to be several hundred dollars and probably is included in the amount above stated.

Fowler has since been brought to Adrian and is now awaiting trial not being able to secure the bail amounting to $1,000.00.

TECUMSEH MAY LOSE ONE STOP ON JACKSON BRANCH

Considered War Measure

I. A. Schroeder, general passenger agent of the Toledo district, and A. R. Phillips, passenger agent of the New York Central Lines, were in town Wednesday and conferred with the Board of Commerce in regard to cutting out one of Tecumseh's three train stops on the Jackson Branch.

These gentlemen claimed that Tecumeh was about the only town in the country where more than two train stops were made and said that Government officials were urging that one of these stops be abandoned.

It was the opinion of the members of the Board of Commerce that if any stop should be discontinued it should be the one at the north depot. The Chicago street crossing was considered essential and if any attempt was made by the railroad people to cut this out, they would make a fight and compel them to maintain a flagman and gates.

"THE WHIP"

"The Whip," a wonderful picture in eight acts, was presented at Bradley's Wednesday evening to a crowded house.

This picture has been running in many of our larger cities where it has been seen by many people who were loud in singing its praises and many of our people were glad of the opportunity of seeing it here. It was a pleasing love story, filled with many thrilling experiences, many such as the auto wreck and race, the railroad wreck and the race track scenes must have cost large sums of money to produce.

"The Whip" was wonderful in its conception, the various scenes were magnificent as well as spectacular and the story was unusually thrilling.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Tecumseh people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Dell Hubbard, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "Kidney complaint had troubled me for a long time. My back ached and I was sore and lame. I could do no stooping or lifting and my kidneys acted irregularly. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought some at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They soon strengthened my back and rid me of all signs of kidney complaint."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hubbard had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgrs., Buffalo, N. Y. ad

OLE BULL'S COLONY

Norwegian's Dream of Model Home Now Scene of Ruin.

Recalls Misplaced Confidence and Made All the More Tragic Because of Splendid Ideals.

Only the ruin of the villa "Valhalla" remains of the ill-fated Norwegian colony established by Ole Bull in Pennsylvania in the late '50s. The story of the colony, says the Kansas City Times, is one of misplaced confidence, made all the more tragic because of the splendid ideals that led to its establishment.

The great Norwegian violinist, always an admirer of America, wished to obtain a location for a model colony of his countrymen. He bought a thousand acres of a firm of land dealers and soon afterward brought to this country several hundred Norwegians. A clearing was made, the village of Oleana built and, in an address to the townspeople, Ole Bull set forth the hopes that had inspired his mission.

The address follows:

"Brothers of Norway! From the clime where the north wind has its home; where the maelstrom roars, and where the aurora for half the year takes the place of the genial sun, we have come to find a home. When we were among our mountains, and war was bringing want and famine upon us, we heard there was a country in a milder climate where liberty dwelt and plenty reigned. Upon looking over our records, we found that our countrymen, under Thorfin, had discovered that land more than eight hundred years ago, but that they were met by cruel and savage Indians, and had left no record of themselves, except some traces of their sad history engraven in the rocks of Fall river, and one temple which they raised to God on an island at the mouth of Narragansett bay. All other record of them had passed away.

"How different is our reception from that which Thorfin and his followers received. No savage Indian startles us with his war whoop, but kind friends meet us on every side, taking us by the hand and giving us welcome to our new home.

"Brothers of Norway! We must not disappoint this confidence, but by lives of industry and honesty show to our new brothers that they have not misplaced their friendship.

"And now, to these gentlemen of New York and Pennsylvania, who have so kindly assisted by their counsel and advice in this work, I return my most sincere and heartfelt thanks, and casting ourselves upon the goodness of our heavenly Father, resting secure upon his promise, let us go on in the daily performance of every duty, and he will bless us."

There was a pathetic aftermath. Hardly had the pioneers got well under way with their homebuilding when it was discovered that the violinist had been victimized. The company that sold him the land had no valid title to it. The people of Oleana scattered, some of them penniless and with few friends in the new country. Ole Bull, with splendid loyalty to those he had brought to this pass, gave public concerts to raise money for their relief.

A Handy Utensil.

"The soldiers in the trenches wear gas masks, and near the front the French children go to school with them on," mused a citizen of Periwinkle, who was of unusual width betwixt the eyes, observes the Kansas City Star. "I believe if I could get hold of a practicable gas mask I would wear it to the town hall tonight, where the handbills announce that Hon. Braggin Blow will talk on the patriotic duties of the hour, but where in reality he will with many words permit us to learn the glad news that at the earnest solicitation of his many friends he has reluctantly consented to become a candidate for re-election to congress."

The Smallest Cartoon.

A certain small boy has drawn a caricature picture of President Wilson upon a single grain of corn. He spent about a half hour in doing the work, for which he used water colors, says Christian Science Monitor. It is said that some time ago he drew a similar picture upon a single grain of corn and, upon sending his work to the president, he received an appreciative acknowledgment from Washington. This is believed to be the smallest cartoon picture in the world, for it measures only about a quarter of an inch in the longest direction. The likeness is in profile.

Easy to Remedy.

He—How shabby those boats look.

She—Why should boats be shabby? I've often heard my brother talk about the painters they had on board.

IONE'S SUCCESS

By JOHN GREGORY.

When a female infant was born to Mr. and Mrs. Welcome it had to have a name to prevent it from being lost in the shuffle. When the father was appealed to he replied:

"I don't care what you call it!"

The mother did care, however. She could make a delicious strawberry shortcake, but at the same time she was romantic. She decided almost at once to name the infant Ione.

"Do you like it?" she asked of the father when she had quite decided.

Mr. Welcome was a victim of gout, and therefore his point was well taken when he replied:

"No matter how you spell it, the name rhymes with bone, groan and moan, and that makes it all right."

Following the law of chronology, it ought to have been noted at the start that Stephen Hope made his entrance into this country just two years before Ione.

Stephen didn't cut much of a dash in the world when he took his place in it. In fact, he didn't ruffle the surface of Lake Erie a little bit as he grew up. He was placid.

Had Miss Ione been a boy she would have been into mischief half the time. She wanted to be on the go.

And when this girl and this sober-sided and placid young man became acquainted there were people who gasped, with the words:

"Did you ever hear of such a thing!"

There is no sense in the old saying that opposites attract, for you can't make oil and water mix, but for some reason Miss Ione Welcome and Mr. Stephen Hope were attracted to each other and got along very well. It became a case of love on his part, and he finally proposed. She ran away without answering him, but she told her mother and her mother exclaimed:

"Lands save us, but you mustn't think of it!"

"But I sort of like Stephen."

"You'd better let him be your grandfather than your husband. You wouldn't live together three months."

Miss Ione went away and thought of the matter for an hour, and then returned to say:

"Mother, I read a story one time about such a young man as Stephen is."

"There was a girl and she was about like me."

"Yes?"

"Someone told her that the young man would be altogether different if he got a sudden great shock. That what he needed was to be aroused out of himself. So the girl stood on the railroad track and let him snatch her off just a second before the locomotive would have gone over her. It was also a close call for him, as the cowcatcher shaved the heels off both his shoes."

"Mercy! And how did he act?"

"Why, he was a jolly fellow after that, just as I wish Stephen was."

It was accident that gave Miss Ione her opportunity. Stephen would play croquet with her, and once in a while take her for a ride in his auto, but would not go fishing or to a lawn party or on an excursion.

One day when she was three miles from home with another girl, they discovered a bed of wild strawberries on the bank of a river and near the road. Two days later Stephen took a young man and the two girls to the spot in his auto. There were berries galore, and each one was helping himself when the plan for the great shock came to Miss Ione like a flash. She had taken notice, and she did not doubt herself. If she could withdraw from the party and get into the auto and go whizzing across the bridge and up the hill [illegible]

It took quite a bit of strategy to accomplish her purpose, but it was carried out. The first warning came to the three pickers when the horn gave a defiant toot, and they rose up together and cried out in unison.

The auto started at its highest speed, and was almost at the far end of the bridge when its driver got scared and checked it and backed it. Bump! went the hind wheels against the railing, and crash went this railing, and machine and girl took a drop of twenty feet down to water deep enough to drown an elephant.

"The infernal little fool! The blithering idiot!"

Then Stephen took his dive! The auto had gone to the bottom, but the girl was paddling and splashing around and screaming for aid. He landed near her and soon had her ashore.

Miss Ione was more scared than hurt. After two or three minutes she sat up and asked:

"Oh, Stephen, are you swearing?"

"Yes, by thunder!" he replied.

"And did you call me a little fool?"

"Yes, a dozen of them!"

"Stephen, come here and kiss me!"

"What for?"

"Because I love you and am going to marry you! Oh, Stephen, it's so good—so good!"

"What in the devil is so good?"

"Your being like other men. I want to hurry home and tell mother!"

Owl Good Enough.

A servant was once dispatched to purchase a chicken, and passing a naturalist's on her way, she went in and inquired the price of the broad-faced chicken in the window.

"Oh," said the proprietor, smiling, "that's not a chicken; that's an owl."

"Well," said the maid, "it'll do all right; it's only for the lodger."

DRIVING CATTLE BY MOTOR

Stock Dealer Introduces Innovation Which May Sooner or Later Relegate Broncho to Background.

A new use for a motorcar has been found by a cattle dealer in one of the middle western states, whose business compels him to drive extensive herds of meat on the hoof along the roads, says an exchange. During the hottest part of last summer this purveyor determined to drive his animals by night in order to spare them the inevitable suffering that attended such operations in the middle of the day. Getting in his car, he started the herd ahead of him in the road, and by throwing the searchlight before and honking his horn he kept the animals moving quickly in the compact mass.

There are instances of the use of the motorcar in round-up work in the far West, so that the traditional picture of a cowboy astride a bucking broncho may have to give way to one of that leather-breeched gentleman cuddled down into the wheel of a flexible runabout, his lasso presumably dangling over the windshield.

HANDSOME AFTERNOON GOWN

This afternoon gown is of navy blue taffeta combined with foulard in blue and white. The cover jacket of navy blue chiffon falls in graceful lines and is marked by bead embroidery following the same design as in the foulard. The Turkish skirt is a distinctive feature. The hat is a georgette sailor, fur trimmed.

FROCKS OF VELVET SOMBER

Texture and Color Lend Distinction to Daytime Costumes Though Little Trimming Is Used.

The women who dress well apparently cannot do without the little velvet frocks. More often they are built up on very straight lines, with just enough concession to the waist to avoid any awkward blockiness.

Narrow-shouldered, large-waisted, long-sleeved, narrow at the hem are most of these velvet frocks, but many variations are played upon the theme. Even where there is absolutely no trimming, as is often the case, individuality is given to the model by some original line of drapery on collar or sleeve; and if the velvet is one of the exquisitely soft and lustrous fabrics on whose beauty war conditions seem to have imposed no limitations, its texture and color and line lend it more distinction than any amount of trimming could give.

The daytime velvet frock if not black is almost always somber in tone, though the texture of velvet gives the lie to somberness. If not very dark its color is likely to be neutral, and although there are bright blues and reds of the brick, mahogany, rust and brighter wine shades among the velvet afternoon gowns, they are very few compared with the host of blacks, browns, taupes, deep wine and purple tones, dark greens, dark blues and grays.

Where trimming is used upon the velvet day frock it is usually a bit of embroidery in self-color and metallic thread or discreetly used fur. Much less fur is introduced upon dresses than was usual last year, though fur is lavished upon the coats of the season.

POKE THAT HINTS OF SPRING

Just to take the chill off the air, take a peek at a poke bonnet, different from the rest, and with unusual charm. It is made of rows of ribbon facings in various colors and it is called "Maytime," most appropriate for a bonnet that breathes the very feeling of spring into one's veins. The tiny flowers are remindful of youth.

JUST LIKE MOTHER

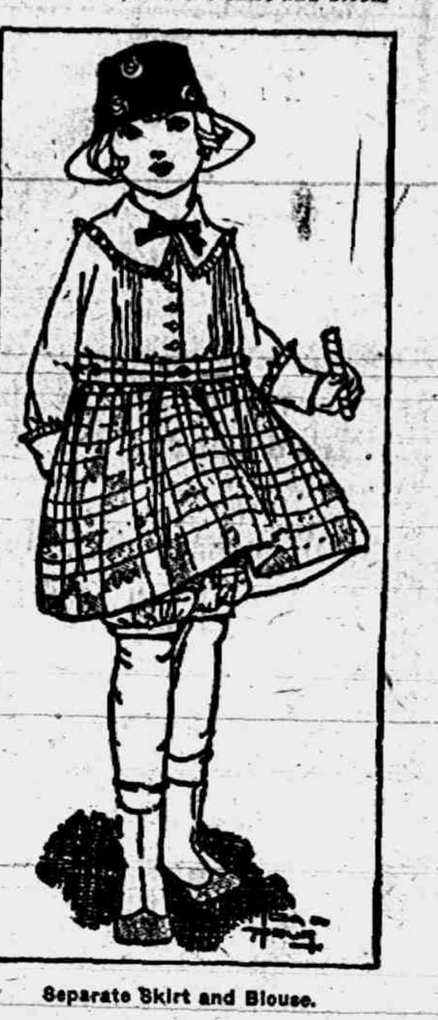
Small Girl Has Her Separate Skirt and Blouses.

Very Serviceable Outfit for School or Kindergarten—Use of Bloomers Makes Petticoats Unnecessary.

Even the very small girl has her separate skirt and her collection of dainty little lingerie blouses. The wee lass hasn't attained to embroidered georgette and chiffon affairs as yet.

Either cotton or wool fabric may be used for the separate skirt and matching bloomers for a six-year-old, and both of these garments are held snugly in place by means of buttons and buttonholes. The blouse should be finished at its lower edge with a firm, strong band with two rows of buttons set on it. The underneath row is for the bloomers, and these may be of white bone or pearl. The outer row, especially if the skirt is of wool fabric, should harmonize in color with the major shade shown in the skirt material.

Separate skirts and washable blouses for small girls make up very serviceable school or kindergarten outfits. A fresh, clean blouse every morning is a necessity, of course, but less labor is required to launder a blouse than an entire frock, and the skirt and bloomers can be worn several weeks without cleaning, other than a casual brushing and pressing.



Separate Skirt and Blouse.

Of course, the use of bloomers eliminates the necessity of petticoats, and here economy is again served.

Handkerchief linen, fine dimity or plain white lawn, are excellent blouse fabrics for the very young lady. The one shown in the sketch has clusters of tucks back and front, with narrow ruffle finishing collar and cuffs.

FEMININE FRILLS

The coat tunic is a novelty.

Many wraps are in crepe style.

Tapestry shopping bags are new.

Satin coats are heavily embroidered.

Many of the winter suits are belted.

Fluted ribbons are used for trimming.

Stock collars are made of white satin.

Crow blue satin makes a pretty dress.

Gray moire trims a black satin frock.

Some waistlines have dropped to the hips.

Astrakhan crowns are seen on French hats.

Hats may or may not match the suit in color.

Full sleeves of velvet are used on cloth dresses.

Sealskin is a good trimming for brown velour.

Suit coats are apt to fall full about the hips.

Evening gowns are straight and loosely girdled.

The tunic is not a rumor, but a fact of fashion.

Tunic effects are noticed on almost every frock.

Wool frocks are trimmed with fringe of monkey.

Furs for Mourning.

For those who prefer black furs to all others, or for those in mourning who find something incongruous in the brown or gray furs associated with crepe-trimmed garments, there are lovely pelts of black lynx, broadtail, black fox and sealskin made into conservatively modish muffs and scarfs and appropriately lined. The linings, by the way, have a good deal to do with the consistent attractiveness of these mourning sets. Generally they are of dull-finished crepe silks beautifully applied; or the lining may be of white satin veiled with black georgette crepe or chiffon. Occasionally gray chiffon or a gray brocaded satin is employed, but these are exceptions.

TORPEDOES ON FOUR WHEELS

Explosive Propelled Toward Enemy Trenches and Controlled by Means of Wires Attached to Works.

La Domenica Del Corriere, Italy, reports a new war device, the invention of an English engineer, Strafford Talbot. Literally, it is a torpedo on wheels which may be propelled toward the enemy trenches and controlled from the starting point by means of attached wires.

The explosive is mounted on a metallic box which rides on four wheels. Attached to the box is a contrivance consisting of a dynamo which propels the wheels. The entire machine is electrically controlled, permitting the explosion of the charge at the desired moment.

Two parallel wires connect the torpedo with the control station. These are carried on spools and unwind as the machine advances. The power is derived from accumulating batteries at the starting point. When it is desired to fire the charge all that is required is to push a button. According to the inventor the total cost of this contrivance is about $100.

BIG PACKERS CONTROL MARKET

Testimony at Federal Trade Hearing Condemns Meat Barons.

Washington—Charles H. May, manager of the Farmers' Co-operative association ,and independent and co operative packing plants of Madison, Wis., testified at the federal trade commission's hearing that the five big packers took turns in cutting prices on beef and pork in the co-operative association territory so that the latter's sales were reduced greatly.

He said he knew from years of experience with Swift & company that the packers' prices were below cost of production.

Since the commission's investigation began, May testified, it has been impossible to obtain invoices of sales by the big packers, although butchers readily gave them before.

CAMP CUSTER NOTES

The wireless is now receiving daily weather reports from the government station at Arlington.

Reserve officers graduated from the first training school are now formally given precedence for transfers and promotions over officers of the second school.

Reports on the condition of the feet of the men in the command determined by an inspection ordered by General Parker show a number of faults in fitting shoes.

Private Charles L. Holt, Detroiter in the 11th company, 160th depot brigade, was sentenced to six months in the guard house for making fraudulent application for a dependent allotment allowance.

Orders have been issued permitting any unit to use lumber from the various scrap piles. That which can be utilized for repair work, is to be conserved. Only the useless pieces may be used as fuel.

Evidences of the Goethals system of administration affairs of the quartermaster department are manifested daily at Custer. If the needed articles of wearing apparel are not in stock, the new chief purchases them in open market.

Through the Y. M. C. A. the Red Cross is carrying on a campaign of publicity for the purpose of informing the soldier of his privilege of asking protection for his family. The Red Cross offers to assist in case of sickness at home, to provide legal advice in case the soldier's property rights are attacked, and to give any aid in its power to his dependents.

Propaganda sent out from Battle Creek that the city is infested with German spies and may become the hotbed of their operations, does not receive much credit at Custer. The intelligence office of the division has the handling of all such matters, both in camp and in the city and stated that so far as known there are no spies in operation in or near the town.

Forty dollars a gallon is a high price to ask for liquor, but it was the sum demanded by a bootlegger who was captured in Battle Creek by the military police. The vender was attempting to dispose of the stuff in half pint flasks for which he asked $5.

Information has been received to the effect that the judge advocate general has ruled that the men can not make allotments to dependent relatives and cannot continue such allotments while absent from duty on account of disease resulting from intemperance.

BIG ALCOHOL PLANT WRECKED

Explosion and Fire do $500,000 Damage at Marquette.

Marquette, Mich.—An explosion followed by a fire early Tuesday, which destroyed the alcohol refining plant, the primary building and a series of condensers of the Pioneer Iron Furnace Co., owned by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. of Cleveland, O., caused damage estimated at $500,000.

A time bomb set in the plant is said to have caused the explosion.

The Pioneer Iron company manufactured alcohol and acetone, the ground chemical for practically every high explosive, and was turning out huge war orders for the United States and allied governments. It was the largest plant of its kind in the United States.

Officials of the company say that it will take nine months before the buildings and their machinery can be replaced.

The fire was one of the most spectacular in the city's history. Beginning with an explosion in the alcohol refining building of the plant that rocked the city and shattered hundreds of dollars' worth of residence window glass and plate glass in store fronts in the business district, a mile and a half away, the blast was followed by a huge sheet of flame shooting high into the sky as enormous tanks of alcohol caught fire. Then followed a series of smaller explosions as the various storage talks in the refinery went off, and the flames, fanned by a high wind, leaped to the primary building nearby, setting fire to that, and causing further explosions of chemicals and alcohol.

SECRETARY BAKER DEFENDS COURSE

IN REPLY TO CHAMBERLAIN'S CHARGES LAYS BARE ACTS OF WAR DEPARTMENT.

MILLION MEN IN FRANCE SOON

Says 32 National Guard Divisions Are Ready to Go as Soon as Ships Are Available.

Washington.—America will have an army of 500,000 men in France early this year, with 1,000,000 more trained and equipped ready to follow as quickly as ships can be provided to carry them—and the outlook for ships is not unpromising. Upwards of 100,000 are now overseas, it is estimated.

Secretary Baker gave this information to the nation and to the world Monday in a statement before the senate military committee, baring much that until now has been carefully guarded, with the army's military secrets, in answering charges that the government has broken down preparing for war.

From early morning until late afternoon the secretary addressed the committee, and a crowd including many members of both houses of congress, gathered in a big hearing room of the senate office building.

While many things disclosed impressed, the committee was frankly amazed when told that the men of 32 national guard and national army divisioned camps are ready to go today at need. When members wanted to know why such things had not been given publicity before, Mr. Baker spoke of the reluctance of military men to reveal their war plans and quoted German remarks about America's advertisement of her preparations.

Emphasizing that he was not there to defend himself or anybody else, the secretary urged the committee again and again to lay bare any shortcoming or failure of the department that it might be corrected.

Biggest Task is History.

Never in the history of time, he declared, had an arm yof its size been declared, had an army of its size been raised, equipped, trained and pre- United States.

Mr. Baker took personal responsibility for getting men under training before their equipment was ready "to the last shoe button." Such officers as Major General Leonard Wood, he said, had urged this policy.

He described conferences that evolved the ordnance program and its fulfillment, submitting documents to prove that Frarnce and Great Britain were supplying artillery and machine guns for the first forces at their own urgent request in order that ships might be used for other purposes.

In all that was done prior to the departure of the first troops, General Pershing shared in the deliberations and approved the dicisions reached, Mr. Baker declared, and now surrounded with a staff of regular trained officers who could be illy spared from the great task at home. General Pershing is in France as "the eyes of army." Every step taken since has been founded on his long daily cabled reports of what is going on at the fighting fronts.

Tables were cited to show that overcrowding in the camps and cantonments had not been general and that sickness had come mostly in the camps where medical opinion had agreed it was least to be expected. The history of the development and building of the cantonments was given in detail to show that every precaution possible had been taken.

Analyzing efforts of the ordnance bureau, the secretary said that General Crozier had urged for years a greater artillery preparation; that he at least had realized the time gun making requires. But even France herself, "with the enemy at her throat," he added, had not been able to see what vast gun programs the war would lead into.

When Mr. Baker closed it was apparent he had created a profound impression. Chairman Chamberlain said so before he left the stand. There was no attempt to cross-examination.

NO LIKELIHOOD OF SPECIAL SESSION

PROSPECTS ARE THAT SOLONS WILL NOT BE CALLED UNLESS NEW CONDITIONS ARISE.

FLOUR SALE ORDERS ISSUED

Food Administration Tells Dealers to Sell in Quantities fo Less Than One-half Barrel.

Lansing.

Unless reasons not now known operate to bring it about, there will be no special session of the Michigan legislature.

With the passage by the last session of the budget and railroad passenger fare commission acts, the belief was general that a special session would be called in the event either commission recommended new legislation. Both laws provided that the commissions should report January 1, or as soon thereafter as possible, to the governor, and the latter should thereupon call a session if, in his opinion, it was necessary.

The budget commission, it is understood, has about completed its work. It was ready to report some time ago, according to rumor, but questions over some of its recommendations, raised by state departments that would have been affected, caused a delay, and work on its report is still under war.

It is also understood that the commission, besides formulating a budget plan for the conduct of state business, will prepare the state's first budget, and submit it to the legislature for the latter's consideration.

As no special session will be called to consider the budget legislation recommendations, there is ample time for the preparation of the initial budget.

Dealers Told How to Sell Flour.

Orders covering the sale of flour in Michigan have been promulgated by Food Administrator Prescott on advices from Herbert Hoover at Washington.

The telegram from Mr. Hoover, which was sent to all the county administrators, reads as follows:

"To prevent hoarding flour, following the president's proclamation, suggest you enforce ruling with reference to quantity sales of flour previously outlined to-wit: The sale of flour by retailers, millers or other dealers in towns and cities to individual consumers shall be one-eighth to one-fourth barrel quantity or less. In rural or foreign communities in one-fourth to one-half barrel quantity or less.

"Gross maximum profit for wholesalers of flour should not exceed from 50 to 75 cents a barrel. Profit exacted by retail dealers in original mill packages should not exceed from 80 cents to $1.20 a barrel, depending on character of service performed.

"Where retailers sell in amounts less than original mill package, the gross profit should not exceed one cent a pound. Any profits in excess of these or in excess of that obtained in pre-war times, will be considered cause for investigation.

"Substitutes for wheat flour should be sold at not more than a reasonable advance over actual purchase prices of particular goods sold, without regard to market or replacement value at time of sale."

Meningitis Under Control.

Hope of an early and successful conquest of the meningitis epidemic which broke out in the 85th division at Camp Custer last week, is held by the division medical officers.

Isolation of carriers of the disease is the greatest problem confronting the medical staff. To effect this they have ordered that throat cultures be taken of all men who have been brought in contact with proven cases and any suspicion of a case results in immediate isolation.

Division medical officers say their greatest aid in the present fight is the serum treatment which has reduced the mortality rate in meningitis from 90 to less than 25 per cent. The use of the serum has also removed the dreaded after effects of the disease.

A modified quarantine was ordered, as soon as the meningitis cases were uncovered. This effects approximately 8,000 men of the Three Hundred and Thirty-seventh and Three Hundred and Thirty-eighth infantry regiments and the One Hundred and Sixtieth depot brigade. The men of these organizations are not only allowed but urged to spend as much time as possible out of doors, but they cannot mingle with the other regiments, nor attend any of the various schools which are in operation.

Nearly every man in the organizations was receiving instruction in some sort of school.

No Report From Rail Committee.

The commission appointed to consider the increase of passenger fare rates on Michigan railroads has so far done nothing, and, as far as is known, no steps have been taken to organize for actual work. This commission, however, may begin work during the summer and prepare recommendations for the next regular session of the legislature, beginning in January, 1919, or one year later than contemplated by the legislature that created the commission.

134 War Plants Exempted.

One hundred and thirty-four manufacturing institutions in Michigan have been granted special exemptions for the Monday holidays decreed by Fuel Administrator Garfield, accordingly to word received by State Fuel Administrator Prudden.

The exemptions are granted, not for the whole plant, but for that section of it engaged in the manufacture of some certain article under contract by the government for the war department, the navy, or something in the line of extra ordnance.

In addition to being exempted from the closing orders, the plants become preferred creditors for coal shipments and outrank other manufacturers in this line, although the coal, too, must be for use only in the preferred lines for the contract work.

In addition to the specially exempted, all shipyards, all airplane manufacturing plants and the manufacturers of explosives of all kinds are exempted in a general order.

An important ruling from Washington concerns the "theaterless Tuesdays" and there is an exemption granted for shows which have been advertised prior to January 19. The ruling, as wired to Mr. Prudden, says:

"Special entertainments which have been publicly advertised on or before January 19, to the extent that tickets have been sold or invitations issued, either printed or written, or through public notices, may be held as planned. This includes entertainments, lectures, public meetings and concerts."

Smallpox May Hinder Next Quota.

Smallpox, it is feared by the Michigan war preparedness board and others interested in raising the next quota of soldiers, will interfere with furnishing the men sadly needed by the national government.

Therefor Dr. R. M. Olin, secretary of the state board of health, is receiving active support in his compaign to stamp out rapidly the disease, which has 675 persons in bed today, and others quarantined. Of the cases in Michigan, 500 are scattered over the state, and 175 are in Detroit. Lansing has not a single case.

The outbreak is attributed by Dr. Olin to widespread mild smallpox a few months ago, which was generally diagnosed to be chicken pox. Health officers, who have not been as vigorous in enforcing the safeguards provided by law, are being called on the telephone as rapidly as complains are received and ordered to "quit monkeying and get down to business."

Another factor in the situation, in the opinion of Dr. Olin, is the inroads made on health officers and inspectors by the draft.

The active head of the health service of the state is planning to send inspectors in various sections of the state, first into Sanilac, Huron and St. Clair counties. In some places school authorities have been ordered to refuse admission to schools to children who are not vaccinated.

CAMP AT WACO COST $2,250,000

Figures Just Made Public Show Builders Made $125,000 Profit.

Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex.—Figures just made public by the board of auditors, show that the construction of Camp MacArthur involved a cost to the United States government of $2,250,000, and that the Fred A. Jones Construction company, builders of the camp, made a profit of $125,000. These figures do not vary greatly from the original estimates, but indicate one of the heaviest of the incidental expenses devolving on the government in the training of its citizen soldiery.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMP CUSTER

Bubbling drinking fountains are to be installed in every barracks building in Custer.

Individual firms have donated four motor tractors to the artillery brigade of the 85th division to facilitate training.

Up to January 1, 372 trials by court-martial were held and the convictions approved in this division. Of these 359 were in summary court for minor offenses; five in special court for the most serious offenses, and eight in general court for military violations.

Mess officers at the base hospital have made an appeal for dish towels. With several hundred patients in the base hospital, there are a lot of dishes to wash three times a day and the quartermaster does not have enough towels to meet the demand. A state wide dish towel shower is invited.

Nothing has happened in recent years which has caused more unfavorable local comment than the action taken by the New York Central in discontinuing our Chicago street stop.

We are led to believe that it is a war measure and came from the Government as one of their moves to make the railroad service of the country more efficient. This line of talk we don't take any stock in for we dont believe the Government cares a rap whether the Jackson Branch trains stop at Chicago street, North Depot or the Junction Depot. The railroad people evidently have been anxious for some time to cut out two of our three stops and have taken this time to do it when they could hide behind the skirts of the Government.

Tecumseh people want the Chicago street stop and will not give it up without a fight. The Commerce club and the Council each took the matter up yesterday and have appointed a representative from each body to take the matter up with the railroad people and if nothing can be done with them they will lay the matter before the State Railroad Commission and ask for some protection at the dangerous crossings through town. It is the opinion of many that the railroad can be forced to put in gates at Chicago and Logan streets, also install a bell system at other crossings.

Now let us see what the good people of this community have been forced to accept from the railroads, under the so called war economy: The railroad passenger service which Tecumseh and this community had formerly been getting, has within the last few months been reduced to just one-half.

The D., T. & M. has been stripped of its only passenger train, leaving the traveling public who wish to go to and from Tipton, Onsted and points west, an accommodation freight and passenger train which is due to arrive at some given point along this road anywhere between sun up and sun down.

Two trains each way have been taken off the Jackson Branch, one train each way off the D., T. & I. and our Sunday service has been taken off the Jackson Branch entirely until March 24th. Not content with all of this cutting of service they now have forced the traveling public to take a walk to the "Soap Box" located at the Junction in order to take a Jackson Branch train.

The people have submitted patiently to all of these changes and have been willing to accept the excuse that they were war measures, but refuse to have this last change crowded down their necks as a so-called war measure.

If we are compelled to go to the Junction to take our trains, the railroad ought to be compelled to furnish a comfortable and adequate place to take care of the waiting public, especially now in the severe weather when trains are anywhere from an hour to two hours late. It is a disgrace that the largest town between the two terminals of the Jackson Branch is forced to use the little excuse for a railroad station which is far too small and unsatisfactory in every way to take care of the demands which will be made upon it. Still we suppose if one is lucky enough to arrive early they will be able to secure one of the two rocking chairs and rock themselves into oblivion while waiting for a train. We believe Tecumseh's patriotism is being imposed upon and the so called war measure in this case is just an excuse.

A petition should be sent to the New York Central requesting the reinstatement of the Chicago street stop because of the inadequate and absolutely nasty facilities for taking care of passengers at the Junction and the great danger to pedestrians at the different crossings and alleys, especially Chicago street.

Who has the welfare of the public at heart enough to circulate this petition?

Meatless and Wheatless Menu In Connection With Lord Mayor's Annual Banquet at Mansion House.

At last the gaunt figure of famine has stalked into the Mansion House and edited the menu of the lord mayor's banquet. There, everybody who knows anything about English history or about good eating, knows that the center, the very palate, of gourmandise is situated, according to a London correspondent.

The British empire is ransacked for edibles and potables to furnish forth this aldermanic holiday. And when the occasion's star guest, the premier, rises to shake the pillars of the world with his address, the guests are often in such a state of torpor that they have to scan the morning papers to find out what he really said. But war has changed all that. When the time for this year's banquet approached, London's sensational press began to shout for a war menu so loudly that his lordship had to come out and assure the reporters of the meatlessness and wheatlessness of the coming feast. Another of England's glories vanished!

PHILLIPPA SANDS

By SUSAN SANFORD.

"If you don't like the company I keep—the door is not locked," Anne said defiantly.

"It will not need to be locked—against me, Miss Burton. I bid you good evening," he said, rising, hands stiffly at his sides. With a ceremonious bow he walked steadily toward the door. It burst open when he was two feet from it, thrusting him back into the room. As he straightened he saw [illegible] face, with [illegible] eyes, blue as the sky, now full [illegible] with red lips that cried, "Oh, have I hurt you? I am so sorry. It was very heedless of me!"

"Don't say Phil—Mr. Hayden was just about to go, so I should present him," Anne said with a smile of soft malice. Hayden stared. So this was Phillippa Sands, of whom he had heard such tales. An auspicious start, even [illegible]

[illegible]

"Stay—if your 'pressing business' [illegible]," Anne said, as ungraciously as hospitality permitted. Phil opened her [illegible] wider than ever. She [illegible] up a book and ran away saying over her shoulder: "I came to [illegible] I couldn't sleep a wink tonight [illegible] how the end [illegible]

[illegible] I know, of course, she is going [illegible] after luring him half way [illegible] but I don't know how."

"Why [illegible]?" Hayden asked as her footsteps grew faint outside. Anne looked at him steadily.

"Why?" she asked. "Phil is—just [illegible]. I told you she had been [illegible] talked about. You stood in awe of Mrs. Grundy until you saw her."

"Are you jealous like those others?" Hayden hazarded. Anne laughed [illegible].

"I don't know how to be," she said. "[illegible] Least of all Phil [illegible]. You saw how I resented your [illegible] I am a little curious."

"As to what?" said Hayden.

"Why beauty excuses," said Anne with a dry chuckle. Hayden flushed.

"It may reasonably excuse," he said. "And that with nothing ulterior. The sight of anything so charming makes [illegible] who knows life understand the instinctive jealousy it wakes in the uncovered."

It was handsomely said. Coming from Hayden it meant everything. Anne smiled at him, but could not help saying: "You wouldn't trust me to judge for myself."

Hayden reached for her hand, pressed it between both his own and answered, "I think it was because I don't care to have you do anything for yourself. I'm so much bigger and [illegible] and rougher. I like to think for us both. What do you say?"

"Nothing—until you've had a fortnight of Phillippa," Anne bubbled, her eyes dancing. "If it leaves you constant, then I shall never have misgivings. That is, of course, supposing I make up my mind to say 'Yes.'"

"We will tell her, of course," Hayden said with decision.

Anne shook her head. "Nothing to tell—yet," she said. "Besides, that wouldn't be fair. You both are so human, you could hardly resist forbidden fruit."

In the last day of the fortnight Hayden [illegible] with Phillippa through a [illegible] October world.

[illegible] is like this—our last [illegible]," Phillippa, standing [illegible] beneath a golden maple. She faced him, looking him full in the [illegible] yourself for loving [illegible] and identity. "You never [illegible] no more than I did [illegible]

"Yes," Hayden assented bowing his [illegible] talk of forgiving [illegible] If you love me—we can defy [illegible] world."

"[illegible] Anne," Phillippa said softly, "[illegible] my conscience. Don't laugh—I have one. Could I ever be happy knowing she sat in shadow?"

"She would not sit there—she is too fine, too strong. Besides, she left me free of her own choice," Hayden protested [illegible]. "That proves her [illegible]"

"It shall [illegible] prove my treachery," Phillippa interrupted. "So it is goodby for always. I'm going early tomorrow [illegible] shall never come back."

Hayden [illegible] she was [illegible] He tried to take her hand—she eluded him, and ran down the slope [illegible] till they came to the back gate of the garden. Phillippa [illegible] through it [illegible] her friend, crying: "[illegible] roses for anybody [illegible] Anne—remember, I want all of [illegible]

"[illegible]," Anne said, snuggling [illegible] in the hollow of her arm [illegible] will stay—for my wedding. Yes—I am going to marry you [illegible] Mark," holding out a hand [illegible] who stood smiling a little way off. "Don't cry because we [illegible] you'll have time enough to worry over it the rest of your life."

Hayden [illegible] her looked at Anne [illegible] "I think we had better make it a double wedding," he said. Anne gave him a pitying glance [illegible] thought of anything else [illegible] I told Mark about everything [illegible]

FIRST WHITE BOY

Youth Accompanied Columbus' Expedition in 1492.

Detailed at Helm While Superiors Slept, Youngster Was Blamed for Wreck of Santa Maria.

Many phases of the life of Columbus offer mysteries that the historians have never been able to clear away, and one student of the life of the great explorer has come across an incidental mystery that has an appealing interest. It relates to a boy who accompanied the expedition of 1492—the only boy among its members, and consequently the first white boy to set foot in America.

The contemporary accounts of the first expedition of Columbus mention the boy in question only once and that briefly. They indicate that he was the only boy in the expedition and they place on his young shoulders the blame for the great catastrophe that befell when the Santa Maria was wrecked on the coast of Haiti. To be sure the story of the wreck shows that the boy was less to blame than his elders, but it was easy enough to make him the scapegoat. It was the night before Christmas, 1492, ten weeks after the discovery of the land, and Columbus was pushing his search for gold among the West Indies. The flagship, the Santa Maria, was skirting the coast of Hayti, and late at night, as the wind was light and the ship barely moving, Columbus went to his cabin for rest. He passed the helm over to the captain. He, too, soon felt the need of sleep and went below. His successor at the tiller was a sailor and he shortly followed the example of the admiral and the master. Before he went he awakened the lad in question and told him to mind the helm.

The boy did not go to sleep. He was doubtless a live lad and he felt the importance of being trusted to steer the ship. But he was in strange waters and the currents were treacherous near that coast, says an exchange. The ship struck a reef. The admiral and crew rushed on deck in terror. Of course they blamed the boy. That was the way of the world before 1492 and the fashion has never changed.

That was the end of the Santa Maria. The crew reached the shore in safety and made a fort from the timbers of the wreck. In that fort, which they called La Navidad in honor of the day, about forty of the crew remained while their companions went home to Spain on the Pinta and the Nina. One historian mentions a tradition that the boy remained with this number, but it is only a tradition. The fate of the forty is a mystery, for when the second expedition of Columbus reached that island a year later there were only a few charred timbers and bones to be found. Perhaps the boy perished there. His name has not even come down to us, but the brief glimpse that we have of him is a fascinating one. There is something to stimulate the imagination in that fleeting picture of the boy who stuck to his post while his superiors slept.

Overcoming Camouflage.

An American physicist believes that the advantages of camouflage—or at least certain kinds of camouflage—can be overcome by an opposing army by providing its airmen and other scouts with colored glasses or screens of contrasting colors to use with field glasses, notes Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the colors of these screens are properly selected, uniforms and other objects may be made to appear in contrast, instead of in harmony, with their surroundings, he claims. Camouflage as practiced in many cases is accomplished largely by the use of paint, objects being given shades, that blend with the landscape. In spite of certain difficulties that would arise, it is believed that such efforts at concealment could be rendered quite ineffectual by the means stated.

Should Eat Mushrooms.

Wild mushrooms are a food that should be more largely utilized in this country now that food is scarce, according to William A. Murrill, assistant director of the New York botanical gardens, who thinks the people should be taught how to distinguish the poisonous from the wholesome varieties. Wild mushrooms are eaten in this country almost exclusively by the foreign-born population.

Mrs. Albert Lafluer, 20 years old, formerly of Alpena, was shot and killed by her insane husband in Saskatoon, Sask. Lafluer then killed himself.

The food inspector is investigating a complaint against canned tomatoes shipped to Ypsilanti by a Toledo house. It is alleged the tomatoes contained sand and ground glass.

Alarmed by cries of her 5-year-old son, Mrs. John Murphy, of Ludington, ran from the barn where she was looking after stock during the absence of her husband, and found the lad enveloped in flames. She rolled him in the snow and extinguished the blaze. The child lived 10 hours suffering intense agony.

Both tracks of the Michigan Central were blocked for more than 12 hours by a wreck six miles west of Dowagiac. Trains were held at Kalamazoo and Niles. A broken wheel on a car of a west-bound freight caused the car to list so far to the side that it was struck by an east-bound passenger train. The passenger engine was thrown 10 feet down the bank and turned completely around. Eighteen freight cars were piled up. No one was seriously injured.

WHY

Rats Constitute National Peril in America

To what extent the rat pest has become a national liability, entailing the loss of more than two hundred million dollars' worth of foodstuffs and other property in the United States every year, is told with a startling array of facts in a communication to the National Geographic society, derived from a country-wide survey by Edward W. Nelson, biologist. Following are some of the results of Mr. Nelson's survey:

"House rats destroy annually hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of foodstuffs and other property, and through the distribution of bubonic plague and other diseases cause the deaths of untold numbers of human beings.

"The common house-frequenting rats are of three species—the brown, the black and the roof rat. All are believed to be natives of Asia, whence they have spread to most parts of the world. In their relations to man their habits are so familiar that they may be included in one account. The larger size, abundance, more general distribution and aggressive predominance of the brown rat, also known as the Norway and wharf rat, has led to its being generally known as 'the house rat.'

"The history of the brown rat is an extraordinary one, one unequaled by that of any other mammal. It was unknown in Europe until 1727, when vast hordes of them swam the Volga river. A year or two later it arrived in England on ships from the Orient. Since that time it has steadily extended its distribution by means of ships and other transportation agencies, and by migrations overland, until it shares with mankind nearly all parts of the earth from Greenland to Patagonia and around the globe.

"It is a sturdy, fierce and cunning animal, with extraordinary fecundity. These characteristics have enabled it quickly to overrun and occupy new territory despite the never-ceasing warfare waged against it by man and the competition of other mammals.

"The smaller black rat and roof rat formerly existed in most parts of the Old World. They preceded the brown rat also in America, but when the latter arrived were promptly reduced by it to a secondary position or exterminated. Black rats still exist in some parts of the United States, and roof rats are common with the brown rat in the milder climate of the Southern states.

With an abundant food supply brown rats increase with almost incredible rapidity. They have from three to twelve litters a year, each containing from six to more than twenty young, the average being about ten. The young begin to breed when less than three months of age.

After careful investigation the United States public health service estimates that the number of rats living under normal conditions in our cities equals the human population, but that in country districts they are relatively three to four times as numerous.

DETERMINING AGE OF MAN

How Scientist Has Fixed Glacial Period in Sweden.

Prof. Gerald de Geer, a Scandinavian man of science, has for many years been studying the sands deposited by the glaciers in the Yoldia sea in Sweden. These lie in layers of alternately fine and coarse sand. It seems certain that the fine sand is deposited by the slow flow of winter and that the coarse layers are due to the summer flow when the streams are swollen by the thawing of the glaciers.

By counting these layers and studying their thickness, Professor de Geer has come to the conclusion that southern Sweden was first clear of glacial ice about 2,000 years ago.

This calculation coincides roughly with that derived from his study of the Niagara gorge by G. W. Wright and with that of Sollas, who holds that the last glacial epoch ended not more than 7,000 years ago.

Sir Bertram Windle says that "with such difference of opinion existing among the doctors" plain men should remember that any statements about ancient specimens of man being "hundreds of thousands of years old," perhaps even millions, are based on pure imagination and have no real foundation of any kind.

Why Man Should Be Well Dressed.

Ill-fitting clothes detract ten per cent from a man's efficiency, according to Dr. George Van Ness Dearborn, professor of psychology at Harvard, who addressed a national gathering of clothing manufacturers and store owners. "One can hardly estimate the benefits of being well-dressed and properly fitted," Doctor Dearborn said. "The well-dressed man spells success and inspires confidence. First impressions are most important, and many a man has got a place largely on account of the cut of his clothes. It goes without saying that the rich man should buy the best and attire himself with taste, but it even pays the poorer man to do the same, for an air of prosperity is contagious. Finally, well-fitting clothes add to one's self-respect, inculcate personal cleanliness and aid the man in business."

New Truck Sprays Sand on Streets.

Spraying sand on slippery streets is made easy by a new motortruck of ingenious construction. The sand falls from the truck body on a revolving disk at the rear and is thus spread in all directions, says the Popular Science Monthly.

Capital Punishment.

Capital punishment prevails in all the states of the Union except Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Washington and Wisconsin. In Michigan the only crime punishable by death is treason. The death penalty was abolished in the state of Washington in 1913, in Iowa in 1872 and restored in 1878, in Colorado in 1897 and restored in 1901. Hanging is the ordinary mode of execution, but in Indiana, New York, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Vermont and Virginia electrocution is the legal method. In Nevada hanging or shooting is optional with the condemned person.

January 27, 1918

Dear Dad:—

Your letter and the box received O. K. Can use the pajamas as they are just the thing. Am now all set ready for business. We are in barracks here with steam heat and everything is fine. Do not know how long we will be here but have orders to be ready at 12 hours notice so it may come any minute.

We have had a hard trip and did not get in here until Thursday morning. I am well as usual. There are lots of cases of scaret fever developed since we arrived, believed to have been contracted on the train. These men will have to to be left here until recovered. My first sergeant has it, this is quite a blow to me, as he was such a good man, will have to get along some way without him.

Lots of love to you and the relatives and best wishes to all.

RED CROSS NEWS

Perhaps someone may be interested to know just what use is made of all these hospital garments when they are unpacked over there In nearly all these hospitals there are many shelves, each one numbered, and each containing a patient's equipment Each wounded man when brought into the hospital is given a number and all the equipment on the shelf numbered the same belongs to him.

The contents of each shelf are as follows: Six shirts, four pillow cases, two hot water bgas, three suits of pajamas, two pair of bed socks, three hospital shirts, four pairs of socks, one pair of slippers, one bathrobe three wash rags, four face towels, two bath towels.

The comfort bag contains one tooth brush, one cake soap, three shirt studs, spool of black thread, white thread, needles, thimbles, six buttons, sixteen pins, three safety pin, handkerchiefs, pipe, pencil, paper and six envelopes.

These shelves must be replenished continually and 200 equipments are often distributed in one night. This is the reason why we are all working so that our own American boy from our town may never find an empty shelf.

Mrs. John McInyre's class of the M. E. church will meet at Headquarters on Thursday evening for the surgical dressings class with Miss Ethel Garlinghouse as instructor.

Crosses for service may be won in any department of Red Cross. Those who are in garment work or any other work have as much chance for earning crosses as those in the surgical dressings department.

The young ladies of the Baptist church will meet at Headquarters on Thursday evening, Feb 14th.

After 72 hours work in the surgical dressings department all workers are entitled to a Red Cross for coif and apron. All workers MUST provide themselves with a large white apron and regulation head-dress. The head-dress or coif is made of a piece of white muslin or organdie, 30 inches square, with a one inch hem.

Over 1000 dressings were made last week beside the work accomplished by the surgical dressing lasses.

What He Wants for "Plain Food."

Do you know this man, have you ever heard of him—the man who likes plain food? His tastes are of the simplest; a little clear soup yourself, clear consomme the color of pale sherry: Take a knuckle of veal and four pounds of lean beef . . . goes the sympathetic recipe. (Notice, you "take," you don't "buy.") "Fry, to a tender brown, carrots, onions," etc. So goes on this tender, delectable process until you finally "clarify." The time the cook spends upon the simmering, the frying, the clarifying, and the straining is not of course taken into account. "The man who likes plain food enjoys roasts of meat, joints and rib-roasts."—Exchange.

Chemistry Recognized Science.

Chemistry has been accorded an almost formal recognition as the science at the heart of modern warfare. The British ministry of reconstruction has pointed out that Germany selected the chemical industry for especial nurture in making its war preparations, especially that part of the industry dealing with coal tar derivatives, in which field the imperial government gradually won a temporary world monopoly. The minister of reconstruction has appointed a committee of six chemists to investigate the situation in England and to recommend a plan for making the British chemical industry self-sustaining and equal to any call upon it during and after the war.

Von Hindenburg a "Junker."

"Junker" is philologically akin to "Jonkheer" and has a quasi-equivalent in the English "Squire." The Junker is a man of some birth and of inherited property, especially land, says an exchange. The word is used to describe that large class of Prussians who come of noble, seminoble or at least old and "good" families and whose worldly possessions are such as to give them an appreciable stake in the government. Von Hindenburg is a fine example of the Junker; Ludendorff, his collaborator, is not a Junker by birth, however much a one he may be by taste.

PATRIOTISM OF THE STOMACH

Neither Fried Chicken Nor Biscuits Found by Hungry Hunters on Farmer's Table.

There are all kinds and varieties of patriotism—almost as many as there are pickles of a certain variety. There is the patriotism of speech, the patriotism of arms, or money, of service and so on. But of them all the hardest for the average individual is the patriotism of the stomach. So thought a bunch of Indianapolis men who invaded Brown county for a day of hunting, says the Indianapolis News.

After a day of hiking and tramping over the hills, in which a nice string of rabbits was the prize, these "tired business men" adjourned to the farmer's house where they had planned on a big "feed." You can imagine their surprise and disgruntled feelings when on seating themselves at the table they found neither meat nor bread. The expected fried chicken and hot biscuits were missing. Of course, no one said anything, but a good many thoughts made the air quiet.

That evening as they were leaving for the train the old farmer friend pointed to a small placard in the window, and said: "Well, boys, the next time you come down we'll have that fried chicken and biscuits. Mary said we was a member of the United States food administration now, and was the use of havin' a pledge card if you didn't keep the pledge."

They had chosen the wrong day. Besides bringing home a lesson to some of the party it served to call their attention to the fact that almost everyone down there, no matter how humble and how far back in the hill, had a food administration pledge card in the window.

BANANA FLOUR AND BREAD

Green Fruit, Full Grown, Is Peeled, Sliced and Dried, Then Ground in Ordinary Corn Mill.

At a meeting of the Horticultural club of Trinidad, samples of banana flour and bread were exhibited and the method of preparation described. It was explained that the bananas from which the flour and bread were made had been taken from trees only five days previously, the 'silk fig' small variety of bananas producing the best results, reports Henry D. Baker, American consul at [illegible].

The process was described as follows: "Full-grown green bananas should be selected. Peel, slice and dry quickly, preferably on a galvanized sheet, then grind in ordinary corn mill. From 63 pounds of fresh bananas 18½ pounds of flour had been obtained in the specimens shown. The bread, which was very palatable, had been made from two parts of banana flour and one part of wheat flour. The banana flour could also be used as a substitute for oatmeal porridge and also for making puddings."

LYMAN H. HOWE FAMOUS FOR EDUCATIONAL EXHIBITIONS

Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which comes to the Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, next week, Friday February 15th has been aptly described as "an inexhaustible mine of [illegible] and pleasure." This dependable entertainment is now on its 47th semi-annual tour, a most enviable record, and more than ever merits the patronage of discriminating amusement seekers. One of the principal features of Mr. Howe's latest program is China. There is something so impressive and attractive about this oldest civilization of the world that it has drawn travelers for centuries past to the shores of the great Chinese Empire and year after year new discoveries of the mysteries of China have added to its lure.

It remained for Lyman H. Howe, the pioneer exhibitor, however, to bring the real China to the people of the outside world. His photographers waited for five years and at last received permission to take the first photographs of "The Forbidden City" the most sacred and mysterious spot in all China. The Howe cameras combed the great Chinese Empire with its 400,000,000 people and missed nothing that is of interest. You might visit China a thousand times and not gain one-half the idea of Chinese life and Chinese character that this film portrays.

The new Lyman H. Howe program is remarkable for its diversity, for in addition to the scenes of the Orient, there will be close-up revelations of the exploits of Uncle Sam's gigantic war caterpillars, a fascinating day and night at Coney Island, the exciting capture of a wild mountain lion by a daring mountaineer and his fearless wife, the industries and icebergs of Alaska and a liberal offering of the clever animated cartoons and film novelties which are so characteristic of this entertainment.

NORTH STATION AND CHICAGO STREET STOPS HAVE BEEN DISCONTINUED BY JACKSON BRANCH

A. B. McLachlin, Local Agent for the New York Central Lines, Received Orders to that Effect Saturday

DOWN TOWN TICKET OFFICE DISCONTINUED

An order was received Saturday by A. B. McLahlin, local agent for the New York Central Lines, from the division superintendent which stated that on and after Tuesday, February 5th, all passenger trains entering Tecumseh over the Jackson Branch would stop at the Tecumseh Junction depot only.

This eliminates or cuts out two stops, at the north depot and at Chicago street. All passengers traveling over the Jackson Branch will now have to go to the Junction depot. The down town ticket office which in past years has been located at Gaston's store is also done away with and the general traveling public will have to go to the Junction Station to purchase tickets.

For years Tecumseh has been made famous to the traveling public and has been known as the "Three Stop Town." The doing away with our Chicago street stop is meeting with keen disappointment as this stop was almost universally used by Tecumseh people and people living in this vicinity. It is rumored that the Board of Commerce and the village council will make a vigorous push over discontinuing the Chicago street stop and if they are not able to have it put back again will go before the state railroad commission and demand that gates or a watchman be stationed at Chicago street as a public safety.

HARPER HOME IN BROWNVILLE CAUGHT FIRE

Monday evening about 9 o'clock the fire department were called to the home of C. J. Harper beyond the river in Brownville. There they found the roof blazing, but each winter the city water north of the river is turned off so the firemen had to shovel out the tap so the water could be turned on. While they were waiting the force of water, chemicals were used and about put out the blaze so the remainder was quick work. The furniture was some burned and several pieces broken in moving them out of doors and the siding burned from the ground to roof, also quite a spot on the roof.

JOHN BENNETT AND FAMILY QUARANTINED FOR SMALL-POX

Case Being Carefully Watched by the Health Officer

Monday noon the home of John Bennett, who lives on East Logan street was placed under quarantine by Health Officer E. E. Hendershott because of smallpox. Mr. Bennett was taken slightly ill last Thursday as was also his little grand-daughter Ruby Bachtal who lives with her parents in the same house. These cases were carefully watched and on Monday Dr. Hendershott, the attending physician, and Dr. Beardsley made a further examination and pronounced the disease a mild form of small-pox. The house was immediately placed in quarantine and the family ordered to strictly live up to the quarantine rules with the exception of the daughter Miss Florine who is forelady in the Herald office and she was allowed to continue her usual work provided that she secure rooms away from the house and stay away during the season of quarantine, also having her clothing thoroughly disinfected. These rules imposed by the health officer are being rigidly enforced.

It has been rumored that the East Branch school has been closed, but a talk with the superintendent at noon today shows that this rumor is not correct. The matter is largely in the hands of the health officer who probably will advise a liberal dose of vaccination among the pupils of the East Branch because the young daughter Geneva attended school there.

Due to the fact that our forelady was with her family up to and including Monday morning, the editor carefully considered the advisability of sending her home to be quarantined with her family both as a precaution to the office force and to the general public, but on the advice of competent local physicians, we have decided that as long as she separates herself from her family wears no clothing from the house which has not been fumigated, that this step is entirely unnecessary. Two conclusive reasons to prove this are that she was exposed to the disease during the week between Christmas and New Years and if she was going to have the disease from this exposure, she would have had it within 21 days. Again she was vaccinated ten days ago and the vaccination has scarcely worked. These two facts are conclusively held as a proof by the physicians that she is immune from the disease and absolutely satisfies the editor that he himself or his office force or the public at large are taking no chance from this source.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Tecumseh people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Dell Hubbard, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "Kidney complaint had troubled me for a long time. My back ached and I was sore and lame. I could do no stooping or lifting and my kidneys acted irregularly. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought some at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They soon strengthened my back and rid me of all signs of kidney complaint."

STORMS STOP COAL COMING TO STATE

JUST WHEN PINCH APPARENTLY WAS BEING OVERCOME, SNOW AGAIN INTERFERES.

CALLS FOR HELP NUMEROUS

Slowing Up of Transportation Has Caused Famines At Points So Far Untouched.

Lansing—Storms have apparently again nipped in the bud movements of coal to Michigan in large quantities.

For a few days the indications were that larger shipments of fuel were coming through the Toledo gateway, but the storm sweeping east through Ohio slowed everything up again.

Daily reports had indicated that more than 700 cars were leaving Toledo each day. A little less than half of this was consigned to Detroit, while the balance was to go into the state. The storm however, practically cut the former figures in two.

Advices are that Indiana and Ohio were completely snowed under and shipments to this state were stopped again just about the time there was every indication that coal was ready to come into the state in large quantities.

The storm in Michigan has caused an increase in the number of calls for help.

The slowing up of the roads inside the state gave every indication of causing famines at some points which had not yet been touched, and in addition was stopping shipments of coal en route to points on the west side of the state, where public utilities had been shut down for lack of fuel.

Some of the coal coming from Illinois and Indiana for the western points left points outside the state before the snowstorm appeared, but only a portion of the coal reached its destination in Michigan.

NEW LIQUOR LAW IS PROPOSED

Wet Amendment Would Permit Sale of Beer, Light Wines and Ale.

Lansing—The much-discussed, oft-predicted and generally expected wet constitutional amendment to permit the manufacture of beer, ale and light wines, has officially made its appearance.

A tentative draft of the proposed amendment sent in by Fred A. Baker, constitutional lawyer of Detroit, is now being put in the proper form in the secretary of state's office for the circulation of petitions.

The proposed amendment, in addition to legalizing the sale of beer, light wines, etc., attempts also to place a general liquor law in the constitution. It adds to the constitution some new sections, and at the same time revives the general liquor law of 1909, or what is generally known as the Warner-Crampton law.

Under the amendment, the licenses are to be issued by the circuit judges upon petitions of 25 qualified voters in a township, village or city and unless the township, city or village has already voted that no saloons can be opened there, the judges must take notice and grant some licenses.

In this manner the right of local option is really reserved to the particular locality, and in addition, where a vote against local option has not been had, the judges cannot "dry" the district by refusing all licenses.

In the main, the sections of the amendment restoring the general liquor laws are fashioned after the famous Brooks law, which for 30 years has been in effect in Pennsylvania.

U-BOATS SINK 69 U. S. SHIPS IN YEAR

GROSS TONNAGE LOST SINCE RUTHLESS WARFARE WAS STARTED IS 171,061.

MORE THAN 300 LIVES LOST

Teuton Ships Seized by America Have Tonnage of 686,494, Leaving Net Gain of 515,433 Tons.

New York—In the twelve months of unrestricted warfare launched against American and Allied shipping by Germany on February 1, 1917, there have been sunk by submarines, mines and raiders 69 American vessels totaling 171,061 gross tons, according to a compilation of sinkings made public during the period.

Offsetting this loss of American vessels, most of which were sailing ships, the United States since February 1 has added to her merchant marine by seizure of former German and Austrian owned ships, a total of 107 vessels having a gross tonnage of 686,494, leaving on the credit side of the American ledger in the account with the central powers a gain of 515,433 gross tons.

Loss of life caused by the sinking of the 69 American ships was more than 300 persons.

Percentage of sinkings of American ships compared with the number of vessels which have sailed through the war zone successfully is small. Records of the department of commerce show that, for the period beginning February 1, 1917, and ending with December 1, there were cleared from American ports ships aggregating 17,738,900 or approximately 24,834,460 gross tons.

Further offsetting the loss of tonnage occasioned by submarines, the United States, through the shipping board, requisitioned in American shipyards, 426 vessels totalling more than 2,000,000 gross tons and contracts have been awarded for 884 ships, a large number of which are now under way and are being rushed to completion.

In addition, the shipping board, October 15 last, placed under government requisition 393 American vessels of over 2,500 tons deadweight capacity which were already afloat and immediately assigned them to the task of carrying supplies for the Allies and the American forces abroad.

FROCK FOR LITTLE MISS

This pretty frock would delight any little girl so fortunate as to possess it. It is fashioned of pale blue crepe de chine with hand-crocheted buttons, and adorned with a hand-made lace collar.

WOOL TRIMMINGS IN VOGUE

Tailored Suits of Velours Often Supplied With Knit Scarf Collar and Double Cuffs.

Don't worry that your knitting needles may have to lie idle for a few weeks. There will be plenty of chance to ply them in the new wool trimmings, which are coming to the fore with gusto on new blouses and sports clothes, says a fashion authority. For instance, you will find a tailored suit of wool velours supplied with a knit scarf collar of bright contrasting wool and double cuffs of the same, which can be pulled down over the hands in lieu of a muff.

Lots of wool girdles are seen on plain jersey gowns. Even crepe de chine shirtwaists are being supplied with collar, girdle or cravat of wool. A stunning black duvetyn sweater in a sleeveless style is embroidered with bright wools to wear under the coat-suit for skating.

The beauty of this work is that scraps of wool can be put to good use. In making a sweater or tam, one always has a part of a hank left. One of these will make a delightful splash of color on a dark blouse if knit into a cravat with dangling ball ends.

EASY WAY TO SAVE THE MUFF

Attractive Hanger Can Be Made With Very Little Trouble and Very Little Material.

Instead of hanging your muff on a closet hook from the cord or bracelet provided at one end you can lengthen the life of the lining considerably by hanging your muff over a regular muff hanger. One of these hangers is easily made from an old wooden coat hanger with one arm sawed off, the other reversed so that the curve comes upward. It should be enameled some pretty light color, or else wound with ribbon. The wire hook can be placed at one end so that it can be hung in a convenient manner from the closet hook.

Another way to make an attractive muff hanger is to wind a thin wooden rod with ribbon, and attach ribbon hangers at each end with a bow or bone ring at the top. At one end the ribbon should be provided with a hook so that it can be unclasped while the rod is slipped through the muff.

NOVEL VEST AND CUFF SET.

This is one of the new vest and cuff sets in white cotton corduroy, bound with black satin. The style of Ascot worn with it is especially smart and promises to be fashionable for street wear.

The charred body of William Brown, 50 years old, was found at the Beebe cold storage plant in Glenwood. His clothing was ignited from an oil stove.

Thomas D. Kearney, of Ann Arbor, has been elected head of the board of state tax commissioners. His term expires next January. B. F. Burtless was chosen secretary.

Twenty-five to thirty cases of ptomaine poisoning have been reported by physicians of [illegible] sons affected having attended a supper at one of the local churches. It is supposed the chicken served was responsible. While many were seriously ill, no fatalities have been reported.

Registration of all German alien males 14 years old and over will be started in Detroit, February 4. The registration and issuing of cards will be completed by February 24, after which date it will be unlawful for any such alien to be without such permit.

Justus G. Thompson, a Port Huron young man who enlisted with a Canadian regiment, is in a hospital at London, England, suffering from wounds received when London was bombarded, in a recent Teuton air raid. This is the second raid through which Thompson has passed.

CARE FOR SEPARATOR

Unclean Machines Necessarily Cause Financial Loss.

Cream From Polluted Device Has Poor Keeping Qualities and Soon Develops Decided "Off Flavor"—Rules to Follow.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the care and use of the cream separator the necessity of thoroughly cleaning and scalding it every time it is used cannot be too greatly emphasized.

Cream from an unclean separator has very poor keeping qualities, soon develops a decided "off flavor" and becomes second grade. Cream of this kind brings financial loss to the purchaser whether he is selling on a quality basis or not. Poor cream makes poor butter and poor butter returns a low price to the producer, whether the creamery is co-operative or otherwise.

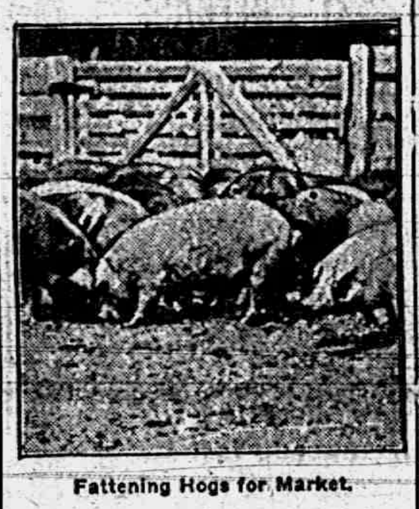
The financial loss caused by unclean separators is frequently not fully appreciated because it is indirect; it is, however, none the less real. Good business management of the dairy therefore demands that the following rules be observed in using a separator:

1. Put the separator in a bright dairy room that can be easily cleaned and that is always free from odors of all kinds.
2. Set the machine perfectly level and bolt it to a solid foundation, preferably concrete.
3. Oil thoroughly each time it is used.
4. Be sure that the parts are properly assembled, then start the machine gently slowly.
5. Maintain the proper speed and keep an even pressure on the handle at all times.
6. When separation is completed, flush the bowl with a quart of skim milk or warm water.
7. Having set the cream into cold water and disposed of the skim milk, take the bowl apart and rinse with luke-warm water.
8. Using hot water, washing powder, and brushes, scrub all parts that come into contact with the milk.
9. Rinse with hot water, then place in boiling water for a few minutes and hang up to dry.
10. Wipe frame of separator and clean the room.

PIG FEEDING IS PROFITABLE

Nebraska Station Finds Alfalfa Hay and Corn Best Feeds for Fattening—Don't Grind Corn.

Alfalfa hay and corn were the best feeds for fattening hogs for profit at the Nebraska station. Pigs fed on this ration did not gain as rapidly as those fed on tankage and corn, but made a better showing in cost of gains. Corn was valued at 70 cents a bushel, alfalfa at $10 a ton and tankage at $2.50 per 100 pounds.



Fattening Hogs for Market.

The test showed that it does not pay to grind corn for pigs. Those fed on ground corn made the slowest and most expensive gains. Where ground corn and alfalfa hay were used the cost per 100 pounds gains was nearly $2 per 100 pounds more than where dry shelled corn and alfalfa were fed.

MAKE BARNS MORE SANITARY

Formula Suggested for Whitewash to Be Applied Inside—Adds to Attractiveness.

An application of whitewash will make stables and farm buildings more sanitary and attractive. For inside application the following formula is suggested: Slake with boiling water a half-bushel of stone lime. Cover while slaking and strain. Add one peck of salt dissolved and three pounds of ground rice, boiled and thickened. To this add 50 quarts of water and allow to stand for three days. The mixture may then be applied with a brush.

CUTS COST OF MAINTENANCE

Breeding Animals in Good Thrifty Condition Insures Reasonable Level and Production.

A good thrifty condition in breeding animals keeps the cost of maintenance at a reasonable level and insures maximum production. Such condition may be had by judicious use of roughage and pastures. Clover or alfalfa hay, fall-sown rye or blue grass pasture that has not been grazed closely will cut the grain requirement of the brood sow in winter. Corn silage with cottonseed meal will maintain breeding cattle in winter.

TIME OF NEXT DRAFT UNCERTAIN

Secretary Baker Says Date Will be Determined by Events Abroad.

Washington—Expansion of America's fighting forces beyond their present strength depends upon such factors as events abroad and the shipping situation, Secretary Baker said in disclosing that the war department has not fixed a date for another draft nor even determined how many new men shall be called.

When Mr. Baker told the senate military committee the United States would have 500,000 men in France early this year and that in all 1,500,000 would go across if ships could be found to carry them, he referred to the divisions now in training camps and those already in Europe. Future developments will decide what additional forces will be sent.

Rev. A. W. Wishart of Grand Rapids, lately returned from France, in a speech at the midwinter meeting at Ferris institute in Big Rapids, warned America against bragging. "The man last in the game should not boast of his prowess to those who have been in the brunt of the fight."

GERALDINE'S REPLY

By LOUISE OLIVER.

"Hello! Yes, this is Geraldine Ford. Who? No, I can't guess. I haven't an idea. Well, since you insist on it, I'll have to, I suppose. Is it Arthur Wright?

"No? Really it sounds like his voice—the way you jerked out that 'of course not' sounded exactly like him, too.

"Then—let me see—is it Fred Oakley? Yes, I'm sure it's Fred—he promised to call me up if he heard where Jim's ship was. That's nice of you, Fred, and do tell me about dear Jim. I've been so anxious about him. Really, I've dreamed about him for—What?

"Not Fred. Then who in the world are you?

"Dick—Dick Lippincott? Why, the idea! I never thought of it being you. Why didn't you say so in the first place?

"Thought I'd know! The very idea—as though I could tell anyone's voice over the telephone!

"Told me you'd call me up? Well, I can't remember that long.

"What? Why, Dick Lippincott, I didn't know you could use such language. If you're not careful, you'll have your telephone taken out. That's what it says in the book—no profane language.

"Well, I'd like to know what it is, then, if it isn't swearing.

"Yes, I think you'd better beg my pardon.

"I—know what you called me up for? How should I know? Say, is this going to be another guessing affair? If it is, I'm going to hang up. Besides, I'm busy—awful busy.

"Sewing!

"M—hm. Mending my dress that got torn on the rose bush last night when we were taking a walk. I want to wear it to the Allens' tonight. It got torn fearfully, the ribbon's off the net ruffle for a whole yard, and I have to sew it by hand.

"What do I want to wear it for?

"Oh, because. What do you want to know for? Can't I wear it again if I want to?

"Because you said you liked it?

"Why, I didn't remember. Did you say you liked it? Well, I told you before I can't remember things so long.

"What is it? You think it's a long time, too, only for a different reason.

"Don't I remember anything you said last night? Why, let me see. Wait just a minute. I'm thinking. Yes, you said Betty Harlowe looked like a wood nymph in that gauzy white dress she had on, and that Laura Seaton was the wittiest person you'd ever known—

"Don't say 'thunder.' It sounds almost like swearing over the phone.

"No, I can't remember anything else you said.

"You don't believe it?"

Here the receiver went up with a bang, but Geraldine wisely waited on the stool. In an instant the bell jingled furiously. She watched the phone curiously for a full minute, smiling over each ring. Then she took down the receiver calmly.

"Hello!" she said, in a far-away detached voice.

"Yes, this is Geraldine," she went on coldly.

"Not through! I can't conceive why you should wish to talk to me when you don't believe anything I say.

"You're sorry?

"You don't sound like it.

"All right, if you're really, truly sorry, I'll forgive you.

"Something very important to say?

"The same thing you started to tell me last night when I ran away?

"I didn't run away. Someone was calling me. I had to go.

"No, I haven't an idea, honestly.

"Please don't have me guessing again. I really must get back to my sewing.

"Why, Dick Lippincott, do you know what you're doing? You are actually p—proposing to me over the telephone. Anybody might hear you. I'm sure Mrs. Cartwright has been trying to call up her grocer for a half-hour. She's probably on the line now.

"Can't wait—think I'll run away again if you wait till tonight?

"Won't give you a chance! Well, you don't suppose I'm going to throw myself into anybody's arms, do you?

"Oh, Dick, don't say such things over the telephone. Besides, you can't possibly think I'd say yes, do you, even if I had a mind to, with the whole town listening?

"No, I can't forget it, you can say as you like. But I won't say no either, for it's none of their business, is it, what I say? So I'm just going to be neutral—and not say anything at all.

"Why, Dick, you did say all that before, about caring so much and l-loving me so long and everything. Do you think you need to say it so many times?

"Going to say it until I answer?

"Suppose I don't answer and leave the telephone? What would you do?

"Come right over?

"Oh, no, you mustn't. I look perfectly awful.

"Then I'd better answer, you say?

"Oh, Dick, I can't, with the whole town listening. Besides I must have time to think.

"How long? Oh, fifteen minutes at least.

"Coming over?

"A-all right, Dickie; I guess it would be better."

And hanging up the receiver, Geraldine put her arms around the telephone and kissed it tenderly.

BOY ROBBER LOST HIS NERVE

[illegible]

A thrilling story of guns, masks and robbery, which had stirred a country neighborhood by its recital, melted into the make-believe of a yello-back novel, once investigators were on the job, says the Indianapolis News. A talk between two persons, which is said to have occurred behind a farmer's barn, led to the recovery of loot in the form of jewelry and a confession from a boy, who reluctantly dragged from his trousers pocket the remains of a dollar bill.

Sheriff Coffin was called in by neighbors after the boy, whose name is purposely withheld, had communicated to persons with whom he lived that a very dark man, wearing a mask over his face, had visited his home while he was alone; that he had been threatened with a shotgun and, after rifling the house, had forced the boy to leave with him. About a mile from the house, the boy related, the stranger gave him 25 cents and told him to "keep his mouth shut." A duck and a Belgian hare also were taken, the boy declared.

When the sheriff arrived there was a consultation behind the barn, and when it had been concluded the boy dug the jewelry out of the ground, told his friends that he had sold the duck at a nearby grocery for some money; that the Belgian hare escaped while he was on his way to the grocery, and that the masked man was the creation of his own imagination.

"Give him another chance," the sheriff told the guardians of the wayward boy. "He won't do it again."

The boy nodded confirmation.

Don't Flatter Yourself.

"Somehow I was always different from other people," is a common saying among men, even among those who lay no claim to any special virtue, observes Los Angeles Times. Indeed, the statement is often made by those who pretend to be ashamed of their vices, but who are really almost proud of them. To feel like that and to admit it is only a confession of the egotism common to humanity. Whoever you are, you are only different from others in personality. You belong to the race and probably are neither better nor worse than any one of the vast majority. Everybody thinks that he is different from all the rest. He ain't!

To Save Tin Now Wasted.

A small electric furnace has been installed and operation begun on the volatilization of tin from scrap at the Northwest experiment station of the United States bureau of mines at Seattle, Wash., says the Engineering and Mining Journal. An extensive series of experiments will be carried out there with the idea of saving the tin now wasted in discarded containers and other forms of scraps.

Starting It.

"Darling," she said, "you know we really ought not to fuss with each other. Now, I want to make an agreement with you that we will never say a harsh word or have a single dispute."

"All right, I'm with you," he agreed, "but before we begin, I'd like to know where in thunder you put those blankety-blank clean socks you said you darned."

BATS SCOURGE TO INSECTS

[illegible]

Bats are often regarded with as much horror as snakes. The wheeling and rapid flight of the little creatures in the twilight, their dusky forms, shroud-like wings and fiery eyes, seeming to league them with the supernatural; but they are generally not only harmless, but useful. They are a scourge to insects of every kind, from the mosquito upward. The big bats of the Indian peninsula are considered table luxuries by the natives.

A bat measuring two feet from tip to tip must be a formidable looking creature to encounter. This is said to be the size of the fruit-eating bats of the Amazon, to which the name of "vampire" is often given; but even these are harmless. There is, however, a smaller species in South America which does suck the blood of many animals, including human beings.

The mischief does not consist in the quantity of blood abstracted by the bat itself, but in the far greater flow from the triangular puncture after the withdrawal of the aggressor. It has been objected by obstinate unbelievers that no one has ever seen the wound inflicted; but, considering that the bat bites only in darkness, the proof upon which the skeptics insist is not easily obtainable.

The curious feature of the bat's bite, say South Americans, is that it is hardly ever felt even when the person attacked is awake.

MONITORS HAVE "COME BACK"

Why Cheese-Box Craft Have Proved Useful in Present War.

Before the outbreak of the present war monitors were considered almost obsolete. It had been many years since American naval appropriations had included items for the construction of monitors. Now it seems likely that monitor building will be resumed, for in the European fighting these cheese-box craft have proved highly useful.

A monitor can carry a big gun and at the same time draw little water. It can come near shore in such shallow water that submarines cannot follow. Monitor fleets have repeatedly shelled Belgian towns held by the Germans, and have done much damage. In the Dardanelles campaign monitors were advantageously used after the enormous battleships had proved useless. Now it is reported that British monitors have been in the Adriatic, aiding the Italians in their Trieste campaign.

Besides the advantage of shallow draft the monitors present a small target for enemy marksmen. The British have many at their disposal, and are building more.

Where Are the Germans, Mamma?

"There is one near the city," the mother said. "I'll take you out there some day," and she kept her word.

When the four-year-old had seen the buildings and the soldiers drilling, and mother had explained to him the object of the training, the little lad asked:

"But where are the Germans, mamma?"—Indianapolis News.

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Church Buildings

The Universalist Church

From the early settlement of the country there were individuals here and there known as Universalists. As with those who enbraced other religious creeds so with those who embraced this type of faith; they continue from time to time to increase in numbers. Nevertheless, from the comparative few who were of this persuasion and the remote distance from each other, they appear to have continued long without any religious organization. They had no fixed place of worship and no settled minister. [illegible] religious meetings of some other denominations. Too, often, from want of that fraternal interest which springs up in the hearts of those who are bound together by an organized brotherhood, they spent their Sabbath alone, or in such friendly intercourse with one another as accident, or other circumstances threw in their way. When a transient minister of their persuasion came among them, they found a private room or some public hall, where they assembled and listened to his instructions. When such transient interviews were over, he went his way, and they returned to the common occupations of life or its pleasures, until the like event occurred again.

Such continued to be their practice until about the year 1855 or 6 when the Rev. Mr. Manning was employed to preach for them regularly. Very soon after his services with them began they organized the Universalist society, adopted by laws and thus became a regular corporate body. They held their religious services in the Union Hall. This though tolerably convenient, was liable to intrusion of itinerant persons, and necessarily wanting that sacredness which imparts so important an interest to the house of God.

In the summer of 1859 therefore, they proceeded to build a house of worship. A favorable site was obtained on the west side of Union street between Chicago and Logan streets. Mr. Hendry Esq., was the principal architect. The walls are constructed of unburned brick or rather of concrete blocks composed of lime and sand, and pressed and dried in the sun. The house is small, without a spire or a gallery, a simple audience room, plain but neat at a cost about $2000.

The New Presbyterian Church

In the fall of 1863 the population of the town having increased, since 1840 when the old church began to be used, and the church itself, failing any longer to comfortably accommodate the people, and having become seriously imparred by age, the Presbyterian society after mature deliberation, thought it desirable to build again and larger. As the membership had come to be large, some three hundred or more and as the society had experienced a corresponding enlargement as moreover the society could not soon, if ever expect to build again it was deemed to be most expedient, not merely to build larger but to build more substantially and elegantly.

An affectionate interest in behalf of the raising generation also had its influence. They who were about to yield up a liberable portion of their hard earned wealth and put forth their hands to build, could no longer forget that they were soon to be away on other lands far above in the Beautiful City of God, to their precious offspring therefore whom they were now, as if holding by the hand, cious offspring therefore, whom they were now, as if holding by the hand, and by a grasp which relentless Death would soon relax forever, they would leave a becoming testimony of their respect for their long life to protect and bless them, and upon whom was still based all their hopes of mortal and immortal good.

To their children they would not leave their natural homes, they would also bequeath a home in the house of the Lord, a memorial home, to be enjoyed when they should be gone to their graves, and their spirits to the ever pure and peaceful abode of perfected ones. In this possible last act of like devotion to God on earth, and of love to their children, they could cheerfully afford to do much, and to do it well. And though it might in many cases demand a severe sacrifice of time and money, yet it would be but sowing in tears and reaping in joy. Nevertheless, the incipient step towards this enterprise was not started until Nov. 10th, 1863. At a meeting of the society held in that day a committee was appointed to canvass for a suitable site upon which to build whenever the condition of the society should appear to authorize it.

The enterprise was so large and of so grave importance and the ability of the society to command the requisite means, so dependent on events whence no human wisdom could foree that no more decisive action was taken at this meeting.

On the first day of the following March however, (1864) another decision was passed, to wit: That it was expedient to build a house of worship as early as practicable. This was but an echo passed at the proceeding meeting.

The want of boldness, still evinced by this resolve, indicated, however no want of deep interest in the matter before the meeting, but simply a settled purpose to act prudently and safely in a great and important work. True the society was considered large and wealthy, and, for a society in a country village it was so, but the men who had this business in hand, and, on whom disaster, if such there should be, must ultimately fall well understood how precarious is popular wealth where dollars are to be raised by the tens of thousands, and, by voluntary subscriptions merely. They were not blind to the fact when less than a half a dozen wealthy men have subscribed liberally and even more then liberally, a large amount must come from those far less able, and who feel, and many truly to, that their private wants from time to time are about as many and as great as they can possibly supply In a word that large ventures, upon the liberality of such men, conscientious however they may be, are to be taken with great circumspection. They were also aware of the disastrous tendency of large debts upon public institutions unable to pay; or, if realy able, where no law will compel them to do it. Thus closed the meeting of March 1st, 1864.

On the 15th of the same month, however, the society ventured to conclude the contract for a lot on which to build. It is situated on the north east corner of Chicago and Maiden Lane, being twelve rods front on Chicago street and twelve rods deep. For this two thousand and six hundred dollars were paid. Thus was taken the first decided step in advance, and, from this day the society held its self fairly committed to the work of buildng a house for God.

On the same day a plan was presented and a committee was appointed to revise and present it at a future meeting for farther consideration and probable adoption.

On the 9th day of January 1865 a meeting was held for farther deliberation. At this meeting it was resolved to proceed with the building of the house as soon as fifteen thousand dollars should be raised for the purpose. And on the 20th day of the same month, the committee on subscriptions reported fifteen thousand dollars actually pledged, it was resolved to proceed immediately to build. The plan too was again presented and after mature deliberation, unanimously adopted.

This plan proposed an edifice after a modified gothic style; to be constructed of brick and trimmed with Cleveland stone. It was to be 67 feet front on Chicago street by 87 feet deep. It was to have an open timbered roof and a spire to ascend one hundred and forty three feet above the ground, the windows to be of stained glass. The audience room to be fifty five feet by eighty four feet, and, to contain one hundred and fifty-two slips capable of seating seven hundred and fifty persons, one thousand if necessary. The lecture room in the rear to be forty three by fifty feet, and octagonal in form. The actual cost, however computed at the time of its completion for the house and its appliances, amounts to thirty three thousand dollars which amount, is either paid or, fully provided for. On the twenty seventh of September 1865, D. Harrson Peters having contracted to build the cellar constructed the foundation wall, lay the floor timbers and grade [illegible] began the work. The work of excavation and of building was completed and carefully secured from the frost before the setting of winter. On the fifteenth of January 1866, Salmon Crane Esq., took the contract to build the superstructure; and, immediately proceeded to the work. Mr. Crane employed Messrs. Hugh Richard and James McNair to do the masonry. In the spring of 1866 the enterprise was put fairly under way. On the 16th day of the following July the corner stone was laid on which occasion the following exercises took place, to wit:

1. Anthem, by the choir.
2. Reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Mr. Webb of Adrian.
3. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Wastell of Raisin.
4. Historical paper by Rev. Mr. Wishart the pastor.
5. Original hymn by the choir.
6. Laying of the corner stone, by Messrs. Crane and Richards.
7. The depositing of a box containing a Bible and a Hymn book, the confession of faith and Covenant of the church, the names of pastor, elders, members of the church, several early settlers of the town and some other items of interest.

9. Benediction by Rev. Mr. Sillman of Macon.

BOARD HOLDS NO MEETINGS

President Decides All Questions for Members, but Never Calls Them in for a Conference.

There is no more familiar title among government departments than the board of trade. It seems to be responsible for all kinds of things and all sorts of undertakings and happenings. It will find you a chairwoman or negotiate a commercial treaty. It consists of a president and a large number of members among whom are reckoned the Archbishop of Canterbury and the speaker of the house of commons, a writer in London Tit-Bits states.

By law these members have a right to be called to discuss questions of trade and to help the president to shape his policy, yet the fact remains no meetings are ever held! The president never dreams of calling his committee together. He does much as he likes, comes to his own decisions, and then announces that "the board thinks so and so."

One wonders what would happen if the archbishop or some other member were to insist upon being consulted, this [illegible] surprising method of doing business should cease.

The board of trade does not stand alone. Every school-teacher in the land knows that "my lords" say this and "my lords" rule that. Their full title is "the lords of the committee of the privy council of education;" but they never meet, and the vice president would probably be puzzled to name a half-dozen of them. Mr. Fisher and his predecessors rule without "my lords," but in their name. Thus do they get credit for the good they do and are a refuge in the day of storm.

HE GAINED PREMIER'S EAR

Man Disrobed With Others to Receive Free Treatment, and Appealed for Position for Sister.

Clemenceau, beneath his brusque, masterful, sarcastic and oft-cutting speech, and in spite of the vitriolic character of his writings, possesses an exceedingly kind and charitable heart. He is not rich, and therefore cannot afford to give away much. But he has made a point, both when in office and out of it, to devote a couple of hours each day to free medical advice to the poor, never consenting to take a fee, writes a Paris correspondent. His specialty is skin diseases, and his consultation room is always crowded with poor patients. One day when last in office as premier, being in a hurry, he instructed his servant to tell the last batch of his male patients to strip in his ante-chamber, so as to save the time of the undressing in the consulting room. One by one they were rapidly prescribed for and sent on their way, until only the last remained. He presented himself in due course in an extremely decollete condition—without a stitch of clothing, and with every appearance of nervousness.

"M. le President," he began, with a low bow.

"Well, what is the matter?" asked the doctor-premier.

The man stammered inarticulately.

"Come! Come," exclaimed Clemenceau with impatience. "Out with it! Your skin seems perfectly healthy. I can see nothing wrong."

"There is nothing the matter with me," said the poor man at last, recovering his voice, "but—I don't know—it is all strange—I only came to ask you, M. le President, for your powerful influence with the government to procure for my widowed sister a place as postmistress at Clermont."

Sewing Machines in Arabia.

The sale of sewing machines in Arabia has increased since the war begun, owing in part to the demand of Red Cross organizations. A recent shipment of 600 American machines, according to a correspondent, will be disposed of as follows: One hundred in Aden, 200 in Abyssinia, 100 in Red Sea ports and 200 in the Persian Gulf district. There is also an increased demand on the part of the natives. Germany formerly supplied the territory with cheap machines, but the stocks of these are low, and American products now lead. Foot-power sewing machines are in growing preference over the hand-operated type, but electrically-driven machines cannot be sold, as there is no general electric service plant in Aden. Dust and rust are difficulties experienced in the use of the machines in the Arabian climate.

Alcohol for Fuel.

A committee of Australian scientists is investigating the possibilities of commercial alcohol in place of gasoline as a fuel for internal combustion engines, notes a correspondent. They find that an engine can easily be run on alcohol and that its thermal efficiency, when so run, is somewhat higher than with gasoline fuel. However, they also find that alcohol must be far cheaper by the pound than gasoline, and somewhat cheaper by the quart, if it is to be as economical a fuel in terms of dollars and cents. Moreover, an engine will not start from a cold condition on alcohol.

HOW DISASTER TO TURKS IS FORETOLD BY "SHINING STONE"

—Constantinople, famous city of mosques and minarets, is the subject of many prophecies. It has been the battleground of Christian and Mohammedan since the twelfth century. None of the prophecies respecting the expulsion of the Turk from European soil is more remarkable than that of the "shining stone" in the famous "apostate cathedral" now the mosque of Santa Sophia.

Years ago there was brought to the city of the sultan a great slab of luminous marble, white and translucent. Specimens of this stone are exceedingly rare, and no other fragment as large as the shining stone is known to exist. It was installed in the west side of the great gallery of the historic mosque of Santa Sophia.

What first invested the famous stone with supernatural qualities is not known. The Persians regarded it with awe, and upon its installation in the Constantinople mosque it was declared to be the mystic dial wherein the fate of Islam should be reflected.

Its peculiar vitreous quality makes it a ready reflector of light rays. During the hours of daylight it emits a particularly brilliant light. These rays are considered Allah's assurance to the faithful that all continues well in the empire of the true believers. When Islam has experienced political or religious triumphs in the past, according to the guardians of the shining stone, the brilliancy of the marble slab was such as to seriously discomfit human eyes.

When disaster — permanent and all-embracing — threatens the Turkish empire, according to the prophecy that accompanied the stone out of the mystic Orient and into Europe, the stone will no longer reflect light. It will be no longer luminous and translucent, but clouded and opaque. To hint that the shining stone was undergoing such a transformation was in times past to incur the risk of a speedy and violent death.

BAD ODOR FROM OIL LAMPS

How to Remove Cause of a Very Frequent Nuisance.

The most frequent cause for a bad odor from lamps and oil heaters is on account of a bit of oil that may be left on the outside of the lamp, especially if the lamps be of nickel or other metal which are filled through openings in the tops that are closed by small metal caps screwed on. The oil should be carefully wiped off. If lamps or heaters remain for a day or two unlighted, the oil will often soak through the pores of the metal, so they should be carefully wiped off with a dry cloth before using.

If the country housekeeper who uses lamps will take her lamp wicks when new and soak them in cider vinegar she will be pleased with the result. Don't wring them out, but hang near a stove or lay on a plate until dry. This will double the lighting power of your lamps or lanterns. Therefore with wicks so prepared, only one cleaning a week is necessary, for the wicks won't smoke, and globe and chimney will not blacken around the top.

JUDGING AGE OF THE FISH

How It May Be Determined by the Scales or "Otoliths."

Could you tell the age of a fish, if asked to do so?

It has been found that the age of a fish may be read from its scales. These increase in size by annular growths, two rings being formed each year. The "otoliths," or ear stones, which lie in two sacs on either side of the base of the cranial cavity, afford another means of determination.

Like the scales, otoliths increase by two rings annually. Each spring a white ring is formed and each autumn a black one. Thus the number of either white or black rings in an otolith gives the age of the fish in years. In the case of flatfish the latter method has been found more reliable, whereas in the case of the cod the scales give a better result. Although varying much in size and shape in different species, the otoliths show a remarkably constancy in the same species; hence they are of considerable value in the diagnosis of a species.

Why We Nod "Yes" and Shake "No."

The question, "Why do we shake 'no' and nod or bow when we mean 'yes,' is very easily answered. These actions originate in infancy. The baby turns its head away to prevent disagreeable things from getting into its mouth. If it is not hungry it will turn the head from side to side to avoid the nipple.

In time this shaking of the head becomes associated with disagreeable things and unwelcome thoughts. In like manner the nod originated in the motion of the infant's head to take food. After the child had words to express its desires the nod and shake remained to express approval or disapproval. In addition to this fundamental cause mimicry helps to perpetuate the action.

HIGH COST IN WASHINGTON

Houses and Apartments Rent at Fabulous Prices—One Woman Promises Ordinary Wear and Tear.

Two women sat at a local theater the other night. They were dressed "fit to kill," in the good old Hoosier idiom, and wore diamonds galore, writes Charles E. Tracewell in Washington Star.

They were talking about the subject of rents, a topic of absorbing interest in Washington just now, when a house or apartment of any kind is difficult to obtain for love or money.

It has been a matter of gossip that many wealthy people have come to Washington recently, and that many of these have rented furnished houses and apartments at fabulous rates.

The two women at the theater were discussing this very thing. What was more, one of them was one of those wealthy ones in question, judging from what she said.

"You know, my dear," she was saying to the other, "I won't say I'm going to use an ax, but"—she smiled significantly—"when my lease is over"—and she smiled again—"well, there is going to be some ordinary wear and tear, my dear, there is going to be some ordinary wear and tear."

The Judge, He Knows.

"What, you here again?" exclaimed a New York police magistrate when his eyes fell upon a familiar face before the bar. "Why, you're only out of the workhouse," said the magistrate to the man, who was arraigned for striking his wife. "Well, you see, judge," began the prisoner, "we have mice in the house—you know how it is, judge—and my wife set a trap for them. I was going around the room in my bare feet—you know how it is, judge—not thinking of the trap. I stepped on the bait and my big toe caught in the sharp wire noose—you know how it is, judge." "What's that got to do with striking your wife?" "I threw the trap at her—you know how it is, judge—and she didn't dodge it." "No, I don't know how it is. You had been drinking last night." "I had one drink—you know how it is, judge." "Two months in the workhouse—you know how it is," said the magistrate.

Tractor Has Feet and Legs.

A tractor without wheels designed especially for dragging cultivators in cornfields, is described by Popular Mechanics Magazine. Instead of wheels it has four legs with ski-shaped feet, these legs having hip, knee and ankle joints and they take steps like those of an animal.

The legs are driven by a gasoline motor. They are steered around corners by making those on one side take longer steps than those on the other and reversing is accomplished by transferring the knee-caps from the front to the back of the joints.

The machine can straddle a row of six-foot corn without touching the stalks.

POPE PLAYS JOKE ON ARTIST

Quotes Bible Verse to Verify Genuineness of Potrait of Himself Executed by an American Painter.

Pope Benedict is known to have a keen sense of humor. It has lately been expended upon an American resident in Rome who thinks himself a portrait painter, says a Rome correspondent.

This gentleman, with the best intentions, asked the pope for permission to paint his portrait, which would later grace the walls of the Vatican, alongside of the masterpieces of the universe.

The pope granted the request, but stipulated that he should give only one sitting, and that the portrait should be finished by help of photographs.

The portrait was finished recently. The artist found it so good that he longed to have it shown first in America, lest his fellow citizens should reproach him for hiding such a work of art in Italy, without giving them a chance of admiring his genius. To this the pope graciously agreed. But the artist went further.

As there are so many spurious portraits of the pope, would his holiness write a few lines to prove to skeptical Americans that the artist had really painted the masterpiece? The pope promised a few words in a few days.

They arrived. To the painter's astonishment—and chagrin—they proved to be from the Gospel of St. Matthew, chapter 14:27. They ran: "It is I; be not afraid."

PRICES DURING CIVIL WAR

Sugar $58 a Barrel, Rice $31.38 a Barrel, Tobacco, Tea and Coffee Much Higher Than Now.

High as prices are, it may be some consolation to know that they are still below the Civil war records: Sugar then sold for $58 a barrel, rice at $31.38 a barrel, tobacco at more than double the present price, and tea at over $100 for a 25-pound chest as compared with the present price of about $20. Coffee was then four times as high as it is at present, says Leslie's.

If the difficulty in getting hold of sugar makes the American people realize we are at war, and inspires in them a willingness to follow Mr. Hoover's suggestions as to economizing in the use of certain foods, it will have accomplished some good.

While complaining of food scarcity, it is well for our people to know how little food others have. The German ration contains .41 of a pound of body building protein as compared with 1.08 in the standard ration. The German ration is not sufficient to maintain bodily health and vigor, but the civil population in the occupied districts of France and Belgium have to exist on even less than this.

A Romping Heaven.

"Mamma," said Bobby, "does the Lord love little children?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied mamma.

"And does he like to romp with them?"

"Romp with them? What put that idea into your head, Bobby?"

"My Sunday-school teacher says that whomsoever the Lord loveth he chaseth."

That Funny Feeling.

Little Bobby had been visiting lately at a place where they have a big swing, which is highly popular with the rising generation. When he returned home his father asked him:

"Well, Bobby, did you swing in the big swing?"

"Yes, a little, papa. But it made my head ache in my stomach so that I had to stop."

MRS. JOHN LOVETT

Mrs. Catherine Lovett passed away at the home of her son LaMont Lovett at Oak Park, Ill., Tuesday, Feb. 5th, 1918, at the advanced age of 90 years and 3 months, death resulting from myrocarditis. She was confined to her bed about ten weeks.

Mrs. Lovett was an old Tecumseh resident, living for many years on the farm southwest of town, and later moved into town, finally going to Chicago where Mr. Lovett passed away, leaving her with their son LaMont who is the only survivor of the family.

"Aunt Kate," as she was called by her many young friends, was of a pleasing personality that endeared her to all, and her many friends here will mourn her passing.

"For none return from those spirit shores
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We hear the dip of the golden oars
And catch a glimpse of the snowy sail.
We only know that their bark no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea,
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch and beckon and wait for me."

SOME JOKE

We have all played the game of "Cross Questions and Crooked Answers," but now comes another sort, brought out by the small pox scare.

Came a call at the telephone: "Say, I have a son in the north woods. Does he have to be vaccinated because his cousin in Adrian takes the Herald? I don't know what for they take the paper over there for nobody over there can read, but I wanted to know what to do about my son.."

Of course we knew there was a joke in connection with this and have traced it to a reliable source, one who has been questioned until he has a list equal to the questionaires that the young men have been getting.

MONDAY CLUB

The Monday Club spent a delightful afternoon this week at the home of Mrs. B. J. Pulver. After a number by Ysaye on the Graphonola, the story of Mary Antin's "Promised Land" was retold by Mrs. C. A. Wright. At intervals Mrs. Andrew Taylor gave readings from the book, so as to bring out forcibly the points made in Mrs. Wright's talk. A number by Elman brought this pleasant meeting to a close.

The election of officers will take place next week instead of last and the club will meet with Mrs. T. H. Crane. Mrs. B. J. Pulver will present "Child Life in the Ghetto" and Mrs. W. D. Reed will read a story from Myra Kelley.

FOUND, A PHEASANT

A funny incident occurred here Wednesday when a dog came down the street with a silver pheasant bird in his mouth. He laid it down in the snow in front of the home of Mrs. Wm. Bly and left it. Mrs. Bly rescued the bird and it revived and is as good as ever except for a few broken feathers. The owner can have the same by calling for it.

The young peoples class of the Baptist church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Waldron Thursday evening. The young ladies spent the evening in knitting for the Red Cross. A social good time was reported.

RED CROSS NEWS

The Tecumseh Red Cross sincerely regrets the retirement of Mrs. Sena Crane as chairman of the pajama committee and we all hope that after a reasonable time she may be able and willing to take up her chairmanship again. Mrs. Crane's ability and thoroughness have been always appreciated by those who have worked with her. Three years ago she took charge of the sewing department of the Belgian Relief work in Tecumseh and since the outbreak of the war she has been working for the Red Cross.

The ladies of her committee have however made eight suits of pajamas this week, which will be sent to Adrian. Eleven of the ladies have continued the work.

Another faithful worker, who will be much missed is Miss Hosmer who has left for Florida. She has had one of the heaviest committees to take care of, and the knitting department has turned out an astonishing amount of work, and good work too. We hope that Miss Hosmer will have a pleasant visit in the south and will be able to return with new energy to her task.

Mrs. John Nyland has taken Miss Hosmer's place and has already eleven pairs of wristlets and thirteen sweaters ready to be shipped.

Bertram Klappic and Jane Gillen are Junior members.

2130 Surgical dressings have been sent to Adrian to date.

The state registration of women in Michigan will take place on March 18th, Mrs. Geo. J. Bennett of Adrian is the local chairman and she has made arrangements to have Mrs. F. B. Perkins, who has charge of the state work to speak and hold two classes of instructions in the auditorium of the Adrian Library on Saturday, February 9th. She will instruct women how to take their place in the work necessary for the country One class will be at 10 a. m. and the other at 1:30 p. m. Any ladies from Tecumseh who desire to go over ould do so by taking the 11:20 train at the Junction, and could return at 5:05 p. m.

Until we travel we hardly any idea of the tremendous extension of the work of the Red Cross, but there is not a hamlet, or a lonely ranch hut but has its Red Cross work.

In the ciites the big stores have placed their valuable space at the disposal of the workers. In all the loop stores in Chicago, there are departments where the Red Cross workers congregate, and do on a large scale what we do on a small one here. Placards all over the stores invite any woman who has an hour to spare to go into the Red Cross Department and help. The workers on the surgical dressings are furnished with cap and apron, and a pair of scissors chained to the table. Others are taught to knit, or to make pajamas.

In the depots in the large cities are Red Cross information bureaus, where the soldiers may obtain help and advise. I may state here that to my regret, I talked with a lady in the Kansas City, Red Cross who knew absolutely nothing, not even which street car to take to get into the city. She evidently never used a street car. No one should be appointed to an office unless they can and will fill it.

From end to end of the U. S., in the millionaires palace, the big bank, the workers cottage, and the popcorn wagon hangs the Red Cross. Rows of houses along the railroad line, hardly a window lacks it. The train stops at a watering tank in the middle of the desert in Texas, the blizzard moderates for a minute, and in the lonely shack 10 miles away from other human hangs the Red Cross. In Marfa, Texas, they were holding a Red Cross rally, and Mrs. Brite, who was held up on Christmas day by the Mexican bandits on the Rio Grande was the Chairman.

Ranchmen, cowboys, rustlers all wear the little cross that has become so dear to us and that stands as the one bright spot in this terrible war.

The sheriff of Marfa, who told me that he and his party had relieved the Brite ranch, recaptured the loot and shot 18 Mexicans, wears our little cross, and was one of the most ardent supporters of its work.

Traveling men you meet in the wilds, will tell you with pride of the sweaters their little girls knit, and of the Red Cross work their wives are doing.

Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas the wildest of the wilds on the border of Mexico where Villa bandits sneak across and murder, the Red Cross is everywhere; and rich or poor, everyone who is true to America is in, and with the Red Cross. And I always had admiring and interested listeners when I bragged about our concert company, and the Red Cross Concert Company could have had quite a number of engagements had they been within calling distance.

On Monday Mrs. F. B. Wood played the Columbia March at the dance in the Witherell Hall. The audience danced to it with Mr. Will Collers drum accompaniment. Mrs. Wood repeated it and Mrs. Robert Moore sang the chorus and also subsequently explained to the audience that the proceeds from the sales of thismarch went to the Red Cross. Miss Edna Taylor, Miss Gladys Bowen and Miss Lillian Kennedy took the copies around and sold $5.00 worth. Mrs. Wood has $11.00 to turn in from this source.

MRS. MARY C. YOUNGS

Mary Catherine Martin was born in Lodi, N. Y., June 3rd, 1831, and died at the home of Mary S. Martin, Wheatland, Mich., after an illness of nine days of paralysis, January 25, 1918, her age being 86 years, 7 months and 22 days.

She came to Lenawee county, Michigan, with her parents when about three years of age and spent most of her life in Macon township She was united in marriage May 16, 1871, to Lorenzo Youngs who died about eight years ago.

She was the daughter of Stephen and Abigal Clarkson Martin and was the last of the family of six children: Michael and Clarkson Martin, Mrs. Asel Russell, Macon; Mrs. Eunice Lapardus, New Jersey. One died in infancy. She leaves to mourn her loss several nieces and nephews and hosts of friends

She became a member of the Dutch Reform church of Macon when quite young and was a faithful Christain until her death has been nearly helpless for several years, but was cheerful and patient with all her suffering and felt anxious to be at rest in the arms of Jesus

The funeral was held January 29th at the home of Mrs. Martin where she has lived and been cared for during her sickness Rev. Chanman of Church's Corners officiated. Burial in the North Adrian cemetery by the side of her parents

One by one they are passing away
The old of our community—to their final rest!
With reverence fashion the pillow of clay,
And pile up the earth on the quiet breast
That pillow is soft to the timeworn head
That load is light to the aged dead
They have borne their burden of joy and pains,
They have had their portion of hopes and fears;
They have wrought at their work, they have gained their gains.
They have smiled their smiles, they have wept their tears—
It is over now! The record close,
And leave them there to their long repose.
Let us clasp hands closer as downward we glide
Into the shadow that waits for us all;
For soon we shall be among the old
And the days of our years shall soon be told.

Learn from your mistakes, but don't cry over them. We best redeem the past by forgetting it.—Elbert Hubbard.

The harder it is to grin, the less time you have to think about your troubles while you're making the smile stick.

REMARKABLE AMERICAN INVENTION DISPLAYED IN HOWE FILMS

Lyman H. Howe, the pioneer motion picture man, whose Travel Festival comes to the Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh next Friday evening, February 15, does not believe in exhibiting the horrors of the present world conflict, but he does believe in showing his countrymen the great revolutionizing invention of a fellow American, hence the inclusion in his new program of spectacular pictures of Uncle Sam's war cat pillars in action. These powerful self-laying track engines were conceived and designed by Benjamin Holt, an American and immense factories at Stockton, Cal., and Peoria, Ill., are given over to their manufacture for the armies of the United States and our allies.

Howe's film reveals that the huge caterpillars have seemingly accomplished the impossible in negotiating roads, fields and trenches torn up by shell fire and covered with mud, fallen trees and other obstructions. The U. S. Army organization now provides for numerous regiments of artillery, supply trains and other units being handled exclusively by caterpillar tractors. The proficiency our daring "Sammies" have attained in the manipulation of these Herculean contrivances is most thrillingly depicted in Mr. Howe's reproduction.

The new Travel Festival program is rich in variety, for in addition to the exploits of the giant worm-like war machines, there will be exhibited a charming tour through China, the exciting capture alive of a wild mountain lion in Montana, the birth of icebergs in Alaska, a visit to Coney Island by day and night, and various other subjects of educational and entertainment value, as well as a new crop of original and exclusive animated carcatures and film novelties from the Lyman H. Howe studios.

THE DANCE

The dancing party at Witherell's hall Wednesday evening was one of the jolliest parties held this season and was enjoyed by some twenty-five couples. A colored orchestra from Toledo furnished the music for the occas-on which was very much enjoyed.

The dance was pronounced one of the merriest affairs ever held in Tecumseh and everyone would enjoy another like it.

TECUMSEH MAN ACCEPTS POSITION IN TOLEDO

Faron S. Anderson Becomes Connected with the Lion Stores

Faron S. Anderson left Monday for Toledo where he has accepted a responsible position with the Lion Stores. Mr. Anderson has been connected actively with Tecumseh's business life for a good many years, having received his early training in the Seaton W. Anderson store of which his father was active head.

After his father's death some eight years ago, the firm was reorganized under the head of The Webster Anderson Company, Faron taking up the active duties of general manager and only recently severed his connections with the old firm.

Mr. Anderson's leaving his home town is keenly regretted for he has been always active in matters pertaining to its public welfare, has served the village on the council and is one of the members of the executive board of the Commerce Club. He has been one of the pushers behind any movement which had for its object a bigger and better Tecumseh.

He was one of the originators, if not the oirginator of Tecumseh's famous "Bargain Days" and was largely responsible for their unusual success. Tecumeh has lost a valuable citizen and the Lion Stores have gained a most valuable and efficient man.

The Herald extends best wishes and success to him in his new field of operation.

Green Bay, Wis., Mrs. Wm. F. Bubolz says: "I always use Foley's Honey and Tar for our children as it quickly breaks up their colds with no bad after effects, and they like to take it."

In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed.

Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, raw or inflamed throat, hoarseness, tightness and soreness of the chest, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only healing ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Tecumseh people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Dell Hubbard, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "Kidney complaint had troubled me for a long time. My back ached and I was sore and lame. I could do no stooping or lifting and my kidneys acted irregularly. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought some at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They soon strengthened my back and rid me of all signs of kidney complaint."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hubbard had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgrs., Buffalo, N. Y. ad

Army Medical Department.

There are now more than 13,900 officers engaged in the work of the medical department of the army, including regular army officers and the four officers' reserve corps—medical, dental, veterinary and sanitary—connected with the work under Surgeon General Gorgas, says the Medical Journal. It is estimated that at least 24,000 physicians will be included in the personnel of the department when full strength is reached. Every step in caring for the physical welfare of the soldiers from the time they are sworn into service until they are discharged comes under the medical department. In this work is included inspection of foods to be served soldiers, sanitation, care of the sick and wounded, the operation of field base and convalescent hospitals, "re-education" of the permanently crippled, handling the supplies for all this work, etc. The total number of hospital beds will be on a basis of 25 per cent of the strength of the army.

Lantern on Broadway.

The dimming of the white lights in New York has brought the jokers to the fore. Recently after the current had been turned off a man walked up the big street with a lighted lantern. He wended his way across Broadway, and after swinging the lantern about his head much after the fashion of trainmen signaling, he continued up the street. He had sown seeds that began to sprout in many directions and a few minutes later rival humorists appeared with lanterns, electric flashlights, and one optimist tried to keep a candle going as he walked down toward Times Square.

Boche Had Sense of Humor.

Rain had fallen steadily for three days and nights and the trenches were in frightful condition. The German trenches, a few yards distant, were in an even worse state. Suddenly a plaintive voice cried out: "Are you dere, Jock? Haf you whisky? We haf plenty water!"

THE TWO SWORDS

By Lewis F. Crawford, President State Board of Regents, North Dakota

("The Hymn of the German Sword" appeared in a German paper published in Leipzig, Germany, and has been widely copied in papers of other countries. A copy which came to the attention of Lewis F. Crawford, Sentinel Butte, N. D., president of the state board of regents, impressed him so strongly that he prepared "The American Sword," as a contrast to the spirit shown in "The German Sword.")

HYMN OF THE GERMAN SWORD

It is no duty of mine to be either just or compassionate; it suffices that I am sanctified by my exalted mission, and that I blind the eyes of my enemies with such streams of tears as shall make the proudest of them cringe in terror under the vault of heaven.

I have slaughtered the old and the sorrowful; I have struck off the breasts of women; and I have run through the bodies of children who gazed at me with the eyes of the wounded lion.

Day after day I ride aloft on the shadowy horses in the Valley of Cypresses and as I ride I draw forth the life blood of every enemy's son that dares to dispute my path.

It is meet and right that I should cry aloud in my pride, for am I not the flaming messenger of the Lord Almighty?

Germany is so far above and beyond all the other nations that all the rest of the earth, be they who they may, should feel themselves well done by when they are allowed to fight with the dogs for the crumbs that fall from her table.

When Germany the divine is happy, then the rest of the world basks in smiles; but when Germany suffers, God in person is rent with anguish, and, wrathful and avenging, he turns all the waters into rivers of blood.

THE AMERICAN SWORD

I am the American sword.

I have never been unsheathed except in the cause of justice and humanity.

I punish only under solemn and compelling obligation.

In my presence national perfidy and dishonor never go unchallenged.

I opened in generous trust to all nations the portals of American opportunity and gave equal rights to all in the inheritance created by the toil and blood of our ancestors.

In me everything that is good finds approval, everything mean meets rebuke.

My people are enticed to love me by the gentle persuasiveness of my life.

I am the visual enchantment of the downtrodden and the oppressed; the emblem of national honor; the embodiment of the world's hope.

In me is linked the command of duty with the love of Calvary; it is mine to trace the hidden equities of divine reward and connect national wrong-doing with its swift retribution; under me fulfillment adds splendor to the gorgeous Mosaic of our dreams.

O kaiser! obsessed with power, drunk with passion, enemy of peace and right and freedom throughout the world, slayer of age and infancy, ravisher of virginity, spreader of contagion, fiend incarnate!

Against thee barren fields cry out in protest; venerated works of art and architecture, hallowed by the centuries, thou has crumbled under shells of frenzy; thou art wasting the flower of the world's manhood in red ruin spurred on by the grim reaper of Hate.

Thou international brigand, enslaver and robber of Belgium, looter of Servia, betrayer of neutrals! thou art a pirate running mad on the pathless sweep of oceans, plundering and murdering on the world's highway.

Diplomatic intriguer, thou has faithlessly broken age-old treaties, thou has torpedoed hospital ships, bombarded defenseless cities and unleashed liquid fire and poison gas—outlaw demons of destruction. In this epilepsy of the world's horror thou art not bowed with a sense of unfathomable guilt and sodden shame; thou, the arch gutter-snipe of civilization, art more unsparing than Torquemada, more cruel than Nero, more atrocious than Caligula, more crafty than Geronimo; thou hast loosed the hosts of ill upon a peaceful world and darkened the heavens with blasphemy.

Thou art chased by the maddening billows; the deeps in malice open to receive thee; ashen faces turned toward flame-lit skies, appeal for vengeance.

My presence gives courage to endure the appalling strain and omnipresent peril of battle.

I bestow superhuman nerve, sleepless caution, capacity for sacrifice, and the justice of my cause palsies the hand of brutal might and insensate ambition.

I pity the victim, not the violator; the sorrows I bring wear no weeds of mourning.

I open a new era in history; I fire the human soul with new daring and new hope; I will survive this conflict and pronounce its sentence.

When the name of kaiser shall have lost its stench and been covered with the dust of countless centuries, I shall still be glorified as the mainstay of democracy—the peacemaker of the world.

Bill and the Bank President

Mates on the Good Ship of Thrift

It was long after banking hours and only the assistant janitor and the bank president were "on the job" in the great Chicago banking institution. The executive, having cleaned up the mass of business on his desk, lighted a long, pencil-shaped cigar and lolled back in his swivel chair. Bill, the red-faced, good-natured member of the clean-up brigade, entered the office and headed for the waste basket. The bank president remembered that Bill had bought a $100 Liberty bond in the second campaign.

"Are you having any trouble in meeting the payments on your Liberty bond, Bill?" asked the executive.

"No trouble, sir," replied the janitor. "I've done a bit o' plannin' and trimmin', though, but it ain't given me any trouble. I'm better off for th' plannin' and trimmin'."

"I imagine you have—well, a sort o' better opinion of yourself for saving up and lending your money to the government," said the president.

"I'm sorry I ain't young enough to be 'over there' with the boys," said Bill, "but since I ain't there and won't be there unless the army needs men with rheumatiz in one out o' every three joints, I feel it necessary to do what I can do here at home. Oh, I know I ain't doin' much—ain't doin' anything, in fact, by lending my little money to the government and gettin' good interest on it, but I am gettin' that little money together, thanks to the amazin' way my wife trims here and there and workin' th' left-over things into new dishes."

"It's a fine thing to be a bondholder—a real partner in the great firm of Uncle Sam & Co.," said the president. "One really has a better opinion of himself when he feels that he is lending a hand."

"I'd like to have ten o' them bonds," said Bill, "but, of course, I ain't bitin' off more'n I can chew. But I'm goin' to be right there when the third loan comes out. There's a real sport in cuttin' out the things—unnecessary things. I haven't been over to th' 'corner' with th' gang for weeks. I used to feel that I didn't 'belong' unless I drifted over there and spent at least a quarter every night. My oldest girl has got that war-savings stamp fever for fair, and she's coppin' all the extra quarters."

"You have bought a Liberty bond; your wife has trimmed here and there in order that you might have the necessary money, and your daughter is buying the war-savings stamps," said the bank president. "Your little home, Bill, is doing its full duty, and you ought to be thoroughly proud of it—including yourself."

"Oh, I ain't doin' as much as I'd like to do," said Bill, blushing at the compliment, "but I'm doin' about all I can do, so I really ain't ashamed of myself."

"I'm trimming, too, Bill," said the bank president. "This cigar I'm smoking costs just one-third as much as the one I've been in the habit of smoking, and I'm not smoking as many cigars in a day as I used to. I've had my shoes resoled for the first time in 30 years. It used to be that every time I had my shoes mended a little I'd chuck the shoes and buy a new pair. I'm going to wear this suit of clothes until it wears out, no matter how glossy it becomes. I'm going to—"

"Oh, but you don't have to pinch that way," interrupted Bill a bit apologetically; "you can afford to wear the best."

"I know it," said the bank president, "but I'm going to be thrifty myself. As you say, there's real sport in playing the game of thrift. The government can have all I've got. I mean that. It has been good to me and I'm going to try to show my appreciation. I'll be right there when the third loan is out."

"I'll be ridin' along with you, sir," said Bill with a chuckle.

And now Bill and the bank president are mates on the good ship Thrift.

How Men Laugh.

The far-seeing man with a sense of humor laughs in his throat in spasmodic little bursts. He looks before he leaps. He takes a good survey of a question before committing himself. Neither laughter nor speech escapes easily. He lets them out judiciously.

SOME POTATO PARINGS

Good seed potatoes, free of blight and rot, are always worth saving for one's own future crop, or to supply others.

Feed the cull potatoes to the hogs. Cook the potatoes thoroughly and mix with cornmeal, shorts or bran. Skim milk is a good addition.

Grading potatoes for market increases the possibilities of sales and raises the price received. Keep the culls on the farms and save the cost of hauling.

Potatoes add succulence to the dairy ration. Where corn silage is not available and there are plenty of small potatoes, a peck a day will give a marked increase in the milk flow. They should be introduced into the ration gradually, and should be run through a root cutter to avoid the possibility of choking the animal.—United States Department of Agriculture.

CROP TO PRECEDE ALFALFA

Ohio Experiment Station Recommends Potatoes, Since Soil Is Usually Well Fertilized.

For sections where early potatoes succeed, the Ohio experiment station recommends this crop as one of the best to precede alfalfa, since the land is usually well fertilized and manured, and frequent cultivation kills nearly all weeds before alfalfa is seeded. The potatoes can be harvested for late July and early August alfalfa seedings, and a good seedbed can be prepared merely by disking and harrowing.

Field peas have also been found satisfactory when cut for hay as a preparatory crop for alfalfa. Such midsummer seedings of alfalfa have been found by the experiment station more satisfactory than spring seedings, since spring failures are attributable to competition with weeds and to nurse crops that take the moisture and plant food for the young alfalfa.

GERMAN ALIENS REGISTERED

All Those Who Have Not taken Out Second Papers Must Report.

Detroit—All German male alien enemies in United States above the age of 14 years are being registered this week., In the big cities the registrants report to the police stations and in the smaller towns at post offices.

Austrians, Hungarians, German women and German boys less than 14 years old need not register.

The government wishes it clearly understood that there is no blame to be attached to any particular German and warns officials to be courteous to all registrants. It also reminds the Germans that in registering "they are giving proof of their peaceful dispositions and of their intention to conform to the laws of the United States."

CUSTER SOLDIERS NOT TO MOVE

Will Not Be Sent to Waco According to Announcement.

Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex.—Camp MacArthur is to have 43,000 soldiers when the Thirty-second division goes to France, according to an announcement made by the military authorities here Monday.

Plans of the government to send a skeleton division of regulars here and to fill it up with selective soldiers from Camp Custer have been upset, and it is now definitely announced that 26,500 regulars will be mobilized here, given a little instruction to develop divisional spirit and then rushed to France.

In addition to the regulars that are to come, there are 12,000 aviation students here now and this number will be increased to 16,000.

GARFIELD'S ORDERS SUPREME

Warns State Administrators They Must Not Exceed Authority.

Washington—State fuel administrators have been notified by the fuel administration that they must cease exceeding their authority in issuing without instructions from Washington general orders restricting the use of coal.

The admonition was called forth by the fact that some administrators have enforced the Monday closing orders in a manner more drastic than was intended by the government, and because of conflicting instructions issued to consumers.

COLD CLOSES STATE FACTORIES

Railroads Find It Impossible to Move Freight With Dispatch.

Lansing—Despite the fact that coal appeared in larger shipments at the railroad gateways to the state, manufacturing plants continued to close the first of the week.

Continued cold has reduced the efficiency of motive power to an absolute minimum. Consequently many smaller plants had to shut down.

Monday afternoon, the Dow Chemical company, of Midland, the largest chemical plant in the state, notified John C. Hicks, acting fuel administrator in the absence of W. K. Prudden, that it had closed. Mr. Hicks promised to hurry coal to the company as soon as possible.

Several large factories in Detroit employing tens of thousands, were also forced to suspend operation on account of the coal shortage.

CHANGE IN ARMY STAFF

Reorganization Provides for Five Main Divisions.

Each Section Will Be Covered by an Assistant Chief of Staff—To Advise Secretary of War.

Washington, Feb. 11.—A general reorganization of the general staff of the army was announced by the war department.

The new plan provides for five main divisions.

Each division will be under an assistant chief of staff. The chief of staff and the war council are to cooperate in the general administrative duties of the general staff.

The changes have been under consideration by Secretary Baker for several weeks. The secretary stated that a reorganization of the department was in progress on his first appearance before the senate military affairs committee. Reorganization of several of the bureaus and other important improvements preceded the general staff alterations.

The general reorganization of the staff is viewed in some quarters as a result of the congressional agitation for a war cabinet and a munitions director. At the war department it is declared to be a natural outgrowth of the rapid development of the war program. There were about forty-five members of the general staff when war was declared. This number was increased immediately and now is about eighty. Most of the present members are in France.

The official announcement of the reorganization says:

"The burden upon the chief of staff, the assistant chiefs of staff, and the officers forming the general staff, in their duties in connection with the administration of the army program by the military establishment has so increased that it becomes immediately necessary to organize the general staff into responsible divisions."

The chief of the general staff, with the assistance of the war council, is to be the immediate adviser of the secretary of war. He and the war council are charged with the planning and development of the army program in its entirety.

ROOSEVELT IS MUCH BETTER

Physicians Say Recovery Is Matter of Time—King George Cables Sympathy.

New York, Feb. 11.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who underwent two operations at the Roosevelt hospital last week, is steadily improving and his physicians say that his recovery is simply a matter of time.

Mrs. Roosevelt received the following message from King George of England:

"The queen and I regret the illness of Colonel Roosevelt and hope for his speedy recovery."

There was a stream of callers at the hospital all day inquiring as to the patient's condition.

NAMES OF DEAD ON TUSCANIA TO BE GIVEN SOON

Washington Busy Checking Up List of Survivors From Transport.

RED CROSS AGENTS BUSY

Willing to Do All They Can to Trace Fate of Any Individual—Sick and Injured American Soldiers Improving.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Every Chicagoan known to have been on board the Tuscania was rescued.

This fact was established when the war department made public several hundred additional names of survivors.

Still Hope for These.

About 100 soldiers from Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan remain to be accounted for. Out of about 2,180 troops on board nearly 600 were from these states. So far, about 500 of them have been reported in the list of saved. Inasmuch as not more than 113 of the soldiers on board are missing, according to the war department's information, it is considered probable that more than half of the 100 Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan men yet to be accounted for will prove to have been rescued.

The list of survivors made public included about 650 names from various parts of the country, of whom about 150 are from middle Western states. The survivors in the lists made public total nearly 1,800. There are about 800 survivors whose names have not been made public. It is expected that this list probably will be complete tomorrow. With the full list of survivors the war department then will be able to check off the names of the missing from its records.

Red Cross Agents Busy.

A cablegram received at the headquarters of the American Red Cross from William Endicott, its commissioner to England, states that the Red Cross agents are making every possible effort to aid in the work of establishing identification of soldiers who lost their lives and whose bodies were washed up on the Irish coast.

Commissioner Endicott said the Red Cross agents on the ground would be glad to do all they could to trace the fate of any individual whose relatives or friends might make special request of the Red Cross through the bureau of communications at Washington.

The Red Cross agents in England have shipped to a rest camp, that has been established, articles of comfort in sufficient quantities to supply 2,000 soldiers.

There are no new official figures on the losses available, and the war department's figures continued to differ from those of the British admiralty. The war department estimates 210 persons missing, 113 of them American soldiers, while the British admiralty's figures put the lost at 166 missing, 147 of them American officers and man.

The war department has ordered finger prints of all the unrecognizable soldiers recovered from the Tuscania. By comparison with records here it will be possible to identify them.

Survivors in Camps.

Londonderry, Ireland, Feb. 11.—All the American survivors from the Tuscania, with the exception of about 100 sick or injured, and a party of 142 who landed in Scotland, are quartered in two military camps.

To a majority of the men the overland journey from the northern coast, where they were brought ashore, was their first ride in the native toylike trains, and they thoroughly enjoyed it.

The news had spread through the countryside that the Americans were coming in special trains, and at each little railway station groups of farmer folk had gathered to catch a glimpse of the troops and wave a friendly greeting, to which the Americans were constantly making acknowledgment.

Scottish troops piped the Americans from the railway to the camps.

A complete issue of clothing was made to each officer and private.

The Red Cross also sent from the Belfast branch knitted mufflers, helmets and sweaters, which were especially welcomed by the Americans in their first experience with the Irish climate.

Brings Cigarettes for Men.

The one thing most appreciated by the men was a visit from Miss Jean Ogilvie, a member of the Red Cross from New York. She was the first American woman they had seen since leaving the United States. She came from Belfast with cigarettes, clothing, comforts and food.

At the camps the American officers were received in the British officers' mess in the heartiest fashion.

Sick Are Improving.

An Irish Port, Feb. 11.—A correspondent, who visited the sick and injured Americans confined in hospitals in two widely separated Irish seaports, found them progressing favorably.

Many Injured in Car Crash.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Many passengers were cut and bruised when a car on the Rochester & Syracuse electric line jumped the rails and rolled down a 20-foot embankment.

GEN. CADORNA LOSES POST

Commander in Chief of Italian Army Removed as Member of Interallied Supreme War Council.

Rome, Feb. 11.—Gen. Luigi Cadorna has been removed as a member of the interallied supreme war council.

Gen. Gastone Giardina, former minister of war, has been appointed to succeed him.

Cadorna has been virtually stripped for the time being, at least, of all responsibility and active connection with the army, being "placed at the disposition of the minister of war." With him, the two other generals who were directly responsible for the operations preceding and following the Isonso disaster, have been called to Rome to be at the war minister's "disposal." They are Gen. Carlo Porro, former subchief of the general staff, and Gen. Luigi Capello, who commanded the ill-fated second army.

This action comes incidentally with it not as a result of a powerful political and press campaign for "adequate punishment" of those responsible for the Isonso debacle.

TAKE 800 THUGS IN CHICAGO

Greatest Criminal Roundup in the City's History Made—Vice Raids Ordered by U. S.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—The greatest criminal roundup in the history of Chicago was made here. More than 800 suspects have been arrested. The police expect to have 1,000 under arrest. Second in importance to the crime crusade was the activity of the police and investigators for Second Deputy Funkhouser against vice, in accordance with the government order requiring strict enforcement of the five-mile law.

The federal edict provides that no house of ill fame be operated within five miles of a site, camp or building housing soldiers or sailors. This means that practically every disorderly house in Chicago will have to be put out of business.

More than 200 men and women were rounded up in the vice campaign and a score of disorderly houses, flats and hotels were raided. All prisoners were turned over to Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice.

TWO MEN KILLED BY ICE FLOE

Fishermen Climb Trees at Approach of Flood and Are Hurled Into River at Rosiclare, Ill.

Cairo, Ill., Feb. 11.—Advices received here from Rosiclare, Ill., tell of the death by drowning of two men and much property damage as the result of the breaking of the Stewart Island ice gorge. The Ohio river is said to have risen 35 feet in five hours. The two men believed to be dead were fishermen, who climbed trees at the approach of the flood. The ice cut down the trees and the men were swept down the river.

HISTORY OF TECUMSEH

WRITTEN IN 1869

Schools of Tecumseh

Our forefathers, who settled on the wild New England shore, were from the most enlightened and Christian portions of Europe. The men who took the lead in civil and ecclesiastical affairs were among the most lerned men who ever adored this or any country. The establishment of schools and colleges, therefore, for the benefit of their posterity, was early an object dear to their hearts, and one of the first, as it was the last of all of their worldly purposes. This spirit has never departed from their emigration from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean.

Actuated by this unfailing genius, Messrs. Evans and Brown, having constructed a house in which to live, proceeded immediately to erect a school house for their children. It was constructed of tamarack poles, and stood not far from the old Red Mill, in Brownville. Here Mrs. Mary Spafford, wife of George Spafford, taught the first school ever organized in Lenawee County, in the winter of 1824 and 25.

In 1826 a school was built by the voluntary efforts of a few individuals on the public square, on Maumee st., a little south of east of the old Presbyterian church. This was a frame house about eighteen by twenty feet in dimensions. This was the village school, and the only school until 1832.

This year, 1832, Mr. LeBaron, then a young man, opened a private school on the ridge a little beyond Evans Creek, and near the corner formed by Maumee street and the street extending east, along the ridge. This school was opened on the 25th of September. Mrs. LaBaron then in the morning of married life, acted as assistant to her husband. This private school met with favor and was attended by success. The following winter, Mr. LeBaron moved his school to the court house, where he conducted it until November 25th, 1836. He then sold his furniture and good will of business, to Mr. Benjamin Workman, now M. D. and principal of the insane hospital, in Toronto, Canada, then Canada west.

Dr. Workman continued the institution until sometime in 1837, when it passed into the hands of Mr. Perley Bills, who, from that time to this has been an enthusiastic patron of all of our schools, devoting his time and money freely for their support and success, the first among an honorable number of equals.

Under Mr. Bills' supervision the school ranked high and continued about three years. Several students from this school passed on into college, graduated with credit, and are still ornaments in the various professions into which they have entered. Miss Brown, now Mrs. Bills, was assistant in this school.

In the year of 1839, a branch of the State University was opened in Tecumseh, which was continued some three years. Among the principals, were Anderson Harvey, Wilson Grey and Rev. Moses E. Taylor all appointed by the regents of the University. The Institutions was then discontinued by the state and the school was conducted by Benjamin L. Baxter, John Q Wood, Joseph Estabrooks and others.

About 1840 the primary school fund of the state prompted the organization of primary school districts and soon afterwards three primary schools were instituted within the village and three houses of brick were built in their respective localities. In these houses, schools were maintained as the writer is informed, until 1853, when a union school organization was effected embracing the enitre village and some adjoining territory.

Up to this time, the high school had been kept in the court house and a private enterprise, but the court house being inadequate to the wants of the new organzation, in 1854, the subject of building a new and more convenient edifice was seriously agitated. Some questioned the expediency of the measure, but its friends pressed the matter and were sustained.

At a public meeting two thousand dollars were voted for the purpose. The enterprise thus initiated went steadily onward. In 1855, a site was purchased on the southeast corner of Ottawa and Shawnee streets, opposite the Military square. Six thousand dollars more were voted for the purpose to be borrowed on the bonds of the district, and the building put under contract. The following year it was completed.

The building is fourty feet in width and eighty feet deep fronting Military Square. It is three stories high with a deep basement underneath, and central towers on each side about sixteen feet square, in which are the entrance ways and stairs. In the third is a fine commodious chapel The whole is warmed by a furnace It will accommodate four hundred students and cost $16,000.

The school course, in 1852, when the union school was organized showed about three hundred scholars. They now show nearly double that number. From September 1867, to September 1868, they manifest an increase of one hundred.

In the fall of 1868, finding the school building inadequate to the demands, a tax of three thousand dollars was voted, and the board instructed to build a new primary school house. A site has been purchased the north half of what was the public square, bounded on the south by Chicago street and on the east by Maumee street. A plan has also been accepted which specifies a house to be fifty feet spuare, constructed of brick and two stories high with basement; to have four rooms, which collectively will seat two hundred and forty scholars; to be warmed throughout with a furnace.

In conclusion we would say; our schools have ever been the idol of the people, no more so than today. Without the factitious measures frequently resorted to give popularity to schools and attract patronage under tee guidance of amiable, well qualified and religious instructors, they have gone quietly on fulfiling their missions, fitting our sons and daughters and any others to whom they may become an attraction, for happy and useful lives with here and then a peaceful immortaliay. Of the Institution entire, we say—Este perpetua.

U. S. AIDS WAR PLANTS

$150,000,000 Advanced to Contractors, Says Baker.

Cash Averts Many Failures and Is Speeding Up Production—Many Small Concerns Helped.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Approximately $150,000,000 has been advanced to contractors on war work by the war credits board, Secretary Baker announced. This includes money for production of clothing, food, equipment and small ammunition.

The advances have stimulated production to the highest possible degree. In some cases they prevented the closing of plants because of inability of contractors to get money to meet the pay rolls.

The law permits advances not exceeding 30 per cent of the contract price.

The statement says:

"When a concern that has a contract with the war department for supplies has shown that it needs financial assistance, and has been able to comply with the act by giving adequate security, the board has approved an advance payment and the money has been received by the contractor without delay—in many instances on the same day the application has been filed.

"However, the board does not act in any sense as a bank. It is only when the manufacturer needs financial assistance in addition to his banking lines, that the board acts.

"Many manufacturers, on account of delays caused by railroad congestion, used up all their capital, borrowed all they could and still did not have the money necessary to make deliveries to the government. In some instances they were on the verge of closing down.

"By authorizing advance payments promptly the board has relieved all these contractors.

"There is no doubt of the value of the board to the manufacturer with limited capital.

"No matter how small a plant a man may have, if he has the skill to make war supplies needed, he now can take a contract and advance payment sufficient to see him through. It is hoped the small manufacturer everywhere will realize this and make government contracts."

Forty Miles of Jam.

So enormous has the business of jam making become in Dundee, Scotland, since the great firms there organized to supply preserves to the British army and navy that, according to a report sent by E. R. Pottle, U. S. vice consul there, to the department of commerce, the tins in which they put up one week's supply alone "would, if stood end on end, form a column fully 40 miles high. It is no unusual thing for this firm to deal with 100,000,000 oranges, and all kinds of fruit are dealt with on a similar scale."

The Dundee manufacturers are about to give up the use of earthenware, glass jars and tins, for a stout cardboard container is now being made and experiments with it have proved highly successful.

FOES AMBUSH YANKEE PATROL

Five Americans Killed, Four Missing and One Wounded During Clash.

ONLY ONE MAN ESCAPES TRAP

Survivor Crawls Back to American Lines—Number of Germans Caught in Hail of Shells Fired by U. S. Artillery.

With the American Army in France, Feb. 11.—Five American soldiers are believed to have been killed, four are missing and one was wounded when an American patrol was ambushed in No Man's Land at night by a superior force of Germans.

The spot where the encounter occurred is an isolated one and reports concerning the casualties inflicted by both sides are meager.

Only one American is known to have escaped the trap of the Germans, which was laid in front of our wires.

The one survivor, who crawled back to the American lines with a bullet in his chest, is unable to talk.

Fought to Finish.

Our artillery immediately laid a barrage around the ambushing Germans and some are believed to have been accounted for. The infantry accounted for others, as it is certain the attacked patrol fought to a finish, according to information trickling in from the front line.

Our patroling soldiers were walking in front of our wire entanglements when a big enemy patrol that had been divided into parties, which took up concealed positions, opened fire at close range. The night was clear and the forms of the Americans made the best possible targets for the hidden Germans. There is no doubt that the Americans battled gallantly until completely overpowered.

The artillery duel in our sector continues. Scores of airplanes were out observing and making photographs. The men in the line were thrilled by a number of air duels high in the sky.

American in Command.

An American general now commands the sector of the front recently taken over by our troops. When the Americans first entered the sector it was under the command of a French general commanding a certain large unit of the French army. Now we have control.

In turning the sector over to the American general February 5 the French commander issued a general order in which he expressed complete satisfaction with our troops and confidence that the sector was in good hands, and, if attacked, that it would be defended with great valor.

The order turning the sector over to the Americans, a copy of which was communicated to our forces, read:

"On February 5 the commanding general of —— American unit takes command of —— sector.

Praises Our Boys.

"The commanding general of —— French unit takes occasion to express to the American general, the colonels of artillery and all of the American units which have been under his orders complete satisfaction with the way in which the American troops have acquitted themselves of the mission intrusted to them. Their good will and their ardent desire to excel and the rapidity with which they have adapted themselves to life of the sector have brought them the admiration of all.

"General —— hands over the sector with confidence that it is in good hands and that the American troops will organize it with method and the tenacity characterizing American genius, and in case of attack will defend it with great valor."

BLAME SPIES FOR BIG FIRE

Forty Freight Cars Loaded With Munitions Destroyed by Flames at Newark, N. J.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 11.—Forty freight cars loaded with munitions and uniforms for the United States troops were destroyed by fire which swept the Lehigh Valley railroad transfer plant, one of the largest terminals in the country. Two hundred other cars were safely removed from the path of the flames through the heroic action of switching crews. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The loss was $[illegible]000.

Another fire in a plant manufacturing goods for the government was discovered five minutes after Clarence Hodes, a watchman at the Klaxon company's factory, Newark, challenged a prowler and fired four shots at him. The loss was $25,000.

Forewarned Is Forearmed.

A man went to a nearby city on business, and while there called at a bank to get specie for some notes he had had on hand for a long time. They proved to be on a defunct concern, and the teller told him they were good for nothing.

"Wa'al, now, look a-here, mister," said Uncle Cy, "won't ye jist tell a feller how you can tell when money's a-goin' ter spile?"

Perhaps nothing since the sinking of the Lusitania has caused so much feeling among the American people as the sinking of the transport steamer Tuscania on the afternoon of February 5th. as she was hearing the northeast coast of Ireland, loaded with 2156 American soldiers and 241 British sailors. The last week has been one of intense anxiety and people have been scanning the list of survivors which have been made public for names of friends whom they feared were on board.

Many Michigan boys were on the boat mostly Upper Peninsular men and members of the one hundred and seventh engineers. Late reports are placing the number of Michigan boys who have been rescued at 60. The only Lenawee county boy mentioned in the reports is Garland Gove, son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Gove of Tecumseh.

The sinking of the transport casts a gloom over the American people. The thing we have so long feared has happened and may happen many, many times before the war is over. Canada and Uncle Sam have succeeded in transporting many hundreds of thousands of troops across the Atlantic up to this time without loss which has been considered a wonderful undertaking. As time goes on the movement of transports will be greater as many new boats will soon be available for service and with the increasing number of ships will come the increased danger of meeting the German U-boats, and disasters such as has come to the Tuscania.

It is one of the consequences of war, but there will be no letting up. Our men will be pushed across in an ever increasing stream until the time will come when the Hun will break and he will be driven back to defeat. It will take time but the American people are steeling themselves for the struggle and will aid in every way possible to push the war to a successful end. Our American soldiers are sorely needed to fill up the ranks of the Allies and they are going across to take their places beside our Allies in the trenches of Europe.

We are beginning to learn what it means for America to be in the war and the sinking of this transport only hardens us and makes us more determined than ever to push on to victory.

WAR PROPHECY COMES TRUE

Russian Banker's Prediction Seven Years Ago Provided for Famine and the Bankruptcy of Nations.

Only seven years ago M. Bloch, the great Russian banker, wrote: "That is the future of war—not fighting, but famine; not the slaying of men, but the bankruptcy of nations, and the breaking up of the whole social organization of the nations."

The future of war, as written about by M. Bloch seven years ago, is the present of war today, observes Vernon Kellogg in the Atlantic. Not that fighting and the slaying of men are lessened. Only the Napoleonic and the Thirty Years' wars approach today's war in the terrible losses of human life; and too great a drain on the human life of any one or several of the nations engaged may be the deciding factor in the war's conclusion. But on the whole, and as matters stand today, that part of M. Bloch's prophecy referring to the predominant influence of the food problem in modern war is thoroughly borne out by the facts. Despite the fearful and fatal struggling of an incredible number of men, consuming inconceivable quantities of munitions, and using such amazing methods of fighting as are beyond even the fantastic imaginings of the romancers of a decade ago, the national and international phases of the food and general economic problem are the predominant features of the war situation today.

Poisonous Constituent of Ivy.

Whether the poisonous constituent of poison ivy is chemical or bacterial is discussed in the Medical Record.

Doctor Frost insists that it is bacterial, because of the incubation period, the complete natural immunity of certain individuals, and that exposure may be strictly limited to proximity of the plant and for other reasons, and asserts that he has found a form of bacteria constant on all leaves examined.

J. T. McNair insists that actual contact with the resinous sap must occur, and that neither mixing with mercury nor heating destroys the poisonous quality of the sap. He therefore believes the action is chemical.

The Usual Difficulty.

"I wish I had a lot of money!" he said, rather unoriginally, we thought.

"What a selfish wish!" we murmured, echoing bromide with bromide.

"It is not selfish," he asserted. "Indeed, I was thinking how much good I could do if I had money."

"You can do a lot of good as it is," we counseled sagely. "It is not necessary to be rich to do good. There are many, many things you can do to ameliorate suffering and distress. Personal service, and all that sort of thing."

"Yes, yes," he said impatiently. "But nobody will ever hear of it."

Ay, there's the rub!—Exchange.

FOOD PRICE TO BE NAMED BY STATE

FOOD ADMINISTRATION PLANS "SUGGESTING" PRICES TO PREVENT GOUGING.

PRICES ON STAPLES VARY

Several Cents' Difference On Same Commodity Shown By Reports From Different Towns.

Lansing—A list of suggested prices for staple foods is being worked out by experts at the state food administrator's office.

Other states have already been using the "suggested" list and it is considered necessary in Michigan. According to letters reaching here, the range of prices all over the state is large. Several cents' difference on the same commodity, quality being equal, is reported from various points.

The idea is to have committees representing the administration meet at least twice a week or oftener, and arrange prices at which, in the opinion of the food department the goods should be sold. It is probable that all prices will be fixed here in Lansing, although one plan suggested is to divide the state into three sections, western, central and eastern. The western prices would be promulgated at Grand Rapids, the ones for the central section at Lansing, and the eastern ones at Detroit.

The publication of the prices in the newspapers would be the official notice of their existence. While the food administration does not attempt to "fix" prices, it does "suggest" them. In other states, where the prices have been so "suggested" the dealers in nearly all instances, have followed them, realizing that if they did not there would be investigation by the government.

FUEL OIL UNDER U. S. CONTROL

Big Distributors Must Obtain Federal Licenses.

Washington—Government control of industry was extended to oil in a proclamation by President Wilson Monday, putting under license manufacture and distribution of all fuel oils.

No mention is made of other oils or oil products, including gasoline and kerosene, but they, too, probably will be put under control soon.

Licenses must be obtained before February 11, by all manufacturers and distributors whose gross sales of fuel, including gas oil, amount to more than 100,000 barrels a year.

A series of regulations drawn by the fuel administration establishes in the east a list of preferential consumers who must be supplied in the order they are given regardless of contracts outstanding.

THOUGHT WILL RULE WORLD

Scientist Asserts Ships at Sea Will Be Controlled From Shore and Gasoline Will Be Grown Like Corn.

In the lobby of a big Fifth avenue club one evening recently, a group of scientific men were discussing the war as being the necessity that will bring about some startling inventions, notes a New York correspondent. If the sprinkling of intellectural luminati were not stamped by genius, it is probable that an ordinary bystander would have tapped his forehead knowingly.

One of them was telling about a scientist who is already telephoning to airplanes without wires. And another quoted a famous inventor who said that it would only be a short while until all telephone wires would be abolished as unessential.

"The fact is," he said, "that telephone wires do not in reality carry our messages. Every scientist knows that. Back of it all is the great process of thought which we are only beginning feebly to understand.

"The more we delve into this process of thought—whatever it is—the more we come to the conclusion that the material phenomena is the projection of thought. We konw that every material thing comes from a thought or an idea.

"We are arriving at the conclusion that even space is thought, for we are annihilating space every day through a thinking process. It will not be many generations before every ship at sea is controlled by thought from shore. Our trains are going to be run without fuel, and we are going to grow gasoline just like we raise corn."

BUTCHER CITES BIG PROFITS

Meat Dealer Points Out Pills, Mineral Water and False Teeth as Producers of Immense Margins.

"Talk about food profiteers!" growled the butcher, as he charged up a two-pound rump steak at 60 cents a pound. "Why I know people whose profit has been from time immemorial 6,000 per cent and more. Yet you don't jump on them. Why, then, jump on me?

"Take Junck's liver pill, for instance. I know Otto Junck's bookkeeper, and the man tells me that this Junck pill sells wholesale at exactly 6,000 per cent profit.

"Take mineral water—plain soda. You can make and sell plain soda at a profit of 40,000 per cent. And, mind you, no kicks.

"Take false teeth. They used to make false teeth out of ivory, and in those days it was right to charge $100 a set for them. But now false teeth are made of porcelain. They cost 10 cents apiece. Dentist's profit, 76,000 per cent.

"So I could go on. And you ask me if my conscience isn't sore about this 60-cent rump steak. Oh!"

TOBACCO "NECESSARY"

Lord Rhondda, British Food Controller, Says It Is Not a Luxury.

Tobacco is a necessity not a luxury, declares Lord Rhondda, the food controller, in a statement published here. "We must have tobacco," he says. "I believe that its loss would be a national misfortune. It means much both to the manual laborer and to him who works with his brains. Men would eat a great deal more if they did not have tobacco. I hold that the deprivation of it would work great discomfort."

Some system of "rationing" tobacco, however, is forecast by the newspapers.

NEW VESSEL TO DEFY SUBMARINE

U. S. Naval Advisor Declares Unsinkable Ship Has Been Invented.

GIVES DETAILS ON THE PLAN

Craft May Have Big Hole Blown in Side and Still Remain Afloat—Recalls Secretary Baker's Statement.

New York, Feb. 11.—Means have been found to make troop transports unsinkable by submarine, according to a statement made by William L. Saunders, vice chairman of the naval consulting board, in an address at a dinner of the University of Pennsylvania alumni in this city.

Mr. Saunders said that one of the ships recently commandeered by the government "now lies at an Atlantic port and in such shape that she cannot be sunk by an exploding torpedo."

"I can conceive of no reason why this information should be withheld," he added. "On the contrary, I believe, it is well that the enemy may come to realize that the time has been reached when American transports which that enemy cannot sink are ready for the transportation of our troops. This ship may have a hole thirty or forty feet in diameter blown in her side and she will remain afloat. Such a hole would waterlog but one-tenth of the honeycombed airtight cells."

Gives Detail of Plan.

Mr. Saunders described in detail the plan to keep ships afloat after they had been torpedoed and the manner in which it had been developed by William F. Donnelly, a New York marine engineer, working under authorization of the naval consulting board.

It is understood that the unsinkable ship has no fewer than 12,000 airtight cells.

"Of course it will take some time to equip similarly the large number of transports we have," continued Mr. Saunders. "It is my belief, however, that nothing will be left undone by the administration to safeguard the lives of large troop contingents to be moved across the Atlantic."

Mr. Saunders, in a statement credited to him last May, asserted that a solution of the submarine problem probably had been found. Other members of the board took issue with Mr. Saunders.

Adds to Confidence.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Announcement by Vice Chairman Saunders of the naval consulting board that means had been found to make troop ships practically unsinkable lends new meaning to the air of confidence with which both American and British naval authorities are facing their task of clearing the seas of U-boats.

Secretary Baker has insisted before the senate committee that 1,500,000 American troops could be taken to France and kept supplied during 1918. His replies to the questions as to where the tonnage for the task was to come from have indicated that there was some information at hand which he did not care to disclose.

FIRST DRAFT TO BE COMPLETED FEB. 23

AGGREGATE OF ABOUT 75,000 MEN TO BE SENT TO CAMP UNDER NEW ORDERS.

SECOND CALL IS UNCERTAIN

Depends On Removel of Men Now in Training—Transfer Regulated By Availability of Ships.

Washington—The first draft army will be completed February 23. The final quotas from those states which have not furnished their full strength will be sent to camp that date. Orders to this effect have gone out from Washington, it was understood the first of the week.

Advance supplies of equipment for the new contingents now are being assembled at the camps and cantonments in various sections of the country. Secretary of War Baker has insisted on the accumulation of ample stocks of clothing and other necessary supplies before the additional men reach camp. The work is being rushed.

Advices that clothing and supplies would be ready in time were received before the provost marshal general decided on the order requiring the induction of the final quotas into military service.

An aggregate of about 75,000 men will be sent to camp under the new orders.

The date of the second draft call is dependent on the removal of troops now in training. There is no plan under consideration which calls for the construction of new cantonments or extensive enlargements of the existing camps.

The second draft apparently will not apply to all states simultaneously. Transfer of the men of the first national army is regulated by the availability of ships. As transports become available, contingents which have completed their home trainng will be sent abroad.

Registrants to be called under the second draft will be ordered into military service as camp space becomes available.

How the "Goat" Got Even.

A Southerner recently approached the attendant of Y. M. C. A. No. 21.

"I should likes to borrow some di-es," he announced.

"Some what?"

"Some di-es."

"I don't understand."

"You know, di-es, things you shoot craps with."

"Oh, dice! Sorry, but we haven't any of those. Dice are one of the few things that we don't supply."

"The boys sent me up after them," protested the rookie.

"I guess that was a joke."

"Say, let me take some boxing gloves for a few minutes. I'll bring them right back."

And thus armed, the "goat," with fire in his eye, walked off in the direction of his "barracks."—Boston Globe.

TWO-OUNCE BREAD RATION IS ORDERED

RESTAURANTS, DINING CARS AND HOTELS MUST OBSERVE NEW LAW BY HOOVER.

MODIFIED BY SUBSTITUTES

When Rolls or Bread Made From Corn, Oatmeal or Bran Are Served, Portion May Be 4 Ounces.

Washington—A two-ounce bread ration has been ordered by Mr. Hoover for patrons of hotels, restaurants and dining cars. This allowance is about that now observed in England.

Telegrams went out last Tuesday to the food administration's hotel representatives in every state designating the new ration. Not more than two ounces of wheat bread may be served to any one person at any one meal except that when rolls or bread made from corn, oatmeal or bran are served, and when only one kind other than wheat bread is ordered, a portion may consist of four ounces. Rolls may not weigh more than one ounce each.

Public eating places are now licensed under the new bread regulations and the bread ration rule is issued under this authority. Hotel representatives have been instructed to see that immediate observance is given in hotels for Monday and Wednesday as wheatless days. Tuesday as meatless day, Saturday as a porkless day and that there is one wheatless meal and one meatless meal every day.

Reaching into the highways and byways for food consumption, the food administration is making steady progress in conservation.

Last reported are 600 American steamships plying in the Atlantic and gulf, the crews of which are now conserving meat and wheat. Wheat and meat sonsumption of these ships, the food administration said have been reduced 50 per cent and pork consumption 75 per cent. It has sounded the doom of the bully-beef stew at every meal; and many an ancient fo'castle delicacy.

HEATLESS MONDAY BAN STAYS

Plans of Fuel Chief Sent Awry By Extreme Cold Weather.

Washington—With the east facing the most acute coal shortage of the winter and in the grip of the coldest weather in a generation, the government decided Tuesday that the heatless Monday program cannot at this time be abandoned, as had been hoped.

There are some indications that if better weather does not come to improve the stiuation, officials will take up for consideration an amendment to the closing order prescribing two four-day shut downs, one covering the period of Lincoln's birthday anniversary and the other Washington's birthday.

U.S. TROOPS ON LORRAINE FRONT

Occupy Sector of Trenches Near German Border.

With the American Army in France—American Troops now are occupying a sector of the Lorraine front in France. This announcement is permitted by the military censor.

The eastern end of the battle line in the west front runs through French and German Lorraine.

According to dispatches, two Americans were killed and nine wounded during a heavy bombardment Saturday, the American artillery sending back shell for shell.

It was ascertained Monday that the American gunners wrecked several enemy dugouts and so badly damaged the first line positions that at one point the Germans were unable to occupy them Sunday.

Center of Fashion.

Paris, the center of the world's fashions, has no fewer than 60,000 women dressmakers, not counting designers and fitters, which would bring the number up to close on 100,000. The designers, who sketch out their ideas in pen and ink or with water-colors, and often originate the fashions that prevail throughout the world, earn easily over four figures a year, observes a correspondent.

Good mannequins are the most difficult to obtain. Some of the largest Parisian houses employ twenty or thirty, whose whole time is passed in trying on dresses before the eyes of fashionable French women. Naturally the numbers are fewer nowadays, and many of the most famous mannequins of Paris are now nursing in the hospitals or employed in the French munition works.

Greenville, S. C.—Seven years' sentence for cutting off three fingers of his right hand to evade military service has been imposed by a courtmartial here on Private Edward J. Causey, of Dover, Tenn., and a four years' sentence was given to Pribate Lark L. Triplett, of Granite Falls, N. C., for similarly mutilating his left hand.

FROST EFFECTS SECTION OF ROOF AT HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Section over Auditorium and Hall is being Torn Out and must be Replaced by New Work.

Workmen began Monday tearing out a section of the roof over the auditorium together with a section over the north end of the hall which was put in in early December just before the frost The continued severe weather which lasted practically all during December and January allowed the frost to penetrate clear through the cement work thus destroying the life of the cement and when the recent thaw set in it commenced to soften up.

Workmen passing over this section of the roof Monday, morning with wheelbarrows noticed that the barrows sank into the cement to the depth of an inch. Foremen Baxter and Mann and Inspector Roger Waring, after consultation over the matter, decided to take out entirely all of the work which had been effected by the frost. A gang of men were set to work that day with crowbars and axes tearing out this bad section over the auditorium and hall.

This will set the work back about two weeks, but will not interfere with the inside work in other parts of the building. It is doubtful whether this section over the auditorium will be put in until warmer weather sets in. Workman are busy today putting in timbers to hold the roof in place to enable the men to tear away the concrete without injuring the steel re-inforcing rods.

Work in other parts of the bulding is progressing nicely. About all of the inside partition walls are in, windows all set, grounds for all the woodwork in place and pipes for plumbing and steam radiators are all ready for final connections.

L. E. TEMPLE & CO. DEMONSTRATE UNIVERSAL MOLINE TRACTOR

Several times during the last two weeks L. E. Temple & Co. have made a public demonstration upon our streets of their new Universal Moline Tractor. This tractor, for which L. E. Temple & Co. have the selling rights for this section of the country, costs about the same as four good horses and will do the work of four horses. It is a one man tractor and the operator sits over his work. Uses gasoline, but it is claimed to use less than any other tractor on the market, and the machine is equipped with a 10 to 12 horse power motor.

One of its great advantages is that it can be attached to any tool, binder, plow, mower, harrow, etc., and can be operated from the seat of any implement to which it is attached, permitting the operator to handle with ease both tractor and implement.

The demonsrations have created much favorable comment and have been watched with interest by our farmers.

High-Grade Naval Gunnery.

No one can foretell the future, but we are disclosing no secret when we say that, if our battleship line should ever range up against the enemy, he will be treated at the longest ranges to a storm of fire which, in rapidity, accuracy and the uncanny way in which it clings to its ever-shifting objective, will be a most uncomfortable surprise to the enemy, asserts the Scientific American. For it is a fact that the methods of mounting, fire control, etc., which have been adopted and perfected in our navy, have raised our target practice to a point of accuracy, even at the longest ranges, which has never been reached in our own, or, probably, in any other navy.

TECUMSEH MEN INTERVIEW NEW YORK CENTRAL OFFICIAL IN REGARD TO CHICAGO STREET STOP

Division Supt. E. R. Bissell Promises to Visit Tecumseh Soon and Go Over the Ground

Atty. G. A. Rathbun, representing the village council, and J. R. Nyland, president of the Commerce Club, were in Detroit Thursday conferring with Division Superintendent E. R. Bissell of the New York Central Lines in regard to the discontinuing of our Chicago street stop and the removal of the station stop to the Junction. Mr. Bissell granted the gentlemen an audience and spent quite a little time going over the matter with them.

He stated plainly that it had been the desire of his railroad for some time past to discontinue this Chicago street stop and did not hold out much encouragement for its being put back again. He did acknowledge however, that station accommodations here in Tecumseh were not very satisfactory and promised to make an investigation in the near future in view of improving them.

Nothing further will be done until after the railroad official's visit to Tecumseh and he has had time to go over the ground with them.

Friday Mr. Nyland received the following letter which refers to his contemplated visit to Tecumseh:

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 7, 1918.
Mr. John R. Nyland,
Pres. Commerce Club,
Tecumseh, Mich,

Dear Sir:

Having reference to meeting with yourself and Mr. Rathbun, representing interests of your village in the matter of station accommodations, and which was reviewed in detail:

I will be glad to call on you in the very near future and go over with you on the ground the matter of facilities at Tecumseh Junction. I am sure you will appreciate as well as the people whom you represent, that Tecumseh has been enjoying an unprecedented condition in the way of station service, and a condition which is hard to maintain at the present time. We could not at this time promise that the Chicago street stop will be restored. The matter will, however, be given further consideration in the light of adequate facilities for the proper handling of the baggage, express and passenger service at this point.

Yours very truly,
E. R. Bissell.

FURIOUS FUN EXPEDITION IN HOWE'S TRAVEL FESTIVAL

Coney Island by Way and Night One of the Features in New Program

Men, women and children will find just what they are looking for in this season's program of Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which comes to the Bradley Opera House on Friday evening, February 15th.

Comedy, in the very best form, is furnished in a trip of furious fun through Coney Island by day and night. MAX ROSEN, FAMOUS VIOLINIST

At Ann Arbor, February 15.

On February 15, patrons of the Ann Arbor Concerts will have opportunity of hearing one of the most phenomenal musical stars which has appeared on the horizon in a young time, namely, Max Rosen, the young violin virtuoso who has just come to this country at the age of eighteen after five years study in Europe under the illustrious Leopold Auer who has become famous as the producer of a number of the word's most famous violinists.

Rosen is a product of New York's congested East Side and as a child attracted great attention for his remarkable talent as a violin player At the age of ten he came under the tutelage of DeCoppet, the famous patron of the Flonzaley Quartet, and other art patrons who provided the necessary funds for his European musical education. During these years occasional reports have reached this country of the young man's remarkable progress and when it becamt known early in the winter that he was planning to make his debut in New York this winter it set the musical world a flame. New York was much excited when it became known that he had actually landed early in January and that his debut was set for January 12 with Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of Transky. New York became still more excited when it was learned that after his first rehearsal under Stransky contracts were immediately signed for four more engagements with the same orchestra this season. His appearance since that time have been of the same nature and prominent managers all over the country have beseiged his New York managers for engagements, only a limited number of which could possibly be accepted. Among the early engagements is his appearance in Ann Arbor in February 15 which will be followed a few days later by an appearance in Detroit, after which he goes to Philadelphia for two appearances as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Stokowski.

His program will include numbers from Vitali, Dvorak, Beethoven, Auer, Sinding, and Wieniwaski.

Patrons are reminded that the concert in Ann Arbor will begin at 8:00 o'clock EASTERN STANDARD TIME.

Charles A. Sink, Secretary of Music, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The Tractor You Can Afford to Buy

If you are supporting from four to six horses in idleness nine months of the year, giving up 20 to 30 acres of your land to raise horse feed instead of marketable crops, you know what this means.

Moline-Universal Tractor

Does all the field work, including the cultivating and harvesting. Belt power up to 12 h. p. It plows deep, at the right time—in half the time.

Has the pulling power of five horses, the working capacity of seven because of greater speed and endurance, and eats only when it works.

Strictly a one-man machine—drives easier than a team from the seat of the implement pulled.

A proven success. Backed by a $19,000,000 concern with 81 years satisfactory service to the farmers of America.

THE MOLINE LINE INCLUDES Corn Planters, Cotton Planters, Cultivators, Grain Binders, Grain Drills, Harrows, Hay Loaders, Hay Rakes, Lime Sowers, Listers, Manure Spreaders, Mowers, Plows (chilled and steel,) Reapers, Scales, Seeders, Stalk Cutters, Tractors, Farm Trucks, Wagons, Vehicles.

TECUMSEH BOY ONLY LENAWEE COUNTY SOLDIER ON BOARD ILL-FATED TUSCANIA

Telegram from Washington Received Saturday Announces that Garland Gove was Safely Landed in Ireland

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Gove Who Live West of Town

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Gove received word from Washington Saturday through Posmaster E. C. Brown of Tecumseh that their son Garland who was on the troop transport Tuscania was safely landed and in Ireland. The message did not give any particulars but just announced that he was one of the survivors.

In the reports published Sunday we note that his name appears as one of four Michigan boys who are either sick or injured and that he is in a hospital in an Irish port.

Garland Gove was the only Lenawee county boy on board the Tuscania. He is 19 years old and enlisted July 15th last, leaving Adrian in August for Detroit. From Detroit he was transferred to Columbus, Ohio, and then to SanAntonio, Texas, where he was stationed two months. Leaving Texas he was sent to New York where he remained until he took passage on the Tuscania for Europe. He is in the 100th Aviation Corps.

In a conversation with Mrs. Gove Monday morning she stated that the last heard from her son was a letter mailed from New York January 21st in which he stated that he expected to sail within a few days.

Naturally the news brought joy to the anxious parents, but she stated that her heart was saddened by the thought of other mothers who had lost their splendid boys through the sinking of this transport.

The winter of 1917—18 will be one long remembered for its extreme cold, and its extreme lack of fuel to keep us warm. All over the country we read of business places being closed for lack of fuel, schools closed and in many instances two families conserving their supplies by joining forces and keepng one home warm instead of two. And then the food question has been as never before, not that there is a scarcity in the country, but because of the hungry ones across the water who look to us for help. Meatless days, wheatless days, that we may send these articles to those who are hungrier than we. Heatless days conserve the fuel that others may be kept comfortable, who have nothing in wood or coal to keep them warm.

SUMMING UP THE EVIDENCE

Many Tecumseh People Have Been Called as Witnesses

Week after week has been published the testimony of Tecumseh People—kidney sufferers—backache victims—people who have endured many forms of kidney, bladder or urinary disorders. These witnesses have used Doan's Kidney Pills. All have given their enthusiastic approval. It's the same everywhere. 50,000 American men and women are publicly recommending Doan's—always in the home papers. Isn't it a wonderful, convincing mass of proof? If you are a sufferer your verdict must be "Try Doan's first."

Here's one more Tecumseh case.

Mrs. R. J. McCoy, S. Pearl St., says: "My kidneys were weak and I had dull, nagging backaches and tired easily. I felt run down and languid and my kidneys acted irregularly. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and got some at Wright & Son's Drug Store. The backache stopped and I felt stronger and better in every way."

Referred to Boy Scouts.

When war broke out a young man who was every kind of rogue suddenly acquired a brand-new conscience, and worked it overtime, says London Tit-Bits. When he came before the tribunal he had got his conscientious objections all cut and dried. The chairman listened gravely for a little while, until the bogus C. O., warming to his subject, began to get flowery.

"Yes," he cried, lifting his eyes to heaven, "in 1905 I was born again!"

"In that case," broke in the chairman, quietly, "have you any objection to joining the boy scouts?"

Lumping Them Off.

A tiny girl had made it her custom to enumerate by name all the members of the family and the close friends, in her evening prayers, but at the close of a strenuous day of play she was tired and after the opening petition she yawned, then added sleepily: "And please just bless the whole bunch."

Not more than 1,000 men in the 23,000 now here are without insurance, and it is believed that Custer stands first in the percentage of men who have purchased protection. An effort is now being made to persuade every man of the last 1,000 to take out at least a small amount of insurance.

Charlotte—After three days of campaigning in behalf of the treasury department's new movement for the sale of thrift stamps and war savings certificates, in order to enlist in government financial aid hundreds of thousands of wage earners and small investors, who do not find it convenient to absorb Liberty loan issues, Charlotte is now able to point to the fact that there is not a single citizen within her borders who is not the possessor of one or more thrift stamps and war savings certificate, the first town in the nation to make that record.

The large number of fires which occurred in this state for the past year are described as crimes of carelessness by Mr. Ellsworth.

Marshall—Mrs. Charles Dyer, 39 years old, was burned to death in a fire starting from an over-heated stove which destroyed her home here. It is believed that she suffered from an epidemic fit when she awoke and found the house in flames. She had gone back to bed after her husband left for work on the Michigan Central railroad section.

Grand Rapids—Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, told the Michigan Engineering society that better highways to make possible regular operation of passenger automobiles and freight trucks would prove an important factor in relieving railroad congestion. The commissioner urged counties not to suspend road building during the war as good highways are even more essential at this time.

Battle Creek—This city will experience a spring flood rivaling the one of 1908, in the opinion of W. W. Bridgen, superintendent of the city water department. Conditions are ideal for the repetition of high water marks of other years and the only condition which can possibly cause Battle Creek to escape damage this spring is a gradual thawing of snow. A warm rain or sudden warm weather would result in a big property loss to the city.

Detroit—A large fleet of fabricated submarine fighers will be built by the Ford Motor Co. for the government. The exact number of ships to be built was not made public.

ROADS TI TO DISCREDIT U. S.

Brotherhood Chiefs Charge Rail I. de With Bad Faith.

Washington—Charges that railroad managements are trying to discredit government operation of roads and the eight-hour law were made to the federal railroad wage commission by three rail brotherhood chiefs.

D. W. Heldt, of the signalmen; A. B. Garretson, of the conductors, and W. G. Lee, of the trainmen, made the charges.

W. G. Lee, president of the railway trainmen, said that he had evidence that several railroad men were replaced by inexperienced employes at important gateways, that engines had been permitted to freeze up over night and that rain crews had been called out and kept waiting until the 16-hour law overtook them before being sent out to the terminal.

Asked by Chairman Lane, of the railroad wage commission, who was responsible for these things, Mr. Lee said he believed he could trace it back to about four banks in New York city, which control railroad financing.

Disease Epidemic Hits Alpena.

All schools, churches and clubs have been closed here, but doctors favor stricter regulations.

Will Be Given Actual Test by Trip Through U-Boat Zone.

Washington—The first non-sinkable seagoing ship, the Lucia, achievement of American genius, will load this week and leave for Europe.

She will be without convoy. She goes as an open challenge to German submarines to prive that she is invulnerable. No test has been made or will be made of the efficacy of her multiplicity of airtight and water-tight cells.

William F. Donnelly, inventor of the non-sinkable construction of the Lucia, a marine engineer of New York, will have charge of loading of the vessel.

Although the Lucia is fitted with 12,000 of the water and air-tight cells, permanently attached to frames and deck beams and other available spaces of the deck, about 15 to 20 per cent of the cargo space must be packed with additional numbers of these buoyant boxes.

ALLIES AWAIT GERMAN DRIVE

Army Officers Believe Teuton Rush Will Come About April 1.

Washington—According to opinions expressed by army officers, the widely heralded spring drive of Germany will come about April 1.

Many of the higher officials are confident that the Teutons will not take the initiative on the western front. Officers leaning toward this belief figure that General von Hindenburg will play safe by remaining on the defensive.

Some army authorities venture the assertion unofficially that unless the Germans start their movement without delay, the Allies will forestall their plans by a terrific and sustained combined assault all along the western line.

With the opening of the great campaign of 1918 on the western front apparently within sight, military men have been examining with profound interest the situation created by the signing of a peace pact between the Central Powers and the new Ukraine republic and the decision of the bolsheviki Russian government to stop fighting and demobilize the army.

Their conclusions were not discouraging. These events on their face would appear to set free enormous German forces for the impending battle in the west and also to furnish new sources of food supplies for the Teutonic allies, but many factors detract from the advantages the Central Powers may derive.

Ex-Captives Poor Soldiers.

One of the threats against the western front dwelt upon in public discussion is the fact that presumably 1,500,000 prisoners of war held in Russia would be released to strengthen the German army. The fact is said to be, however, that the great majority of the soldiers captured by the Russians are Austrians, not available for western front operations by present indications.

Most of the others are civilians or camp followers of one kind or another, and so far as known only a small number of German troops were captured on that front. Any men from the prison camps are regarded as of doubtful military value for some time to come, as the Russians, unable to feed their own soldiers, hardly have improved the health of captives.

GERMANY DEFYING WORLD OPINION SAYS PRESIDENT

Appears Before Congress And Emphasizes Friendly Attitude In Czernin Peace Offer Of January 24

WHOLE STRENGTH IN WAR

Hertling Proposals Confusing Says President In Charge That Demands Of Reichstag Forgotten By Berlin Premier

Washington—Before a hastily summoned joint session of congress, President Wilson, on February 11, drove in place what many of his hearers regarded as the most powerful wedge yet employed to split the Austro-German alliance and to separate the people of Germany itself from the military masters who rule them.

Once more the president set in place the cornerstones upon which America demands peace of the world shall be rebuilded. The 14 particularized terms which he laid down in his address of January 8, he assembled this time under the four following principles:

"First, that each part of the final settlement must be based upon the essential justice of that particular case and upon such adjustments as are most likely to bring a settlement that will be permanent.

"Second, that peoples and provinces are not to be bartered about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were mere chattels and pawns in a game, even the great game, now forever discredited, of the balance of power; but that,

"Third, every territorial settlement involved in this war must be made in the interest and for the benefit of the populations concerned, and not as a part of any mere adjustment or compromise of claims amongst rival states; and,

"Fourth, that all well defined national aspirations shall be accorded the utmost satisfaction that can be afforded them without introducing new or perpetuating old elemnts of discord and antagonism that would be likely in time to break the peace of Europe and consequently of the world."

Fight On for Just Peace.

"Until such a peace can be secured," the president declared to an audience which on floor and in galleries, stood up and cheered, "we have no choice but to go on."

In face of the toll of the transport Tuscania and the announcement that Russia has definitely quit and Ukraine has signed a separate peace with the Central powers, the president told a cheering audience that more American troops and always more would go on to France until a just peace was attained.

"We can never turn back," he declared, "from a course chosen upon principle. Our resources are in part mobilized now and we shall not pause until they are mobilized in their entirety. Our armies are rapidly going to the fighting front and will go more and more rapidly.

Whole Strength in War.

"Our whole strength will be put into this war of emancipation—emancipation from the threat and attempted mastery of selfish groups of autocratic rulers—whatever the difficulties and present partial delays. We are indomitable in our power of independent action and can in no circumstance consent to live in a world governed by intrigue and force.

"The tragical circumstance is," he declared, "that this one party in Germany is apparently willing and able to send millions of men to their death to prevent what all the world now sees to be just."

The reply of Count Czernin, the Austrian premier, to his speech of January 8, the president declared, had been "uttered in a very friendly tone." Czernin, he said, "seems to see the fundamental elements of peace with clear eyes and does not seek to obscure them.

Austria Sees American Aim.

"Seeing and conceding as he does, the essential principles involved and the necessity of candidly applying them, he naturally feels that Austria can respond to the purpose of peace as expressed by the United States with less embarressment than could Germany. He probably would have gone much farther had it not been for the embarrassments of Austria's alliances and of her dependence upon Germany."

In the speech of Count von Hertling, the German chancellor, delivered January 24, the same day that Czernin spoke, the prersident declared he could find no such basis of possible understandinig with the United States. Von Hertling he described as "very vague and very confusing."

"His discussion and acceptance of our general principles lead him to no practical conclusions. He refuses to apply them to the substantive items which must constitute the body of any final settlement. He is jealous of international action and of international counsel. It (Hertling's reply) confirms. I am sorry to say, rather than removes, the unfortunate impression made by what we had learned of the conferences at Brest-Litovsk."

World Sits in Judgment.

From this contrast between the speeches of the Austrian and German premiers, the president proceeded to hold up the striking contrast between the demand of the German chancellor that the world at large shall not concern itself with individual territorial adjustments at the close of the war and the clear-struck note of the reichstag resolutions of last July.

Declaring that "all the awakened nations of the world now sit in judgment" on the issues of the conflict, the president referred to the fact the reichstag had itself "accepted the decisions of that court" in stipulating in its resolutions that "there shall be no annexations, no contributions, no punitive damages;" that "peoples are not to be handed about from one sovereignty to another by an international conference or an understanding between rivals and antagonists;" that "national aspirations must be respected," and "peoples may now be dominated and governed only by their consent."

The speech was put forward frankly as another step in that persistent propaganda of public discussion which President Wilson started at the very outset of America's entry into the conflict. Again it was his purpose to emphasize before the world in general and the enemy peoples in particular, that the enemies of the German military rulers are battling for the highest principles of liberty and freedom.

"Self-Determination Fact."

"'Self-determination' is not a mere phrase," declared the president. "It is an imperative principle of action, which statesmen will henceforth ignore at their peril. We cannot have a general peace for the asking, or by mere arrangements of a peace conference. It cannot be pieced together out of individual understandings between powerful states. All parties to this war must join in the settlement of every issue anywhere involved in it."

At the very outset of his speech the president denied the intimation accredited to Count Czernin that the Austrian premier had been in communication with him privately before delivery of his speech or that he, President Wilson, had forehand knowledge of what the Austrian would say.

The president did not bid for direct exchanges between Washington and Vienna. Rather did he leave the way open for Austria to take the path which Czernin's speech perceived.

Applause Is Frequent.

The president was frequently interrupted by applause. Despite the shortness of the advance notice that the executive would speak, members of both branches were nearly all present for the joint session which met in the house chamber to hear him. By the time the president appeared, the galleries were packed, and crowds were clamoring at the doors in futile efforts to obtain admission.

It is understood the president's decision to deliver the address was made at his recent conference with Colonel S. M. House, who is back in Washington again, and with Secretary of State Lansing.

The entire cabinet was present on the floor and seated just below the rostrum from which the president spoke, was Earl Reading, the new British ambassador, who reached this country Saturday.

The French, Italian and Brazilian ambassadors, the Swiss, Dutch and Bulgarian ministers and the Argentine charge occupied seats in the diplomatic gallery.

BEET GROWERS WILL GET $10

Agreement Reached With Sugar Manufacturers at State Gathering.

Bay City—"The beet growers of Michigan will get $10 a ton flat for their beets this year," announced State Food Administrator Prescott, at the close of a meeting of sugar manufacturers held here on February 11.

Mr. Prescott said that every factory in the state was represented at the conference and that the manufacturers gave in to the demands of the farmers as a matter of patriotism. Thus ends a long-drawn out fight that has spread to all parts of the state where sugar beets are grown.

The farmers, maintained that when sugar sold for four and four and a half cents a pound they got but $4 to $4.50 for their beets. As the price is now double what it was then they demanded double for their beets. The attractiveness of wheat at $2 a bushel and the high price of other products made the farmer independent and hardly any contracts could be secured at a lower price.

LOANS GIVEN WAR FACTORIES

Over $150,000,000 Advanced to Small Shops By War Credits Board.

Washington—Approximately $150,000,000 has been advanced to contractors on war work by the war credits board, the war department announced Monday. This includes money for clothing, food, equipment, small ammunition and similar producton.

The advances, made under authority of congress, have stimulated production of munitions and other materials to their highest possible degree. In some cases they have prevented the closing down of plants because of inability of contractors to get money to meet the payrolls. The law permits advances not exceeding 30 per cent of the contract price for supplies, such advances to be amply secured.

The board announces that "when a concern that has a contract with the war department for supplies, has shown that it needs financial assistance and has been able to comply with the act by giving adequate security, the board has approved an advance payment and the money has been received by the contractor without delay.

Dropped Bomb Down Chimney.

Lansing—Explosives dropped down the chimney of Millstein Brothers' store and set off with a time fuse caused $3,000 damage. Enforcement of restrictions as to distribution of foodstuffs and the anger of some customer at failure to get desired articles is the only theory which the owners of the store have evolved to account for the explosion. Tracks in the snow over a shed roof at the rear of the store and up the store roof to the chimney are the only clues.

HOWARD HAND, SON OF H. E. HAND, FORMER TECUMSEH BOY, READY FOR FRANCE

Monday, Jan. 28, 1918

Dear Grandma, Aunt Fannie and all:

I received your most welcome letters Saturday and certainly was glad to hear from you. I suppose you will be surprised to hear I am here all ready to board the ship for across the ocean blue at the word go and it won't be but a very few days either. We don't do any drilling, just simply waiting that is all. I hope this will find you well and hope you don't have any more such storms as have been raging there, we had an awful rain, sleet, hail and show and wind storm in Texas about the same time, the worst they have ever experienced there. It sure was a bad one there, it had been so warm right along.

Do you know, the more I think I want to go to California and live for I think there are just as good if not better chances for a man there as in Michigan, then I got a little taste of the sunny south while in Texas and I think it is still better in California.

Well, now I'll try to tell you a little about my trip up here. We left Waco about midnight Wednesday, January 16 and arrived here Tuesday January 22, about midnight, quite a trip don't you think, and I'll bet you will be surprised when I tell you we really walked the streets of Paris, yes we certainly did but it was Paris Texas.. We fell off at several towns for hikes and exercises.

We saw some beautiful sights thru the mountains of Oklahoma and Arkansaw. We struck Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansaw, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Canada, Pennsylvania, New York and the state we are now in which I dare not tell you. Hit St. Louis, Marion Ind., I kept looking for Warsaw but didn't see it. They had some quite heavy snow and drifts in Ind. Hit Toledo, Ohio, Monroe and Detroit, Mich. just think of that and couldn't even skip up and say another "Hello" and good-bye, pretty tough wasn't it.

We were in St. Thomas Ont., Canada, saw the Niagara Falls on the Canadian side and quite a sight too, then we hit Buffalo, N. Y., where we certainly were greeted with a glad hand by the Red Cross and all. The Red Cross donated us candy, gum, cigarettes, cigars, oranges, apples, cake canned fruit post cards and almost everything a soldier could wish for. I was handed thru the windows by the Military Policetts and they certainly did look nice with their khaki suits, leather leggins, winter caps and wide leather straps running from one shoulder to the other hip and containing revolver and holder and they were so cheerful and one of them passed her name around and said if there was anything she could do for us or our families to let her know and she would be glad to do it, now I call that pretty good don't you.

We came thru the outskirts of New York city and the Harbor and there saw the statue of Liberty a huge bronze statue all lighted up and they say you can see it 13 miles out at sea.

Oh yes in the mountains thru Pennsylvania we saw some more beautiful sights and talk about coal It doesn't seem as if there had ought to be a shortage any where but I suppose most of that is used in the east. Now I dare not go any further with my trip as we are not allowed to. No one is supposed to know where we are. They don't let us go out side of camp or don't allow civilians thru except workmen. They say all mail is opened and if anything tells where we are, the mail don't go any farther so one has to be careful but the next letter you get from me I think will be from over there as our days here are short. That will be a long lonesome trip across the Atlantic as we will have no scenery to look at to pass the time away, but I suppose I will do a good job heaving to the whales, Ha! Ha.

It has been misting some this afternoon and is still at it tonight. Do you know I told Ma last fall before I went to Camp Custer that when I got my uniform on I would take her down to Tecumseh but didn't get the chance, just got home once while there but believe me if I get home I'm surely going down with her for she wanted to come so bad. I am at the Y. M. C. A. writing this, its only about two blocks from our barracks and there is something going on here every night and Sundays. Certainly a good thing for the boys and I guess we will get the same thing when we get over there, there is a piano and two victrolas, writing material games, reading etc., and it all helps I tell you. I was at Camp Custer got there Nov. 20th and left Dec. 19th and got to Waco, December 22 and left January 16th and got here January 22nd.

Well I guess this will be all for this time and when I get home again I will assure you that shortly after I will make you folks a visit. Now don't forget this address, Howard J. Hand, Co. F, 125th, U. S. Inft., American Expeditionary Forces.

Now don't get this address mixed up with the other one and write just as often as you possibly can for letters from home are certainly dearly welcomed. Good-luck and best wishes to you all, hope you all keep real well. Good-bye as ever from Howard.

War Closes Gold Cure Institute.

Northville—The famous Yarnall Gold cure, after a flourishing career for 25 years, has been closed by order of the trustee of the estate, Edward Lapham, cashier of the Lapham bank. Lack of patients, due to war conditions, and the gradual extension of the prohibition movement, are given as the reason.

RUSSIA QUITS AND DISBANDS ARMIES

STATE OF WAR WITH CENTRAL POWERS DECLARED TO BE ENDED.

NO FORMAL TREATY SIGNED

Bolsheviki Authority Unquestioned—Minor Factions Favor Continuance of Fight.

Amsterdam—Russia has declared the state of war to be at an end and has ordered the demobilization of Russian forces on all fronts, according to a dispatch received here, dated Brest-Litovsk, Sunday, February 10.

The dispatch follows:

"The president of the Russian delegation states that while Russia was desisting from signing a formal peace treaty, it declared the state of war to be ended with Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, simultaneously giving orders for complete demobilization of Russian forces on all fronts."

German newspapers dated Sunday, February 10, reported "imminent rupture of Russo-German peace negotiations" at Brest-Litovsk.

This may indicate that the bolshevik leaders, to save Russia from the threatened German invasion and in the face of what evidently amounted to an ultimatum from the central powers, ordered complete withdrawal of their country from the war.

While minor factions favor continuance of the fight, and may still give the Teutonic armies some trouble through guerrilla warfare, the bolshevik control is so overwhelming that if the Amsterdam report is true, Russia apparently is through as a factor in the conflict.

Bolshevik Authority Unquestioned.

Washington—Russia steps formally out of the war by act of the bolshekik government, which seized the reins of power in Petrograd last November, and at once opened peace negotiations with the central empires.

The authority of this government seems virutally unquestioned at present in northern Russia and the Teutonic powers already have assured the cessation of even nominal hostilities along virtually all the remainder of the original long line in the east by signinig a peace with the Ukrainia and isolating Rumania.

Marquette—A. H. Lehto was fined $50 for insulting the Red Cross.

Holland—Mr. and Mrs. Gerritt Rutgers, of Graafschap, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary February 14.

Petoskey—Plans have been completed for turning loose in the woods of northern Michigan, probably near Wolverine, several elk from the state herd on the reservation at Higgins lake.

Greenville—On account of the coal shortage the Methodist, Baptist and Congregational churches have been closed until March 1. Union services are held in the auditorium of the high school.

Ann Arbor—Martin Fitch Miner, a junior medic, sustained a ruptured liver, in a coasting accident, when the bobs ran into a telephone guy wire, cutting him across the lower chest. Miner's home is in Three Oaks.

Lansing—The eighth grade examination in reading, in all Michigan's public schools this year to be held May 9 to 10 will be on President Wilson's regular message to congress at that body's opening last December.

LLOYD GEORGE FOR FIGHT TO VICTORY

SAYS TEUTON ATTITUDE TOWARD RUSSIA SHOWS PROMISES ARE WORTHLESS.

"NO ANNEXATION," MERE TALK

Says Speeches of Both German and Austrian Ministers Fail to Show Real Aims.

London—The war must go on, Premier Lloyd George said in an address to the house of commons Wednesday.

Germany's action regarding Russia, the premier pointed out proved that her declaration regarding no annexations had no real meaning. No answer had been given regarding Belgium that could be regarded as satisfactory, he declared.

No answer had been given regarding Poland or France, with her legitimate claims for restoration of her lost provinces; not a word had been said about the men of the Italian race now under the Austrian yoke.

Until there was some better proof than had been provided in any of the speeches by the Austrians and German ministers, that the Central Powers were prepared to consider the aims and ideals for which the Allies were fighting, said Mr. Lloyd George, it would be the nation's regrettable duty to go on and make preparations necessary in order to establish international right.

The premier requested the house not to press the government regarding arrangements made for countering the coming blow of the Germans.

On the decisions of the supreme war council, the premier reminded the house, depended millions of gallant lives, the honor and safety of the country, and the war aims on which the future of the world was dependent. If information in this particular were to be given the enemy, he would prefer that the responsibility be placed upon other shoulders.

The change in the military situation brought about the sending of German troops from the east to the west was a factor which must be considered, the premier said, and it was essential that the whole strength of the Allied army of France, Great Britain, America and Italy may be available for the point where the blow would come.

Flint—When he called at police headquarters to register as a German allen, Will Korn ventured the opinion the Kaiser is crazy. Korn says five of his brothers in the same regiment of the German army, fell at Liege, in one engagement. Another fell in a later battle, while the seventh is also in the German army.

Marshall—After neighbors failed to see smoke from the chimney of Mrs. [illegible] Burgomas' home for three days they summoned Sheriff Mallory, as it was feared the woman was dead when there was no response to raps on the door. The officer forced an entrance and found Mrs. Burgomas in bed to keep warm as she had no fuel.

Ann Arbor—Colonel A. C. Pack, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth infantry, in training at Waco, Texas, has returned home after an ineffectual effort on his part to persuade the war department officials to send him to France with his division, or at least, to retain him for service in this country. He was pronounced physically unfit for active duty by army physicians.

WEST TO SUPPLY NEEDED SULPHUR

Comes From Gases Evolved in Smelting of Zinc.

NO NEW PROCESS NECESSARY

Development of Large Zinc Fields Recently Discovered, Will Insure Supply of Sulphur for Sulphuric Acid That Will More Than Meet the Demands in the United States During the War.

Eastern manufacturers will have to turn to Kansas City and the middle West for their supply of sulphuric acid during the war. Prof. Erasmus Haworth, dean of the Mining school, has made a survey of reports of producers in various portions of the country, and finds that the West will soon be depended upon entirely for the supply of sulphur and sulphuric acid.

The main supply of this acid will come from the zinc district around Baxter Springs, Kan., and Miami, Okla., and in part around the Joplin (Mo.) zinc district. The Joplin district was always known as one of the largest zinc fields in America, but the discovery of the field around Baxter Springs, the extent of which is unknown, makes it the largest in the world. With this field being properly developed the output of zinc will be enormous, and as this zinc is smelted the sulphur can be collected from the gases, making a supply of sulphur for sulphuric acid that will more than meet the demands in the United States during the war.

No New Process Necessary.

At the present time only about 10 per cent of the sulphur is saved at these smelters. To save the entire supply no new process or invention is necessary, as the process has been in use in some places for 35 years. The United Zinc and Chemical company of Kansas is already one of the largest sulphuric acid producers in the Missouri valley. This company uses the ores in the Joplin district. With the eastern concerns closed on account of the high cost of transporting minerals to the East, the western firms will enlarge their smelters and amply supply the entire United States, Professor Haworth points out.

The question of adequate sulphuric acid supply came before the chemists of the country at the recent convention of the American Institute of Mining Engineers in St. Louis. The eastern companies reported that the United States was threatened with a shortage of sulphuric acid, since the supply of pyrite, which had been imported, was cut off. Geologists in the West and South are now asking the eastern chemists and manufacturing companies to turn to the West for the supply. Sulphur is being mined in Louisiana and Texas in vast quantities now as fast as the market will consume it. Near the mouth of the Brazos river, in Texas, sulphur is in high piles awaiting transportation.

POET DECORATED MANY TIMES FOR BRAVERY

Gabriel D'Annunzio, eminent poet, author and playwright, has won great distinction as a member of the Italian aviation corps. He has been cited for bravery several times and has frequently inspired the Italian army to greater efforts by his valor. Recently he was given the military cross by King George of Great Britain and a silver medal by the king of Montenegro. D'Annunzio entered the service as a lieutenant, but was promoted rapidly. He lost the sight of one eye in an airplane accident last year.

FRENCH GIRLS WORK AS 'CHIMNEY SWEEPS'

Pays Better Than Dressmaking—When Season Ends They'll Take Up Whitewashing.

Chimney sweeping has been taken up in Paris by two girls—Mlle. Cecile Sevestre, aged eighteen, and Mlle. Germaine Fleury, seventeen.

Asked why they had undertaken it, Germaine explained:

"We both worked in the same dressmaker's shop. The war obliged the directress herself to find work elsewhere, and consequently we had to do the same. My father is a chimney sweeper but men have all been mobilized and we offered to help him.

"Our customers are so surprised to see us and also so pleased with our work that we never leave a job without getting a good tip. Cecile has a fixed salary of seven francs a day and she usually gets four francs extra in tips. In the dressmaking trade she got three francs a day.

"Soot easily comes off. We have only to take a bath and dress to go to a theater if we feel like it. When our work is done no one can tell we are chimney sweeps. At first we felt the effects of climbing and jumping about on roofs, but now we're used to it and enjoy it.

"Next spring, when the chimney sweeping season is over we shall take to whitewashing. Go from black to white, see?"

MARRY THE SOLDIER

"Take Home a Soldier" Movement Responsible for Double Wedding.

Who started the "Take-Home-a-Soldier" movement?

Sergt. Clarence E. War and James E. Dozier of Company C, Balloon division, Signal corps, at Fort Omaha, accuse D. Cupid.

Last January they were invited to eat Sunday dinner at a home near the fort.

There they met Miss Thelma Fancher and Miss Clara Palmer, both of Fremont, Neb.

Miss Palmer and Miss Fancher appeared at the marriage license clerk's office on important business the other day. The same night, Sergeants Dozier and War asked for a leave of absence.

A minister performed the ceremonies and the newlyweds went to a show. Then the husbands had to return to their posts at Fort Omaha and the girls went back to Fremont.

"They're coming back when we get a longer leave of absence," declares Sergeant War, hopefully.

SPAIN KEEPS ITS OLIVE OIL

Recent Royal Decree Forbids Export of This Product.

A recent royal decree forbids exports from Spain of olive oil, of which large quantities formerly were shipped both directly and via France and Italy to the United States and other foreign markets from Barcelona and Seville. In southern Spain and in Catalonia the olive oil industry has been an important source of revenue to the growers, who exported to foreign refineries, whence the oil was often shipped to the United States as of really non-Spanish production. Recently the direct exports from Spain to the United States have increased considerably.

WOMAN NEAR DEATH

Hair Caught in Electric Wringer and Head Pulled Up to Rollers.

Mrs. Allen Weir, who lives west of Evansville, Ind., had a narrow escape from death when her hair was caught in an electric wringer.

Her hair was hanging loose and she had a scarf about her neck, when the scarf and hair were caught in the wringer. Her body was pulled up to the rollers. The obstruction threw a belt. Her husband found her in a short time, choking and unconscious. He obtained a pair of scissors and released her by cutting off her hair and the scarf. Mrs. Weir will recover.

PLAN MUSCLE RE-EDUCATION

Medical School Adds Course for Aid of Maimed Soldiers.

Re-education of muscles, a new branch of medical science developed by the war, will be added to the course at Hahnemann Medical college of Philadelphia. In explaining the idea, which has been tested in England and Canada, Professor Baker said when a man loses his right arm the muscles of the left arm are at first practically useless. Their adaptation to new uses can be greatly expedited by special training.

Georgia Needs Salt.

After hundreds of farmers in Georgia had killed hogs and prepared to cure the meat, they discovered that salt in sufficient quantities could not be readily secured for the process. It was the first time since the Civil war, when the salt supply of Georgia was shut off by the Yankee blockade, that there has been a shortage of salt.

Bunny to Do His Bit.

Kansas negroes, who are fortunate enough to go against the Boches will all have the famous darky charm, the left hind foot of a rabbit, to keep him safe from the Teuton bullets. K. C. (Kroon) Beck, well-known Kansas naturalist and "rabbit king" of Kansas, has agreed to furnish every negro drafted man in the state a rabbit foot.

Declares Fish Sunburnt.

A patient angler was fishing from a jetty at a seaside resort, and two visitors were watching him. Most of the fish caught were flat fish, and the two watchers began to argue why the fish were brown on one side and white on the other. One suggested that the fish were originally all white, but that, sleeping on their backs in the mud, they had become so soiled that it wouldn't wash off.

This was so ridiculed by the other man that, angrily, he bet any amount that his theory was correct.

Upon the case being put to the angler, he remarked: "You are entirely wrong. The real cause of one side being brown is that the fish have been swimming so long with their backs uppermost that they have got sunburnt!"

The Idle Rich.

"Sherman was right in his famous remark about war."

"Goodness me, I should say he was. Just look at my tie. It's at least two inches shorter this year than last, all because of this horrid war."

WAR LEAVES MAN SIGHTLESS AND ARMLESS

Another Hero Brings to Victim Priceless Reward.

ROMANCE OF THE TRENCHES

Village Belle on Hearing of the Maiming of Farmer Boy Acquaintance Offers to Marry Him—Care of Sightless and Armless Husband Splendid Example of the Spirit of the Women of France.

A "Metro" train pulled into the Alma station on the Champs Elysees line. It was nearly six o'clock and every seat was taken and the aisles were crowded. The crowd, as in the New York subway during rush hours, packed itself tightly around the side doors of the cars.

A slender, fair-haired, well-dressed girl—not more than twenty years old—managed to burst through the knot of officers, fashionably gowned women and civilians who were jammed at the center side door of the first-class car. Behind her trailed a man wearing the uniform of a French soldier.

She held his sleeve clutched tightly in her hand, and he followed her with fumbling steps.

No sooner had they entered than the train started, and the girl, still pulling the soldier after, edged away from the door and to the nearest seats—there are cross seats like in railway cars in the Paris underground system.

Two young women—clad in furs and silks, their blackened eyes, scarlet lips and crimsoned cheeks proclaiming them of the demi-monde, were occupying the nearest seat.

"Will you please give your place to a mutilé of the war?" said the fair-haired girl, the soldier always at her heels.

Instantly, as the crowded train stared with curious eyes, both women arose. The girl pushed her companion forward from out of the crowd and he sat down. She sat beside him.

When the soldier sat down one could understand why the girl led him, and why he stumbled uncertainly. He was sightless, and the blue powder marks still staining his cheeks and forehead showed what had blinded him.

And as he sat there one could see why the fair-haired girl had led him by the sleeve. He had no hands! Both arms had been amputated just below the elbow.

Sorrows of Their Own.

The crowd stared as crowds will stare—some curiously, some feelingly, some dispassionately, for they had undergone their own sorrows in this war, others critically as they wondered who the beautiful, fair-haired girl might be and what was the name of the soldier hero.

Nearly all had thought, when the girl entered the car with her companion, that she was an American, one of those engaged in war relief work and attached to a hospital or home for the blind, taking out a sightless man. Such sights are common in Paris; American girls and women take blinded and crippled soldiers walking in the Bois de Bologne, in the Champs Elysees, in the Tuileries gardens. And they take them to the outdoor terraces of the cafes along the grande boulevards and to theaters, too.

But the perfect French uttered by the fair-haired girl when she requested the seat for her companion indicated clearly enough she was no American. She was French, born and bred.

The soldier, a young, rugged, black-haired figure, clad in the familiar horizon-blue uniform of the French line regiments, wore the Croix de Guerre, with two palms and a star, the Medaille Militaire and the Cross of the Legion of Honor, pinned to his tunic. France has no other medals.

He sat half facing her and the girl sat half facing toward him. He nudged her with the stump of the arm nearer her and she took it under her own arm. The soldier was plainly greatly fatigued and he leaned toward her, whispering something.

Soldier and Bride.

Apparently in answer to his request, she removed the horizon-blue kepi, with the gold numerals, "107," indicating the number of his regiment, on the front, and smoothed his shock of raven black hair. When his hat was removed one could see a great V-shaped scar in the front of his scalp, where trepanning had been resorted to for a fractured skull.

The girl kept the kepi in her lap and the tired soldier leaned his head on her shoulder. His eyeless face was close to her milky white throat. Then she turned her head toward him and kissed him lightly on the cheek.

Not even the most brazenly curious dared stare for a while after that, but the kiss had shown plainly enough that the couple were married. Then it came back to most of the passengers in the car who the soldier was and who his bride was. It was only a fortnight ago that the daily newspapers told of a beautiful girl proposing to and marrying a soldier who was sightless, armless and had undergone a trepanning operation for a fractured skull.

The girl and the soldier had both been born and brought up in the same little town in Normandy. They had scarcely known one another except in school; for while he was the son of a poor farmer, she was the daughter of a shopkeeper in the town, and, moreover, she was the prettiest girl in the locality. Prosperous youths from the surrounding villages paid court to her; the farmer boy had never dared to aspire to her hand.

Then the war came, and the farmer put on his uniform, took up his rifle and went to the front. He was wounded three times, but each time was able to go back. Then, at the Aisne, in the summer of 1916, he was mutilated by a hand grenade when on a night raiding party headed for the German lines. He lay in No Man's Land for 26 hours, until the following night, when his comrades crept out to the shell hole just in front of the enemy barbed wire entanglements where he lay, and carried him back to the French lines.

Surprised the Surgeons.

He lived through it, to the surprise of the surgeons who attended him. News of his mutilation reached his home town, and a few weeks ago he received a letter from Mlle. Marguerite Lavenue, just twenty years old and the belle of the village, telling him that she had heard of his misfortune, that his duty for France was finished, but that hers had just begun, if he would consent to marry her.

Sergeant Georges Roy, himself only twenty-three, was stunned at the proposal. He could not believe it was true until she came to Paris, to the great hospital located in the Grand Palais on the Champs Elysees, and told him she meant it. They were married soon afterward in the church of St. Pierre de Chaillot, and then took a honeymoon trip to the south of France.

George Kessler, the champagne manufacturer, and Mrs. Valentine Webster, widow of an English officer killed early in the war, are carrying on relief work for blinded French, Belgian and British soldiers. And it is from their fund that Sergeant Roy and his bride went on their honeymoon. And from the same fund Mr. Kessler has purchased a home in Normandy for the blind, armless soldier and his bride. They are going down to the country in a few days.

Mr. Kessler and Mrs. Webster are going to continue to look after the couple and already Roy has been granted a pension of 1,500 francs a year. But there are 3,000 other blinded Frenchmen who must be looked after, and it takes money for them, too.

CHARGES GERMANS CRUCIFY CAPTIVES

Frightful Outrages Perpetrated on the Western Front.

DESCRIBED BY U. S. SOLDIERS

"If All America Could Hear Horrible Tales," Says an American Soldier, "There Would Be Five Million Men Training for War and Loans Would Be Oversubscribed by Billions of Dollars.

Crucifixion of Canadian and Scottish soldiers by Germans on the western front, with wholesale outrages on nuns in captured convents, are given by members of the Eleventh United States Engineer regiment in letters received in this country as the causes of a determination they express to fight to a finish and to give or take no quarter.

"If all of America could hear the horrible tales these refugees tell and see the country about us here," says one letter, "there would be five million American soldiers training for war and war loans would be oversubscribed by billions."

Makes the Blood Boil.

One of the officers of the regiment, in a letter to Robert Ridgeway of the public service commission, wrote:

"The devastated country and villages destroyed by shellfire, I suppose, must be expected. But the thing that makes one boil is the absolutely unnecessary and wanton destruction wrought by the retiring Hun. His usual wonderful and systematic methods have been applied to this destruction. Whole towns that have hardly been touched by shellfire have been completely destroyed by dynamite. We find notches cut in the few standing walls and marked with the size of the charge to be used. Evidently every building had been systematically prepared in that way, long in advance, for blowing up upon retirement.

"So homes, beautiful chateaus, garden walls, little summer houses are all blown up. Shade trees, flowering shrubs are cut down or the bark cut, so the trees will die. Cemeteries have been ransacked; graves and vaults opened; bones thrown about or in heaps on the ground. I have seen the cemeteries, that are awful sights; one body dragged half-way out of the casket; coffins broken open and the bones from several dumped into one. Evidently the boche was looking for jewelry, was simply malicious, or both.

"Those things could not be done without the knowledge and permission of the officers, and the thing is so complete that it looks as though it was all a part of an official program. I never did believe the stories we got in America of the outrages. I have to believe them now, and they are many times worse than the stories that I heard at home. Certain Canadian and Scottish battalions take no prisoners. They give and ask no quarter. The reason is that the Boche has several times crucified the Canadian and Scotch prisoners and held them above the trenches in view of their battalions. In one such case a Canadian battalion went right over the top after the Boches without orders. Very few of them have come back. A British chaplain told me that he knows personally of a Belgian convent where they found that fifty-seven out of eighty-two nuns had been violated when the Boches fell back.

Looks Like Wrathful Spite.

"I cannot understand what the mental operations or processes of the Hun can be. I cannot understand what his object can be. It must be the wrathful spite of a disappointed, degenerate mind. In fairness to our many very fine acquaintances of German birth in America I will say that the German prisoners I have seen appear to be largely a different type from the German in America. They look not of a particularly high type. Major —— does not agree with me in this. He says he can see among them the counterpart of every German he ever knew.

"The prisoners will not believe that we are American troops. They say, 'No, it is impossible. Our submarines have stopped all traffic between America and Europe.' That is the way with the German soldier, and I suppose every one in Germany is kept in ignorance of the true situation."

NURSE GETS HER REWARD

Left About $10,000 by Man She Took Care Of.

The Society of Ethical Culture of Philadelphia is given $1,000 in cash and Pittsburgh street railway stocks valued at $2,000 by the will of John A. Stevenson, retired lumber dealer of Philadelphia, and member of the Union League, whose will was probated recently.

It gives to his brother, Frank N. Stevenson of Philadelphia $10,000, and his "faithful little nurse," as she is called in the will, Ella A. Wagner of Norristown, is remembered to the extent of nearly $10,000 in cash and stock and ground rent.

Various nephews and nieces and other relatives are given about $2,000 each and the residue of his estate is to be held in trust for the benefit of his daughter, Mrs. Frank J. Alker of Norristown, with whom he lived after he was stricken with paralysis half a dozen or more years ago. The estate is valued at $50,000 and upward."

WOMEN ARE URGED TO TRAIN AS NURSES

Needs of Our Army and Navy Must Be Met to Utmost Extent.

"In the United States today is found a large proportion of the available nursing service of the world. Our allies in this war are looking to us to supplement their nursing service. If the women of America fail to realize their duty at this time the American men who have been called upon to offer their lives for their country may suffer accordingly."

This was a statement recently made by Miss Jane A. Delano, director of the American Red Cross nursing service.

"If this war goes on we shall be compelled to extract aid to the last fraction of trained nursing material available in the United States," said Miss Delano. "The men on the fighting fronts must be nursed back to health. They are relying in large measure upon the American nurses for this service; the nurses must not fail them.

"The problem confronting us is to meet to the utmost extent, with the trained nursing personnel available in the United States, the needs of our army and navy and the armies of our allies, protecting as best we may the welfare of our civilian population.

"Several thousand American nurses are now in France assigned to duty in the various branches of the military service and almost as many more are needed for our own cantonment hospitals. If we are to continue to meet the demands made upon us, the women of the country must be willing to accept equal sacrifices with the men. The public, too, must be willing to sacrifice the service of nurses who are required for military purposes.

"For many years to come, the demand for women trained for nursing, including woman welfare work and health service, will increase tremendously, and to meet this need women of ability and education can do no better than to take seriously the work of training as nurses believing that they are not only qualifying themselves for most important service on the completion of their course, but that even during the period of training they are helping to solve the nursing problems confronting us."

TO PREVENT NOXIOUS PESTS

Clemson College Bulletin Gives Plan for Destroying Weed Seeds in Barnyard Manure.

(Clemson College Bulletin.)

Barnyard manure may become badly infested with weed seeds on account of hay which contains various kinds of seed being fed to live stock. Too often the land is infested with noxious weeds from this source.

This danger may be overcome, says the agricultural extension division of Clemson college, by keeping manure in piles 6 to 10 feet high from four to six weeks. The heat and fermentation produced in such piles has been found to kill practically all the weed seed with the exception of a few on the surface of the pile. These can also be destroyed by putting the surface manure under the bottom of a new pile. By this method the farmer may safely use the manure from livery stables or such other places.

RUST WEARS OUT MACHINERY

Cost of Farm Implements Can Be Reduced by Making Every Tool Last Much Longer.

The price of farm machinery has been advancing for some time. The cost can be reduced by making every machine last longer. A large proportion of farm machinery wears out too soon because it is not given proper care and attention. More machinery is worn away every year by rust and weather than by service. The life of any machine may be lengthened by protection from weather, good lubrication, and prompt attention to repairs. Farm machinery frequently is left standing in the field throughout the winter. Housing not only protects the implements from rust but leaves them in good condition for use the following season.

Germany's propaganda work all over the world has been done in the dark through underground channels, with spied bribery, poison and murder, its manifestations were burning factories, I. W. W. revolts, blazing wheat fields, torpedoed hospital ships.

Our propaganda has been carried on through the Red Cross, long before we entered the war, we sent our doctors and nurses, our hospital units, to Belgium, France, Italy, Serbia, Russia, yes even to Germany and Austria who were using at that time America as the center of the spy system of the world.

We have made our influence felt in every belligerent country, even before we entered the war, through our messengers of mercy, Germany sent a spy and ground glass, we sent a nurse and food.

We hope much from our army, but our Red Cross has already done more than armies could have done. It showed the world where we stood and counteracted the lies told against America.

German propaganda told Italy that America, her latest ally, was indifferent to her fate. There were no American soldiers in Italy, the situation was dangerous. Our Red Cross representatives hurried from Paris to Venice, Milan, Rome, Naples, carrying the message of America's good will to a despairing land, they brought food and clothing for the terrorstriken refugees swarming from the invaded north, they proved to Italy that America had not forsaken her. The help they lent was welcome, but infinitely more valuable was the cheer the Red Cross brought. The Red Cross had done what the army could not do, the Red Cross propaganda, had undone the underground propaganda of the Hun.

Perishing, Leonard Wood, Secretary Baker, all the men who are leading the fight for America, all say that the Red Cross is as necessary as important as the army and navy itself. It does not mean the actual help we gve, alone, though that means soldiers restored to life, tuberculosis patients given their health, the children of France and Belgium made human again, it means that where the Red Cross flies its banner, the German propagandist slinks away, it means that where our doctor and nurse have passed, we have made more friends than a million victorious soldiers could win for us.

What wonder then if Germany's most venemous attacks are thrown against our Red Cross, if no slander si too base, no calumny too rank, to be used against the organization, that wins nations to our side faster than all the gold of the Kaiser can alienate the traitors who are always and everywhere, here as well as in Europe ready to sell themselves to any purchaser.

ATTENTION GIVEN TO TOOLS

But One Plow Out of Four Ever Wears Out, the Other Three Rust Out—How About Yours?

How about the farm tools you used this last season? Are they all in the shed protected from the weather? Have the polished parts been covered with grease so they won't rust? If not wouldn't this coming week be a good time to round them up and put them away? A neighbor told me Sunday that he used the same gang plow for 14 years, says a writer in an exchange. He had it in the shed when not in use. This kind of care relieves him from worrying about the high cost of steel tools for next year as none of his tools are rusting out. One plow out of four wears out—the other three rust out. Is yours the one?
